BUILDING A HOUSE IN SAMOA.

From the CENTURY.

The negotiations between the skilled and wily carpenter and the prospective Samoan house owner would amuse, but hardly meet the approval of, the business man of to-day. Under the propitiating influence of kava, the necessary presents are produced to induce the carpenter to undertake the construction of a house. It is begun at once, without any terms of agreement, and the work advances until the carpenter thinks more presents necessary, and he ceases work. Additional gifts being made, the carpenter continues the construction until he deems it necessary to demand another contribution, when he again stops work. If the contribution is not forthcoming, labor is suspended on the incompleted house, never to be undertaken for completion by another of the craft; and forever afterwards it remains unfinished and a public reproach to the good name of the unfortunate owner, who, at the time of its beginning, not knowing what may be the idea of the carpenter as to the cost of its construction, must either call upon the community for aid, which is generally freely extended, or suffer the humiliation of this unfinished monument.

PLOWING CORN.

It is not generally desirable, says Southern Cultivator, to plow corn the first time while very small. Better let the plants become stocky and able to stand a slight dirting, unless the soil has been very closely sodden and compacted by heavy rains. "Run 'round" the entire crop with two furrows. Then return and give two more furrows, and so on until the middles are entirely plowed out. A good rule in deciding what plow to use is to use the one that does most satisfactory work at the time, and that will require the fewest number of furrows to the row. In soft, mellow ground, free from much trash and old stubble, in which a sweep or heel scrape, or cultivator, will do good work, it should be employed. A double shovel, in the absence of a cultivator, will often do excellent and rapid work where a sweep would fail. By deferring the first plowing as late as may be done with safety, the intervals between the first and second workings will be shortened. Not more than two weeks should intervene between these several plowings.

The Alamo Monumental Association of Texas proposes to build in the city of San Antonio a proper monument to commemorate the great sacrifice of March 6, 1836, and to preserve undying the names and the fame of the defenders of the noted fortress. The association makes its appeal to the people of all the States of our Union for help in erecting this proposed monument and the restoration of the church of the Alamo. For thirteen days the garrison in the Alamo, of less than two hundred soldiers of the untrained and untried militia of a young republic, withstood the continued attack of a disciplined army numbering more than 4,000 men. And when the garrison was at last overwhelmed by the final assault of Santa Anna's columns, on the morning of March 6, 1836, its last man died, desperately fighting for the freedom of Texas. History states that the defenders of the Alamo killed more than 2,000 Mexicans before the last man of the garrison fell, fighting at his post.

The most violent hurricanes originate in the tropical latitudes; in the Atlantic ocean, to the north or east of the West Indian islands; and in the Pacific, in the China seas, and the neighborhood of the Phillippine islands. As the West Indian cyclones follow the course of the Gulf stream, so the typhoons of the Pacific follow the course of the great oceanic current which passes round the East Indian Archipelago, the shores of China and the Japanese islands. A more continuously rough and stormy part of the ocean does not, perhaps, exist than that in the neighborhood of the Shetland isles at the north of Scotland, where the German and Atlantic oceans meet, and where the currents are both rapid and dangerous. The most variable weather is, however, experienced off Honolulu, Sandwhich Islands.

M. Ungerer, a French scientist, believes that flowers and the perfumes distilled from them has a salutary influence on the constitution, and, indeed, may be regarded as a therapeutic agency of high value. He says that residence in a perfumed atmosphere forms a protection from pulmonary affections and arrests the development of phthisis. He adds that in the town of La Grasse, where the making of perfumes is largely carried on, phthisis is rare, thanks to the odorous vapors exhaled from the many distilleries.

"What a wonderful painter Rubens was?" remarked Merritt at the art gallery. "Yes," assented Cora. "It is said of him that he could change a laughing face into a sad one by a single stroke." "Why," spoke up little Johnnie, in disgust, "my school-teacher can do that."

JAPANESE CUSTOMS.

In Japan almost every one carries a lantern. By day and night it is dangling at his belt. It resembles a thin, flat box. Each end of the box is fastened to a sort of paper, which, lying in folds, forms, when drawn out a lantern. The Japanese usually carries also a tiny wooden box, shaped like a cylinder, to hold his candle. A small medicine chest, with half a dozen little boxes, each containing a small portion of medicine, a fan, a pipe and a short sword, all form a part of the outfit. The belt of a Japanese is, therefore, a very important part of his dress. His slippers consist of a sole with a worsted thread at the upper end, through which the great toe is thrust to keep it on the foot. His pillow is a frame-work of whalebone or some such substance, into which the back of the neck near the head fits. This is to keep his knot of hair in order, for he does not have his hair dressed every day and therefore is obliged to take care of the piece, which is greased and bound into a queue, the rest of the head being closely shaven. The rich Japanese send their children to school in inferior garments, in order that the children of the poor may not be ashamed to wear their shabby clothes.

A very valuable insulating material, as it is regarded, is described in a French journal. It is composed of one part Greek pitch and two parts burned plaster, by weight, the latter being pure gypsum raised to a high temperature and plunged into water. This mixture, when hot, is a hemogeneous viscous paste, and can be applied by a brush or cast in molds. It is amber colored, possesses the insulating properties of ebonite, and can be turned and published. A peculiar advantange it possesses is the endurance of great heat and moisture without any injury to its insulating properties.

For several years past fears have been freely expressed that the box forests of Europe are giving out, and that the engravers would suffer from the decreased supply. A new species has been discovered in South Africa, the wood of which is believed to be equal to its long-known relative, Buxus sempervirens. The new species has been named Buxus Moccowani by Hooker. One forest covering fifteen square miles exists in the Buffalo River Valley, and smaller forests have been found near the coast. It sometimes has a trunk two feet thick.

Dr. F. D. Reese, of Cortland, N. Y., writes to the Medical Record, describing the use of carbolized oil applied to the carbuncle and then covered with oakum, which had previously been saturated with the oil. Of a few cases of carbuncle treated in this way not one has run over two weeks. The disease has yielded to the carbolized oil and oakum treatment as by magic. He uses twenty per cent. solution.

An electrical fire engine, which can be tapped for service whenever wanted, is the latest invention. The advantages claimed are that it can be started at full speed; that it is much lighter than a steam fire engine of equal power; that it costs one-third less; that it is noiseless in its operation; makes no smoke, sparks nor ashes; that it is safer and easier to control, and is economical.

A team of four cows appeared in Bellevue, Idaho, not long ago, having been driven from Nebraska, a distance of 1,000 miles. They had acted as motive power for a prairie schooner, and had also furnished milk and butter for the farmer and his family en route. They were in good condition, with the exception of their feet, which needed shoes badly.

When Mrs. Nomuch read that "a man was recently killed by a barrel of saurkraut," she hastily commented, without finishing the paragraph, that "any man who made such a swine of himself as to eat a barrel of saurkraut deserved to die"—and turned to another column without learning that the man was killed by the barrel falling upon him.

In a swamp north of the town of Astor, Fla., a man lately cut a huge cypress tree, and was surprised to find therein an alligator seven feet long. The opening in the tree being not half large enough to admit the reptile, it is presumed it got in while young and subsisted on small animals that therein sought shelter.

Dean Burgeon once ended an animated sermon with "and so Jonah was lodged in the whale's belly, where my dear breathren we will leave him until we meet again next Sabbath."

WHY IS IT

The Farmers' Fertilizer Company

OF WESTMINSTER, MD.,

IS ALWAYS ON TOP?

Because only absolutely pure material is used, and the Company, besides, guarantees the same class of goods to stockholders and the trade alike.

The Company carries the largest and best assorted stock of

BONE AND CHEMICALS

In the State, outside the city of Baltimore.

Its goods are all in good drillable condition and are guaranteed to give satisfaction. The street recently opened past the Hotel Albion will relieve any objection to the railroad heretofore existing. As the company proposes to stand by its friends and customers in the future as in the past, it asks a call from the agricultural trade before purchasing elsewhere, as it means business and will not be undersold.

Special Attention will be paid to the Compounding of Private Formulas.
