"THE IRON MASK" WITH DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS AT NEW LYCEUM THEATRE

In his newest United Artists Picture, "The Iron Mask," which is coming to the New Lyceum Theatre on Friday and Saturday, May 10th and 11th, Douglas Fairbanks has surrounded himself with a company of actors who represent the aristocracy of the stage, and screen. Mr. Fairbanks, personally, selected each player because of trueness to type and character.

Dumas, himself, could not have chosen a more perfect impersonator of his seventeenth century hero than Mr. Fairbanks. Doug does not merely play D'Artagnan, the valiant musketeer. He is D'Artagnan, come to life after three hundred years, in all the vividness of his day, adventurous spirit. D'Artagnan is Mr. Fairbank's favorite of all the romantic heroes he has played in his long screen career. After making "The Three Musketeers" six years ago, he now realizes his wish to continue the adventures of the daring musketeers.

In selecting the men to play his three musketeers, Athos, Porthos and Aramis, Mr. Fairbanks chose actors of as widely different characteristics and personalities as those of the three friends whom they so perfectly portray. Leon Bary, who plays the dignified, intelligent, valorous Athos, is one of the most distinguished actors of the French stage and screen. To the role of the amorous, religious Aramis, Gino Corroda brings the fire and intensity of his Italian ancestry. Stanley J. Sandford, veteran comedian, invests Porthos with all the swaggering buffoonery Dumas gave him.

Nigel de Brulier, as the brilliant, sinister Richelieu, mght have stepped from one of the old French history books. His aquiline features and piercing eyes interpret the very spirit of the inscrutable Cardinal who ruled the destines of seventeenth century France. Lon Poff is his faithful henchman, Father Joseph, Ulrich Haupt brings to the part of de Rochefort, the wily nobleman who plotted against both his king and the Cardinal, all the subletv and finesse which that arch conspirator possessed.

Rolfe Sedan makes Louis XIII the vainglorious, pettish weakling which the historians of the seventeenth century painted. The youth and boyish spirits of William Bakewell admirably fit the part of the young Louis XIV, strong son of a weak father. Charles Stevens, who plays Planchet, the loyal servant of the brave D'Artagnan, has appeared in all of Mr. Fairbank's pictures, with the exception of two which were made while Mr. Stevens was in the army during the war. Otto Matiesen is The Conspirator who aids de Rochefort in his diabolical schemes.

Lovely Marguerite de la Motte is Constance, the little seamstress loved by D'Artagnan. Her grace and beauty well match the stalwart strength of th e musketeer. Dorothy Revier plots and murders as the scheming Milady de Winter and Vera ewis is Madame Peronne, the midwife.

—Sheriff J. Thomas Hadaway took three prisoners to the Maryland Penitentiary on Monday of this week and yesterday, Friday, took fifteen to the Maryland House of Correction. This evacuation practically empties the jail, it having been filled to capacity for several months.

All Talbot milk is now being canned at Greensboro. Last week the Queen Anne station was sending all the milk received to the Greensboro plant, and on Monday morning the Easton station started to do likewise. It was said that the Abbett Dairies had recently taken on two other stations in Pennsylvania, and for the present the supply exceeded the demand.
