THE TRANSCRIPT

IT IS NOT KNOWN what effect the hearing on the Chester River Bridge on next Wednesday will have on the State Roads Commission in finally locating the bridge but that commission has shown a desire to meet the wishes of the people of Chestertown if a unanimous decision can be reached. This however is apparently impossible and everything points to a difference of opinion being expressed at the meeting. We hope that there will be no bitterness shown and that each delegation will realize that the other is justified in its opinion and that the expressions are the result of careful consideration. The question should be decided from a standpoint of business, beauty and traffic and will require careful consideration by those capable of judging, as a mistake on any of these three points will work against the future development of Chestertown.

MEMORIAL DAY BRINGING to remembrance comes at a time in the year when the gardens and flower beds are blooming with roses and other fragrant flowers. It is well to have a yearly remembrance of our heroes, those who died to make our country free: to keep our union intact: and to aid others against aggression and cruelty. A beautiful thought it is to have selected the unknown soldiers for the country to honor. No one knows his name, his exploits are unsung, while others, have won fame by their deeds of bravery. All that is known is that he was one who was willing to die for his country and made the supreme sacrifice, and now his body lies under a pretentious tomb where a soldier keeps watch day and night. Let the remembrance of our heroes inspire us with patriotism and with efforts to help the weak and helpless and whether they lie in the south, or in the well tended cemeteries of the north, or in Flanders field where the poppies blow let us always honor Memorial day. "Lest we forget, lest we forget."
