THE FORMS OF LEAVES AND THEIR USES.

The Horticultural Times says: Even the most cursory observer of vegetable life must have been often struck with the various forms of leaves. Why they should be so variously formed does not, however, often suggest itself, though there is a reason for the special shape and texture of almost every leaf in existence. Plants, such as grasses, daffodils, and others which usually grow in clusters, have generally narrow leaves growing upright, so as not to overshadow one another. Other plants, of isolated habits, have an arrangement of foliage which secures to themselves the space of ground necessary for their development. The daisy, dandelion, or shepherd's purse—which may mostly be seen in pastures—are examples of this. A circle of broad leaves pressed against the ground, forming what is known as a rosette growth, effectually bars the approach of any other plant and keeps clear from all other roots the space of ground necessary to its own nutriment. Floating leaves, and leaves of marsh plants, are usually of simple outline, for, having few competitors, they are not liable to get into one another's light. Submerged plants have mostly leaves of narrow segments—the reason for which is not very well understood, though it is assumed by naturalists that it is for the purpose of exposing as large a surface as possible, in order to extract the minute proportion of carbonic acid dissolved in a vast bulk of water.

Leaves on the boughs of trees are often much divided, so as to fold easily, to prevent their being rent and torn by high winds, while the glossy surface of evergreens is intended to throw off rain and dew, which might freeze on them, and so cause injury to the tissues within. But the hairs on the surface of leaves are perhaps the most interesting study of all. With the aid of a microscope, the beautiful and systematic arrangement of these can be easily discerned, and their uses understood. On many plants there are glandular hairs, to catch or deter small creeping insects; on others there are hairs set so as to act as effectively against young animals as a spike palisade against obtrusive boys; on others, hairs which arrest the drops of moisture and force them down the leaf-stalk, to moisten the earth about the roots; while others are protected by a series of poisoned stings. The ordinary nettle is an example of this, and the beauty and ingenuity of its mechanism is truly wonderful. Each nettle hair is armed with a brittle and pointed siliceous cap, which breaks off in the wound; and the poison is then able to flow out through a tubular hair, from a reservoir at its base. There is scarcely a form of leaf but is specially modified by nature for some particular purpose, and the discovery of this purpose is a source of very pleasant and profitable study to young naturalists.

THE SOURCES OF BEAUTIFUL COLORS.

The American Druggist has formulated a list of the choicest colors used in the arts, as follows:

The cochineal insects furnish a great many of the very fine colors. Among them are the gorgeous carmine, the crimson, scarlet carmine, and purple lakes. The cuttlefish gives the sepia. It is the inky fluid which the fish discharges in order to render the water opaque when attacked. Indian yellow comes from the camel. Ivory chips produce the ivory black and bone black. The exquisite Prussian blue is made by fusing horses' hoofs and other refuse animal matter with impure potassium carbonate. This color was discovered accidentally. Various lakes are derived from roots, barks, and gums. Blue black comes from the charcoal of the vine stalk. Lamp black is soot from certain resinous substances. Turkey red is mud from the madder plant, which grows in Hindostan. The yellow sap of a tree of Siam produces gamboge; the natives catch the sap in cocoanut shells. Raw sienna is the natural earth from the neighborhood of Sienna, Italy. Raw umber is also an earth found near Umbria and burnt. India ink is made from burnt camphor. The Chinese are the only manufacturers of this ink, and they will not reveal the secret of its manufacture. Mastic is made from the gum of the mastic tree, which grows in the Grecian Archipelago. Bister is the soot of wood ashes. Very little real ultramarine is found in the market. It is obtained from the precious lapislazuli, and commands a fabulous price. Chinese white is zinc, scarlet is iodide of mercury, and native vermillion is from the quicksilver ore called cinnabar.

David Jones was the first settler of Baltimore, in 1682, and his name is borne by a small stream that runs through the city. In 1730 a town was laid out on the west side of this and called Baltimore, in honor of Cecil, Lord Baltimore. A town called Jonestown was laid out on the east side in 1732, and this was united with Baltimore in 1745, dropping its original name.

KEEPING AT IT.

The Christian Union says: It is a great mistake to suppose that the best work of the world is done by people of great strength and great opportunities It is unquestionably an advantage to have both these things, but neither of them is a necessity to the man who has the spirit and the pluck to achieve great results. Some of the greatest work of our time has been done by men of physical feebleness. No man has left a more distinct impression of himself on this generation than Charles Darwin, and there have been few men who have had to struggle against such prostrating ill health. Darwin was rarely able to work long at a time. He accomplished his great work by having a single aim, and putting every ounce of his force and every hour of his time into the task which he had set before him. He never scattered his energy, he never wasted an hour, and by steadily keeping at it, in spite of continual ill health and of long intervals of semi-invalidism, he did a great work, and has left the impression upon the world of a man of extraordinary energy and working capacity. Success is rarely a matter of accident, always a matter of character. The reason why so many men fail is that so few men are willing to pay the price of self-denial and hard work which success exacts.

FIVE WAYS TO STOP A COLD.

1. Bathe the feet in hot water and drink a pint of hot lemonade. Then sponge with salt water and remain in a warm room. 2. Bathe the face in very hot water every five minutes for an hour. 3. Snuff up the nostrils hot salt water every three hours. 4. Inhale ammonia or menthol. 5. Take four hours' exercise in the open air. A ten-grain dose of quinine will usually break up a cold in the beginning. Any thing that will set the blood actively in circulation will do it, whether it be drugs or the use of a bucksaw. But better than all, if your cold is inveterate or serious, consult your family physician, and at once.

The pupils of the horse's eyes are enlarged by being kept in a dark stable; he has a harness put on him and is suddenly brought out into glaring sunlight, which contracts the pupils so suddenly as to cause extreme pain. By persevering in this very foolish and injudicious, as well as cruel, practice, the nerve of the eye becomes impaired and if continued long enough loss of sight will ensue. To see how painful it is to face a bright light after having been in the dark, take a walk some dark night for a short time, till the eyes become used to the darkness, then drop suddenly into some well-lighted room, and you will scarcely be able to see for a few moments in the sudden light. You know how painful it is to yourself, then why have your horse repeatedly to bear such unnecessary pain?

The London Queen thinks that to be really a good neighbor demands the possession of many excellent qualities—tact, temper, discernment and consideration of other people's feelings. Anent intimacy, it thinks it as necessary to exercise a little tack and to try to find out when one's neighbors have most leisure and at what hours they like best to receive visitors; there are, it thinks, very few neighbors, even if intimate friends, who one cares to see every day; their society is apt to pall if one sees them too often. In fact, friendship with near neighbors, however nice and charming they may be, is best sustained by not too constant intercourse.

The discovery is reported of a deadly gas spring in Yellowstone park. It is stated that it rises through a small creek, to which it gives the appearance of boiling, although the water is quite cold, and its exhalations have killed squirrels and other small creatures. Further up the gulch the odor of gas becomes more intense, and there in addition to the carcass of a silver-tip grizzly, [redacted] carried them to the Empress Eugenie, who remarked with vivacity: "I will christen this rose for you—the Marshal Niel," and from that day General Niel was a marshal of France.

I have found by experience, say the editor of one of our exchanges, that little red ants cannot travel over wool or rag carpet. I covered my floor with coarse baize, set my sofa on that, and have not been troubled since. Cover a shelf in your closet or pantry with flannel, set whatever you wish to keep from the ants on it, and they will at once disappear. I have tried it.
