PENNSYLVANIA BOARD OF HEALTH NOTES.

Adulteration of food and medicine was a principal subject before the recent meeting, at Pittsburg, of the Pennsylvania Board of Health. It was openly declared there that the practice is increasing, the methods growing more reckless.

From the evidence adduced, it would seem that European adulterations finding their way hither are even more dangerous than our native ones. From France, according to the evidence, we have most to fear, for stringent as are its laws against the falsification of food and wine designed for sale in France, such falsification is not restricted where the commodity is intended for export.

In our own country a new danger has come from "sick" cheese. The discovery made some time ago in England that certain American concerns were sending thither cheeses made principally of cotton seed oil made quite a noise and did serious harm to legitimate cheese makers on this side of the water. Cotton seed cheese, however, is not injurious to health, its sale as the real article being only an imposition, a cheat. But now appears a new compound in the semblance of cheese which those chemists examining have declared to be dangerous.

Professor Vaughan, of Ann Arbor, Mich., as quoted in the Pittsburg meeting by Mr. Percy Smith, says: "I think it can be positively stated than any cheese which will instantly and intensely redden blue litmus paper should not be eaten." This is the test of "sick" cheese.

The poor, who buy in small quantities, suffer the most from adulterations, for, it is alleged, in them have been found the most dangerous compounding.

"A beautiful china teapot given away with five pounds of tea!"

Beware of that tea!

"A handsome engraving given away with $2 worth of groceries."

Look out for those groceries!

It is in such goods as these that go with prizes that the analyst's search is best rewarded. Mr. Smith said: "The demand of the consumer for gifts with goods is growing rapidly, as the result of a desire of the masses to get something for nothing. It has led to the appearance of handsomely labeled canned goods, such as oysters, peas, corn, etc., which, if they do not contain poison, are absolutely worthless as food. The quality of food deteriorates in proportion to the value of the gift. If you buy $50 worth of spices and receive a $50 music box with the goods, you have $50 worth of cracker meal and a wheezy music box. Whole spices cannot be ground up and sold for 5 cents or 6 cents per pound less than the unground goods cost. There is not 1 per cent. of the genuine article in the pepper of a certain Michigan manufacturer, and the way I know it is this: I put 10 pounds of the pepper in 10 pounds of sausage meat, and experts were unable to discover the presence of pepper in that meat. It is on record that pepper in Michigan has been adulterated 99 per cent.

"A Philadelphian, once a maker of spices, told me that he had a great run on a special grade of black pepper, thus composed: Red African pepper, 6 pounds; black pepper, 10 pounds; pulverized water crackers, 85 pounds."

Mr. Clifford Richardson, a United States government analyst, says: "Spices and condiments for human food are adulterated largely. Of 20 samples of ground cloves examined, only two were pure; of Cayenne pepper, 1 out of 8; and of mustard, 10 were examined, but none was pure."

Here are a few statistics of adulteration, as offered at the recent meeting, and said to be general: Ground coffee, 45 per cent.; spices, 66 per cent.; low grades of sugar, 20 per cent.; teas, 48 per cent.; sirup, 50 per cent.; cream tartar, 44 per cent.; baking powder, 44 per cent.; bread, 2 per cent.

Prof. Fresenius, of Wiesbaden, after a long series of chemical analyses, declares that an egg contains as much nourishment as a pound and an ounce of cherries, a pound and a quarter of grapes, a pound and a half of russet apples, two pounds of gooseberries, and four pounds of pears, and that 114 ponnds of grapes, 127 pounds of russet apples, 192 pounds of pears, and 327 pounds of plums are equal in nourishment to 100 pounds of potatoes.

Doors are now made of two thick paper boards molded into panels and glazed together with glue and potash, and put through a heavy rolling process. Covered with a waterproof coating, they are hung like wooden doors, and are both beautiful and serviceable.

In Maidensville, Ky., the authorities have passed an ordinance forbidding brass bands from meeting "for the purpose of learning new pieces of music within 300 feet of a dwelling house."

In a recent document put forth by the associated charities of Boston, it is stated that the four causes of poverty are drunkenness, ignorance, laziness and pride.

GOVERNMENT STATISTICS.

Some interesting statistics may be gathered, says Bradstreet's, from the last statistical abstract of the United States. It appears that the revenue of the government amounted in 1888 to $6.32 per capita of population. The expenditures of the government, not including payment of the national debt, amounted to $4.47 per capita. The national debt per capita amounted to $17.71, and the interest thereon to 65 cents. The duties collected on imports amounted to $3.47 per capita, and the internal revenue amounted to $2.07 per capita. The average ad-valorem rates of duty on all imports in 1888 amounted to 30 per cent. and the average ad valorem rates on all dutiable imports amounted to 45.63 per cent. The per capita estimates above given are based upon an estimate of a population of 60,018,000 made by the late actuary of the Treasury Department. This estimate is in all probability too low. An increase of the figure for population would of course require a slight reduction in the per capita estimates. The statistics regarding savings banks over a period of five years show a steady growth in the number of depositers and in the aggregate amount of deposits, with but a slight change in the average amount due each depositor. In 1887-88 the aggregate deposits amounted to $1,364,196,550, the number of depositors amounted to 3,838,291, and the average amount due each depositor was $355.41.

BLIND FISH.

At the Royal Institution, Professor Ray Lankester accounted for the absence of eyes in the fishes in the famous underground Kentucky caves in the following way: A great flood carries to the bottom of the Kentucky caves, some thirty miles below the surface, a number of fish, among whose numerous offspring will be some defective in sight, as some babies are born blind, or without any eyes at all. The fish who can see some faint glimmerings of light will swim away toward that light, while those will remain that cannot perceive the gleams. This with every succeeding generation would occur, the stronger in sight swimming away and the weaker remaining, and as the breeding would therefore occur between those of the worst sight, fish would be born with weaker eyes and weaker until born blind. The Professor also accounted for the white patch on the rabbits' tails. He explained that as rabbits are gregarious animals, signaling is of great advantage to them, and that the white patch so conspicuous against the darker fur of the rest of the body is of use as a signal. Hares, on the other hand, being solitary animals, do not stand in need of a signal. Hence, the tail of the hare is not conspicuous in its color.

STABLE SUGGESTIONS.

One of the most careful writers and practical stockmen says correctly that it is not surprising that in the neglected stables we find sore throat, inflamed lungs, diseased eyes, grease or scratches, farcy, mange and glanders. Nor is it wonderful that when disease appears it spreads rapidly through the whole stud, since they have all been exposed to the same kind of provoking causes. Ammonia is a pungent gas, and acts powerfully on eyes, nose and lungs. Since any affection of the wind and sight of the horse greatly damages the animal, it is a sufficient reason for extra care to secure good ventilation.

Throwing damp bedding forward under the manger defiles the feed, and the horse is compelled to breathe poisonous fumes. The bedding had better be removed from the stable entirely each morning. At least carefully remove all that is wet, and pile the remainder in the rear, rather than under the nose of the horse. Since the days of close, warm stables, pneumonia and lung troubles are increasing. Extremes of heat and cold tax the system heavily. The office of the lungs and skin is so essential in the work of cleansing the system that it cannot be interrupted without danger.

Why is a negro's skull harder and thicker than a white man's? Herodotus explained it by attributing it to the early exposure of African children to the heat of the sun; and Prof. Virchow, after his trip up the Nile, sides with the Greek historian.

Out in Coffey county, Kan., there is a man named Limburger who has petitioned the legislature to change his name for him, because his wife always bids him "cheese it" whenever he reminds her of her marital vow of obedience.

A Western lecturer has at last discovered a way of being "warmly received." He keeps the hall so cold that the people in the audience are obliged to stamp their feet to keep them from freezing.

A Wisconsin woman gave away to a tramp a coat in which there were $50. But just see how unlucky some folks are: it was all counterfeit.
