CHESTERTOWN HIGH SCHOOL

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION OF CHESTERTOWN HIGH SCHOOL PRESENTS ARGUMENTS ON SCHOOL CONDITIONS

The following is the tenth of a series of artices sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association of Chestertown High School in an attempt to answer arguments advanced against the improvement of school facilites for Chestertown High School pupils.

ARGUMENT NO. 10—THAT THE ERECTION OF A NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING WOULD PLACE A HEAVY TAX BURDEN ON THE COUNTY.

The greatest opposition to the erection of a new high school building for Chestertown High School pupils is based on the fact that the opponents feel that the erection of a new building should place a heavy six burden on the county. Regardless of whether the advocates of improved school facilities talk about a new school building adequately equipped or merely advocate a make-shift enlargement of the present building, the same argument is used by the opponents, 'the heavy tax burhen.' The answer to the 'tax-burden' argument is two-fold, first, the citation of figures for a bond issue and its relation to the tax burden, and second, a comparison of Kent County with other Maryland counties, if the bonded indebtedness for a new high school building were met by taxation.

First, let us consider actual figures on the erection of a modern high school building, basing facts on the present assessed evaluation of Kent Countp. Granting the need for a modern high school building at an approximate cost of $125,000, financed on a series bond basis with payments distributed over twenty-five years, the following figures would apply.

Assessable valuation of property in Kent County taxable at the full county rate for the year beginning June 15, 1934 ..... $16,118,375.

Amount to be paid each year on the principal of the bond issue of $125,000 running 25 years assuming that the first series would be papable at the end of the first year ..... $5,000.

Interest on principal for the first year at 5 per cent., the rate at which all school bonds have been issued in past years in Kent County $6,250

Interest for the last year $250

Average annual interest for the 25 years $3,750

Average annual interest $3,750 plus annual payment of $5000 on principal would require an average payment for the 25 year period of $8,750

Increase in tax rate for the first year on each $100 of assessable property taxable at the full county rate 7c

Increase in tax rate the 25th year on each $100 of assessable property taxable at the full county rate 3¼c

Average increase in the tax rate on each $100 of assessable property taxable at the full county rate 5½c

From the above figures it is evident that the highest amount due any one year for the retiring of bonds and meeting interest payments would be the first year, a total of $11,250, while the smallest amount would be due the last year, a total of $5,250. Over the period of 25 years the average total payment for retiring bonds and meeting interest payment would be $8,750. Opponents to the new high school building, on the basis of tax burden, will argue that the average of $8,750 for a singie year s a tax burden which the county cannot well meet. Let us examine the figures for Kent County for the past few years, based on the reports of the State Department of Education covering the years from 1930 to 1933 inclusive. School bonds outstanding for Kent County in 1930 were $35,000 while in 1933 they were $12,000. Within the three year period, as shown by the reports, the school bonded indebtedness was reduced on an average of $7,666 per year. (According to latest report the school bonded indebtedness for Kent County was reduced to $ 000 in 1934.) At the present rate of debt reduction there will not be a single dolar of school indebtedness by 1935. Granting that Kent County has been paying approximately $7,500 on school bonded indebtedness over a long period of years, the average yearly payment of $8,250, an increase of approximately $1,250 over the present average payment of $7,500, is not going to raise taxes so appreciably as to constitute a heavy tax burden. What the opponents fail to take into consideration is the fact that school bonded indebtedness has practically been eliminated and that any new bonds issued for school improvements would take the place of the bonds which the county has been paying off over a period of years, consequently the tax rate would not be increased to make school bonded indebtedness a tax burden.

Second, let us compare Kent County with other Maryland counties on the basis of indebtedness for school bonds were Kent County to bond itself for $125,000 for a new high school building. As indicated in the first article of this series, Kent County has the smallest bonded indebtedness for school purposes of any county in the State of Maryland. Furthermore, 'that at the present rate of retirement which has been consistently followed during the past four years, Kent County's entire bonded indebtedness will be wiped out with two years.' With county bonded indebtedness for other than school purposes about to be retired, and with the school bonded indebtedness reduced to $,000, which county in the State of Maryland is in a better financial position or is better able to provide for improved school facilities?

Were Kent County to issue school bonds for a total of $125,000 against the present assessed evaluation, and were the present $6000 of school indebtedness added, makng a total of $131,-00, Kent County would have $124 of assessed evaluation back of every dollar for school bonds. The average for all counties in the State of Maryland is but $59, based on the 1933 report of the State Department of Education. On a comparative basis, who is justified in saying that Kent County is mortgaging the future for schools? With a total school bonded indebtedness of $131,000, Kent County would rank 6th among all the counties in Maryland in having the 6th highest amount of assesible propertp back of every dollar of school indebtedness, leaving 17 counties in the state with less money back of each dollar bonded for school purpuoses. The five lowest counties in Maryland have but $50, $43, $38, $37, and $34 back of each dollar of assessed evaluation. Other counties in Maryland have not lost faith in education, why should Kent County?

Examination of the above facts should be convincing that Kent County in comparison with other Maryland counties is not placing an undue tax burden upon itself in issuing bonds for a new high school building. Furthermore, Kent County's school finances, due to retirement of all school bonds within the next year, are such as to justify the bonding of the county for improved school facilities without placing an undue tax burden on the county or on the individual taxpayer.

Kent County should take its place as a leader in the State of Maryland by showing evidence of its faith in enriched educational opportunities for its future citizens.

This is the concluding article of the series of articles answering arguments that have been advanced against the improvement of school facilities for Chestertown High School. Beginning in next week's issue of this paper there will appear the first of a new series of articles advancing arguments in favor of improved high school facilities for Chestertown High School pupils.
