NOW AND THEN

LOSING CARES

The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play;
Among the lowing of the herds,
The rustling of the trees,
Among the singing of the birds,
The humming of the bees.
The foolish fears of what may happen.
I cast them all away,
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new-mown hay,
Among the husking of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born.
Out in the fields with God.

—E. B. Browning

The moon is shining now. It is God's will that she should shine. No blackouts can dim her light. Calmly she looks down on earth, all torn by war and misery. It is not God's will. God has a plan for man, but man can deliberately misuse his body and his mind. He can say ,"I can do the will of God or refuse to do it, I am free." And what a mess he has made of that freedom. He is ever doing the things which prevents his carrying out God's plan for him. And so the moon looks down on a distraught world, torn and wrecked by war and famine, by hatred and strife which brings misery to all even to those who long to live in peace.

The scarcity of rubber brings hardship to all. No longer does one see the luxurious cars dashing along nor the highways filled with them. Rubber, rubber is needed everywhere and all are expected to turn in all the old rubber to help relieve the shortage. The need is for rich and poor alike. Even the President has had to sacrifice his rubber door mat and Fella, his pet dog, has had to give up his rubber rats and cats, and any other toy made from that material.

IMAGINE!

Two brawny fellows, just off a merchant marine vessel docked in New York ,sauntered onto a Hoboken-bound Cortlandt street ferryboat recently, carrying with them bags which bore labels from ports around the world.

The interested eyes of other ferry passengers followed the progress of the two as they made their way to seats. One of them pulled a magazine from his pocket—sea stories no doubt, fellow-passengers thought to themselves.

Then, as the husky mariner settled comfortably back with the periodical, those watching him got a good look at it. It was "House and Garden."—Union City (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch.

A dirty old thing is a coal-burning heater. Its dust is a curse on piano and rug. A new-fangled oil one would surely be neater—no fuel to shovel ,no ashes to lug. But now, with a war on, and Winter approaching with Blitzkriegs of blizzards direct from the Pole, and pipe lines uncertain, and U-boats encroaching—that coal-burning heater, how dear to the soul! The oldfashioned heater, the hungry old heater, the dust-covered heater that makes out with coal!

ON FASHION

I must not gain another pound
Or Nelson will not like it.
Altho' my skirts above my knees,
Next year I'll have to hike it.

My jacket does not cover
My ungirdled derriere;
But then I always was the one
To hanker for fresh air.

It's okay. Don, we'll take it;
No tears will the pillow wet.
But you called the turn when you named it
The "frozen silhouet!"
