JAPANESE BEETLES ARE ON DECREASE

The 1942 season for Japanese beetles in Kent County is practically over according to County Agent J. D. McVean. A new stragglers, may be seen until frost but the numbers will be so reduced that damage from feeding will be negligible.

In areas where adults were abundant this summer Mr. McVean said he anticipates some damage to lawns, pastures and the roots of plants this fall and next spring. The reason for this is that the females of the beetles that were flying this summer laid on an average of from 40 to 60 eggs each. These eggs which are laid in the ground, usually in grassland, hatch into white grubs that feed upon and damage the roots of plants.

In commenting upon the control work that is being conducted in Kent County by the County Agent, in cooperation with the Department of Entomology at the University of Maryland, and the Board of County Commissioners, Mr. McVean explained that the main objective of the county program is to establish disease and parasites, thus reducing the beetle to the status of an important insect. Trapping affords seasonable relief and retards the spread of the beetle somewhat.

Definite results are being obtained. Notwithstanding the fact that beetles are increasing in certain formerly lightly infested areas—a condition to be expected—there is marked improvement in conditions in the formerly heavily infested areas. Surveys and reports show that there were not nearly so many bettles in the portion of the county north of Chestertown as in former years, and damage was correspondingly less.

Mr. McVean, quoting Dr. George S. Langford, of the University of Maryland, "Improvement is being noted in many areas throughout the State. Reports show where milky disease is being used in a concentrated way beetle populations are diminishing. Areas in the State showing noticeably fewer beetles this year than last include Pocomoke City, Cecil County, the northern portion of Queen Anne's, Kent and Harford counties, the Patapsco Neck section of Baltimore, and certain sections in the metropolitan area of Prince George's County."

Mr. McVean reports that the milky disease has been established on all farms in Kent County.
