NAVY ISSUES FREE BOOKLET TO PUBLIC

Lieutenant K. B. Emmons, Officer in Charge of Navy Recruiting for the State of Maryland, announced today that Navy enlistment interest is continuing to increase as evidenced by the hundreds of requests now being received for the new Navy Booklet entitled, "What Kind of a Job Can I Get in the Navy."

This 28 page illustrated booklet is free to the public and shows how a man may find his place in this war and fight where he fits.

The Navy has a place for young men and older men too, stated Lieutenant Emmons, remarking that men between the ages of 17 and 50 are eligible for enlistment. Skilled men of all kinds are urgently needed to enlist in the Navy—to help man our rapidly expanding two-ocean fighting fleet. The Lieutenant further stated that men with trade experience may receive Petty Officer ratings with increased pay at once, while the Navy will train men that are unskilled to become a specialist in one of the 49 trades or vocations available.

Lieutenant Emmons suggests that every man of military age find out about the opportunities of Naval Service and learn if he may serve. He said there is no obligation and a man may fill out an application even taking the physical examination to determine if he is eligible for the Navy, and still not be obliged to enlist.

The Lieutenant reminds men that even though an Induction Notice under Selective Service has been received, a man may still volunteer—enlist in the Navy up to the time of his actual induction.

Williams–Young Wedding Announced

Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Wallace Williams of Brantwood Farms, Elkton, Maryland, announce the marriage of their daughter, Lois, to Lieutenant Herbert Gibbons Young, United States Marine Corps. The groom is the son of Mrs. Herbert H. Young and the late Reverend Young, of Fredericksburg, Virginia. Colonel Williams, who was an Infantry Captain serving a year and a half overseas in the World War, was commissioned on April 29, 1942, by the Governor, in the Maryland State Guard.

The wedding took place at 8 o'clock in the evening, Saturday, September 5, at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend Charles L. Atwater of Emmanuel Church in Chestertown, Maryland. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Young wore a full-train gown of heavy ivory satin with a sweetheart neckline, basque waist and long sleeves. From her heart-shaped coronet of rosepoint lace flowed a long net veil.

Miss Corinne Williams, the maid of honor and sister of the bride, wore a green dress with lace bodice and net and lace skirt. She carried a bouquet of pale rose gladiolas and blue delphinium.

The best man was Mr. James Ethridge of Williamsburg, Virginia.

The bride's maids were Miss Jean Gibbons of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Betsy Andrus of Montclair, New Jersey. Miss Gibbons wore pale yellow, and Miss Andrus wore lavender, each carrying a bouquet of rose gladiolas and blue delphinium.

Mrs. Williams' gown was of purple silk crepe with a center panel of lavender on which she wore an orchid corsage. The groom's mother wore a royal blue silk grown with silver trim, and a corsage of talisman roses.

The piano music was played by Mrs. J. Edward Cropp, sister of the groom.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Young will make their home at 1016 Princess Ann Street, Fredericksburg, Virginia. Mrs. Young is a graduate of the Baltimore Friends School and Stratford College, Danville, Virginia. Lieutenant Young is a graduate of Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland. He enlisted in the Marine Corps in February, 1942, and received his commission on August 22. He is now stationed at Quantico, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. LeSage, of Still Pond, celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary at a dinner given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Freeman at Massey, Md., on September 6. Many useful gifts were received.

Good Season Is Predicted For Oysters

With oysters in the market again, Maryland housewives don't have to worry about menus for meatless days. The season for oysters opened as usual, when September brought the R months back to the calendar. Best of all, those who are qualified to judge, say that the current season has been a particularly favorable one for oysters—no matter what it may have been for humans—and the oysters that are coming in are especially plump and luscious. You can have them according to the best Maryland tradition—raw, on the half shell, in a cocktail as an appetizer, or, steamed, stewed, fried, creamed, however you like them best, as the principal dish of the meal.

Sanitary supervision of the oyster industry is under the charge of the State Health Department. As pointed out by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the Department it is an all-the-year-round responsibility—not one for the "R" months only—which requires the closely correlated services of the Bureau of Food and Drugs, with other branches of the Department.

Inspections of the oyster-bearing waters are made by the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering; bacteriological and chemical examinations of oysters and waters, follow, in the laboratories of the Bureaus of Bacteriology and Chemistry; and the general supervision of the packing houses and commercial concerns is under the direction of the Bureau of Food and Drugs.

Because shellfish products from Maryland concerns are shipped to all parts of the country, the individual concerns must meet the Federal requirements for interstate commerce as well as the State regulations. The oyster-handling plants that meet these requirements are certified for State and interstate shipments after inspections by the Bureau of Food and Drugs. The certificates are for a single season, only, and must be renewed each year, before the season opens.

Re-inspections are made from time to time during the "R" months, and certificates are subject to cancellation for any plant which fails to comply with the regulations.

The proprietors of oyster-handling plants in the State were notified during the summer, by Mr. A. L. Sullivan, Chief o fthe Bureau of Food and Drugs, of certain requirements which must be met before the plants can be certified for the season of 1942-1943.

Certificates were granted to approximately 225 plants for the season of 1941-1942.

Bobby, Famed Hubbard Horse Dies

Bobbie, the aged horse of Wilbur R. Hubbard died a few days ago at the remarkable age of 33 years, having been born in May 1909. He was a very unusual horse, having had a most interesting and varied career.

As a young horse he was worked on a farm and driven to a carriage as well as being ridden. For a number of years he pulled a Butcher Wagon. When Mr. Hubbard bought him he was 15 years old ,which is usually considered an old age for a horse. After that time he was ridden and fox hunted as well as having been one of the best known performers in all of the local Horse Shows. In spite of the fact that he began his Horse Show career so late in life he won a total of 42 ribbons and prizes. The climax of his Show career was when he won the Touch and Out Class at the age of 25.

When Bobbie was 21 Mr. Hubbard gave him a twenty-first birthday party and invited all of the people who had any connections with him. Among them was a man who had broken and trained the horse as a boy and had taught him tricks like a circus horse. To everyone's surprise he remembered the tricks which had been taught him many years before and when given the proper signal stood up on his hind legs. When given another signal he knelt down to pray. Then followed a one horse show in which it was shown how Bob would work, and how he would change feet as a well trained saddle horse. He was then driven to a buggy to show what a stylish harness horse he made. Finally he was put over the jumps and cleared them at 4 ft. 6 inches.

The guests at the party brought him most interesting presents such as ears of corn ,oats ,a bunch of different kinds of hay tied like a bouquet of flowers with a blue ribbon, other gifts were boxes of lump sugar, a bran mash made into a mold and turned out like a birthday cake with carrots stuck in it for candles and a horse shoe wreath such as is given to the winner of the Kentucky Derby.

At the age of 31 Mr. Hubbard gave Bob another birthday party at which similar gifts were presented to the aged horse. He was such a popular horse in the Show ring that he will doubtless be long remembeerd by the many enthusiasts who applauded his performances.
