Coxswain Slagle has been spending a furlough with his mother, Mrs. Emma D. Slagle, here.

Corp. Ray Hopkins, U. S. A., son of William J. Hopkins of Kennedyville, was the driver of one of the trucks of the "Wells-Fargo Express" attached to the American Transportation Corps, overseas, which hauled more than one-half of Germany's hoarded wealth from the salt mines and buildings at Merkers, to a point well inside American territory at Frankfort.

Each truck hauling the gold was loaded with a cargo worth from $12,000,000 to $90,000,000. In addition to the gold, paper currency from many nations, including the United States, was stacked even with the top of the sideboards of the trailers. It required 48 hours to load the trucks.

In recalling his experience Corporal Hopkins said: "I never thought I would be hauling such loads as that I felt like a millionaire for a little while it was on my truck, but when the truck was unloaded after the five hours required to make the trip to Frankfort, I was broke."

Corporal Hopkinss wife, Mrs. Julia Hopkins, lives in Betterton.

Aboard a Light Cruiser at Okinawa (Delayed)—Millard L. Bryden, coxswain, USNR, wife Daisy Viola living at Rock Hall, Md., helped shoot down four Japanese planes in 10 minutes during a preinvasion bombardment of this vital enemy base.

It was just after dawn that the Japs sent out their suicide fliers. No. 1 got bursts of flak while still some distance off. No. 2 faced a heavy barrage from guns of all ships in the vicinity, and was dropped in the wake of his leader.

The third Jap, weaving and dodging, managed to begin a run toward the ship—a short run, because the withering stream of fire from the cruiser's gunners was accurate. The Jap dived out of control and crashed.

From off the starboard bow came the fourth Jap. Forward gun batteries swung into position, threw up a solid wall of antiaircraft fire. The Jap tried to change his course, but too late. He dived into the sea in flames.

The cruiser's big guns then methodically turned to the assigned task of blasting enemy positions on the island. Spotters from the Cruiser's planes noted results: demolished gun emplacements, barracks, ammunition dumps and beaches swept clear of the landing.

DEATHS

MRS. F. E. MURRAY BENSON

News was received here during the week-end of the death of Mrs. Frances E. Murray Benson at her home in Baltimore.

Mrs. Murray was well known in Chestertown and in other sections of the Eastern Shore, particularly in Methodist Church circles. She was a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. John J. Murray for many years a minister in the former Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church and the widow of the Rev. Dr. Frank T. Benson, one-time editor of the Methodist Protestant. F. Murray Benson of Baltimore, prominent Methodist layman, who was recently appointed State Parole Commissioner, is her surviving son.

Funeral services were held in Starr Methodist Church in Baltimore Monday morning, with burial in Druid Ridge Cemetery.
