Farm Notes of Local Interest

Maryland canners were certified by the Agricultural Adjustment Agency to receive subsidy on an estimatted 1945 pack over 16,000,000 cases of nine kinds of vegetables on which they promised to pay farmers the equivalent of support prices, according to a summery issued today by Joseph H. Blandford, State AAA Chairman.

Fair levels of income and employment will be the purpose of the 1946 canning certification program, according to the reports of Maryland canners and growers expressed in a recent outlook meeting. Wartime vegetable growing and processing was aimed to encourage increased production to meet expanded needs.

Tomatoes lead in volume of estimated pack for 1945 by certified canners, with 8,991,654 cases of 24 No. 2 cans to the case. Snap Beans follow with 2,730,559 cases. The sweet corn pack is estimated at 2,209,850 cases produced largely from the 36,632 contracted acres. Other vegetable packs expected are peas, 1,422,756 cases from 14,906 contracted acres; lima beans, 425,000 cases; beets 165,000 cases; spinach, 100,000 cases; carrots, 35,000 cases and asparagus, 27,000 cases. Bad weather will probably reduce the tomato pack, while sweet corn yield may run above the estimate.

One-hundred-twenty-eight canners were certified to process tomatoes, 45 for sweet corn, 32 for snap beans, 29 for peas, 5 for lima beans, 2 for beets, and one each for spinach, carrots, and asparagus.

The canning certification program has continued in its present form aimed at increased production since 1942. The 1946 program now in prospect will probably call for some acreage reductions. Maryland canners and vegetable growers suggested several means of making adjustments to peacetime markets, including voluntary enrollment of canners and growers in a subsidy program, gradual reduction of support price programs with compensating higher price to consumers, a policy of abundant production at fair prices instead of limited production, and premiums for quality in vegetables produced and packed, together with plans for export trade and full employment.

Final week of wheat crop insurance sign-ups ending September 29 is expected to boost Maryland's total acreage under protection from damage to well above the acreage under insurance in 1943, when 13 counties entered the program. This year almost all of the 23 counties of the State had qualified for wheat insurance by September 22.

A trial corn crop insurance program is now in effect in Kent County on this year's crop and a tobacco crop insurance program may be tested in Southern Maryland on the 1946 crop.

The time to get conservation materials on the soil is now, according to soils experts. This helps the crops in the ground, assures prompt returns to farmers for conservation payments, and makes the work easier than if it is left till cold weather sets in.

Making the best use of every acre is the foundation of a sound farm conservation program. Where a suitable site for a farm fishpond exists, no better use can be made of such land than to develop it for the production of an ample supply of fish for the farm family. Many of the farms in the Kent and Queen Anne's Soil Conservation Districts have suitable fishpond sites which, if properly developed and managed by farmers, would provide both pleasure and profitable returns to many of our farm people.

The life and usefulness of a farm pond depends to a large extent on how it is built and whether lands surrounding the pond are adequately protected by soil conservation measures. When slit fills a pond it becomes useless, and often the only suitable pond site on the farm ruined.

A successful fishpond will provide good fishing with in one year of stocking and, with proper care, will continue to do so year after year.

Bluegill sunfish grow rapidly if they have plenty of food. Sunfish weighing one-fourth pound can be produced in one year. The large-mouth bass will average one pound in weight within a year. Ponds should be stocked with a combination of sunfish and large-mouth bass for best results.

A good fishpond site should have a good reservoir in which to impound water, a uniform supply of water, a depth of six to eight feet and a moderately small watershed, to avoid flood problems and one that is protected so as to keep run-off water free from silt.

Anyone interested in fishponds can receive help and information from either the Kent or Queen Anne's Soil Conservation Districts.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Americans have a word for it

Bill Larkin's boy, who's back from overseas for good, was telling us about the funny customs and the different languages of European countries.

One thing he noticed is that in so many of those countries there is no word for "home," "House," yes . . . or "building." But no name that stands for what we mean when we say home.

"In spite of the fact," says Bill, "that it's the most important thing there is . . . a place where you can take your shoes off and let down your hair . . . enjoy a glass of beer before the fire and relax with folks you love!"

From where I sit, that may be an important difference between this country and some others. The conception of home as a place of tolerance and sacred loyalties—where differences of habit and opinion give way before love and understanding! Yes, we Americans have a name for it!
