Story of a River.

Over three centuries backward, and before the inquisitive De Soto had lighted his camp-fire on the banks of the Mississippi, the Spaniards had achieved two settlements in this land of the Occident—Santa Fe and St. Augustine. They had no knowledge of the country which lay between these points or its inhabitants. As to what might be the dangers and deadfalls of a journey from one place to another they were as blindly ignorant as of the history of the moon. But this ignorance affected them not, and, full of the uneasy spirit of the hour, a military party in Santa Fe resolved on an overland expedition to St. Augustine. They knew the distance, for they could figure the latitude, and longitude, and they could get the direction by the compass; but this was the sum of their knowledge.

The expedition, numbering some hundreds of men, left Santa Fe late in the summer, and, crossing the mountains at the Raton Pass, the present route of the Santa Fe railroad, they camped that winter on the present site of Trinidad. The grass was long in the valley, the game was plenty on the hills, their own stores were ample, and, sending back to Santa Fe for minstrel and glee maiden, these gentlemen of the sword, with wine, women and song got in as gay a season as they ever have had since. Those old dons were lads of spirit and possessed high hearts as well as a taste for travel. Before them to the eastward as far as the eye could sweep spread the desert unconfined. What was to be met there they knew not, but their lack of knowledge was coincident with an equal lack of care.

With the melting of the snows in the spring sunshine, their women and camp followers returned to Santa Fe. The last hand was waved good-bye, the last adieus was uttered and the explorers turned their resolute faces to the work in hand. They marched down the valley of the little muddy river, which flows as you read this through the town of Trinidad. The ones who were to return to Santa Fe watched them for miles, assisted by the glare of the sun on steel cap and harness. At last they were hidden in the willows far down the valley, and this was the last that was ever known of them.

With the last flap of the last banner it was as if they had marched out of existence and whether they sunk in rivers, perished in the drifting snows or were done to death by Indians was never told. No sign or trace of this expedition or its people were ever found. There was something so queer and mysterious in the complete disappearance of this band, something so dark in the silence of their fate, that the superstitious Spaniard made the sign of the holy cross when he recalled it. With that effort at commemoration which was the spirit of that time the little muddy torrent in whose valley the lost explorers last were seen was called El Rio de Los Animas—"The River of Lost Souls." This was the Spanish name when Sublette, Chouteau, Bent, Carson, St. Vrain and other representatives of the French Fur Company, of St. Louis, first saw it. Knowing nothing of the story, and assisted only by their inferences drawn from the name, these translated the appellation into the Purgatoire. When the jocund bull-whacker of the overland trail got to it, in his free-and-easy French he called it "the Picketwire." Every brand it ever had still sticks, and to-day you will find the little vagrant of a stream pursuing its glistening mission to the sea with as many names as a member of the British House of Lords.

No complaint is so common among the negrces as that of "palate down"—an ailment which regular practitioners do not recognize. This is speedily cured. The patient, after swallowing a large dose of salt water, seats himself upon the floor; his medical adviser searches diligently for the lock of hair growing in the centre of the crown; finding it, he gives a pull, a mighty pull, brings the palate into position, and the lock of hair often entirely out. After having once undergone this ordeal of "palit raisin'," the patient rarely has a return of the malady.

Women were designed by their gentle nature to endear domestic life to man, to make virtue lovely to children, to spread around them order and grace, and to give to society its highest polish. No attainments should be above beings whose end and aim are to accomplish purposes at once so refining and so salutary; every means should be used to invigorate by principal and culture such native excellence and grace.

Some mischievous wags one night pulled down a turner's sign and put it over a lawyer's door. In the morning it read, "All sorts of turning and twisting done here."

The Maori women in New Zealand are killing themselves in their efforts to wear corsets since they have seen them on the missionary women.

Second thoughts are the adopted children of experience.

Washington Letter.

From our regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 11, 1890.—Secretary Tracy is as anxious as anybody could possibly be that the United States should have the best armored vessels afloat, but being a careful, pains taking official he has not lost his head on account of the recent tests of armor made at Annapolis, as some other people seem to have done, therefore he proposes moving slowly and cautiously about spending the special appropriation of one million of dollars made by Congress for the purchase of nickel. The only specimen of armor that stood the test was the nickel-steel, made by a firm in France, and the Secretary has no idea of making this Government dependent upon that firm for its supply of armor plate, so he has decided to have the only two firms in this country that have the plant necessary to undertake the work—The Bethlehem Iron Works Company, of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and Carnegie, Phipps & Co., of Pittsburgh—make several plates similar to those made by the French firm. These plates when completed are to be subjected to the severest tests, and should they prove as good as the French plates the Secretary will at once enter into a contract for the manufacturing of a sufficient quanity of them to armor all of the vessels now being built for the Navy.

Mr. Tracy has no fear of any corner in the nickel market, as he has received offers enough of nickel ore from various sections of this country to make it certain that the owners of the Canadian nickel mines cannot dictate the price which the Government shall pay for this metal, and he thinks that the increased demand for nickel in this country and abroad will result in building up a new and great American industry.

Everybody is talking about the official bulletin issued by the Census Bureau giving the population of the United States as shown by the recent Census. The total number, exclusive of white persons in Indian Territory and Indians on reservations and in Alaska, is 62,480,540 and the increase over the census of 1880 is 12,324,757. The percentage of increase for the last ten years was 24.57 against a percentage of 30.80 for the ten years between 1870 and 1880. The census Bureau's bulletin in explanation of the apparent smaller percentage of increase for the last than for the preceding ten years says: "It is well known, the fact having been demonstrated by extensive and thorough investigation, that the census of 1870 was grossly deficient in the Southern States, so much so as not only to give an exagerated rate of increase of the population between 1870 and 1880 in these States, but to affect very materially the rate of increase in the country at large. These omissions were not the fault, nor were they within the control of the Census office." As in the last census, New York is the most populous State and Pennsylvania the next. Ohio and Illinois have changed places. Texas jumps from 11th to 7th, while Kentucky goes down from 8th to 11th, Minnesota goes from 26th to 20th, Nebraska from 30th to 26th, Maryland drops from 23rd to 27th; Colorado goes up from 35th to 31st; Vermont drops from 32nd to 36th; the new State of Washington strides forward from 42nd to 34th; Delaware steps backward from 38th to 42nd; Nevada from 43rd to 49th and Arizona from 44th to 48th.

Another most interesting bulletin has been issued by the Census Bureau showing the production of steel in the United States during the last ten years. During the year ending June 20, 1890, we produced 4,466,926 tons of steel against 1,145,711 tons produced in the year ending May 31, 1890, an increase of 3,321,215 tons or 290 per cent. Pennsylvania still holds her own in steel production. In 1880 she turned out 57 per cent and in 1890 62 per cent of the entire product. Illinois and Ohio are still second and third respectively, just as they were ten years ago.

FERTILIZERS

We appear again before the farming public in this our second year, greatly encouraged both in the amount of sales and from the flattering reports that we are receiving daily from all sections of the county as to the good results on last year's crops. We could produce hundreds of testimonials verifying this fact without going back over a series of years to get them; but as we have sold goods over nearly all this county, we prefer to refer you to your neighbors who have used them.

We challenge competition in analysis, drilling condition and bulkiness of our goods, as our sacks will show, and we also challenge competition in and we invite the farmer to go to the full extent of finding out the truth of this assertion. We believe that we are selling more goods than all of the factories of the county combined, and it is because of the large amount of our sales that we are able to do business on small profits.

We Make Our Own Goods

We know what we Sell,

We will give a large reward if any such insoluble matter as hoofs, horns, leather or marl, or such cheap materials as plaster, ashes or dirt of any kind can be found in them. We invite the farmer to our factory and ask that you encourage home manufacture by buying from
