Planet Mars Dying.

Professor W. H. Pickering, of Harvard College, thinks that the planet Mars is dying. For something like a year he had been devoting a great portion of his time to observations of the planet Mars. Professor Pickering used in his observation the 12 inch telescope, which is soon to be mounted at the Arequipa station of the Harvard Observatory, and he made most determined efforts to add to our knowledge of the most interesting member of the planetary system.

"It is all a hypothesis after all," he said to the New York Herald correspondent. "There is no definite proof. We know that there are great patches of white in the polar regions of the planet and that they increase in winter and diminish in summer. This fact is abundantly confirmed by photographs taken by the Harvard College astronomers at our station on Mount Wilson in southern California. On the night of the 10th of April we took an observation and on the succeeding night another one. On the second occasion we found that the white space in the southern hemisphere had increased during the 24 hours by an area nearly as large as the United States. So you see if this white appearance is due to snow there must have been a tremendous storm in southern Mars on the 10th of April."

Professor Pickering remarked in answer to a question about the northern hemisphere that the southern half of the planet was far more interesting. It is in that section that the dark places are located which are supposed to be water. The planet, in his opinion, being older than the earth as well as smaller, has passed the stage in which the earth now is and is approaching the condition of the moon—in other words, is dying. Its equatoral region is already practically a desert, and if there be any life on Mars it is in the southern hemisphere.

The appellation "canal," given by Schiaparelli to the marks upon the planet's surface is, in Professor Pickering's view, a misnomer. He succeeded this summer in seeing several of them, although it was only after a month's steady training of his eye and regulating of the power of his instruments that he was able to distinguish any. He is inclined to think that the number of these lines may have been overstated, but at all events he does not believe that they contain any water. He has failed with the spectroscope to discover any traces of water vapor in the "canals," though it would be possible to discover it if it exists. Neither does he believe that these "canals" have changed in form, as claimed.

In the course of the conversation the professor said that the general color of the planet was dark red. On one night it appeared darker than before, but not as dark red as New Jersey mud, with which he had compared it.

Professor Holden, director of the Lick Observatory, says, among other things, in a telegraph to the Herald: "I think it very important to emphasize the fact that no one knows anything whatever about the actual existence or non existence of life on the planets. The best that can be done is to inquire as to their conditions of habitability. Even here the most earnest efforts of the best observers with the best telescope have accomplished very little."

The invention of the modern form of the piano dates back to about the year 1700. The spinet, or rectangular shaped instrument, was called a virginal. It is frequently stated that this was done to compliment Elizabeth, the English "virgin queen," but this cannot be true, as it is found mentioned among the instruments of Henry VIII. It is more likely that it was so named because intended as an instrument for young ladies.

The aldermen of the great city of London are not above the consideration of trifles. Recently they spent some time discussing the odors emitted by cook shops devoted to the frying of onions. It was decided that while such establishments were distinctly objectionable to the olfactory nerve, the pungent smells produced no insanitary effect. So the fried onion left the Guildhall "without a stain on its character."

Compressed air power, originally introduced for distributing uniform time to clocks, seems to be giving great satisfaction in many industries of Paris, and new uses for it are constantly being found. Elevators are now run by it, at a saving, it is said, of 50 per cent. The compressed air is supplied also for refrigerating purposes, its expansion in properly constructed cooling-rooms causing the temperature to fall to a point far below zero.

Plaster is an excellent material for sprinkling over manure that is being mixed with urine, in order to absorb the liquids, and also serves admirably for deodorizing the stalls to a certain extent. It is not caustic, like lime, and consequently does not cause sore feet, as is sometimes the case when other deodorizers are used.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

The Tariff and the Farmer.

The Tribune will devote much space during 1891 to the Tariff as it affects the Farmer and the Mechanic.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, has been added to the Tribune's staff of Tariff writers for this purpose. He will, through the columns of The Tribune, devote himself to this topic, and will invite and answer questions upon points which perplex the American Farmer and Mechanic. He will also, so far as other duties will allow, attend Farmers' Institutes and agricultural gatherings the coming winter and spring, and expound the principles of the Tariff.

Those who desire the presence of Mr. Horr at Farmers' Institutes, etc., are invited to communicate promptly with The Tribune.

Young Men Who Wish to Succeed.

Many a man feels the lack of early direction of his energies and early inculcation of the maxims which promote the formation of character and success in after life. Every such man would gladly see the young men of to-day better guided in youth than he was. The Tribune has planned the following series of valuable articles, which will appear in this paper only:

"What shall I Do?" By S. S. Packard, President of Packard's Business College.

"Suggestions for the Boys on the Farm who are Ambitious." By the Hon. J. H. Brigham, of Delta, Ohio, Master of the National Grange.

"Education without the Help of a College." By President C. K Adams, of Cornell University.

A Continuation of "How to Win Fortune." By Andrew Carnegie, whose remarkable article of last Spring was so full of encouragement to poor men.

"Multiplicity of Paying Occupations in the United States." By the Hon. Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of the Department of Labor.

"A Talk with American Boys." By P. T. Barnum, of Bridgeport, Conn., the great American showman, temperance lecturer, traveler and writer.

"Examples in the History of our own Country. By Gen A. S. Webb, the gallant soldier of Gettysburg and Spottsylvania and College president.

"Importance of Good Manners." The views of Ward McAllister.

"A College Education good for all; what is best for those who cannot get it." By President William Pepper, University of Pennsylvania.

The Tribune will print from week to week, well-considered answers to any questions which young men or women, in any part of the country, may ask.

Vital Topics of the Day.

"Present Needs and Future Scope of American Agriculture." By the Hon. Jeremiah Rusk.

"Proper Function of the Minority in Legislation." By the Hon. Julius C. Burrows, Kalamazoo.

"Village Improvement Associations, their practicability in Rural Districts, with the story of certain Model Villages." By the Hon. B. G. Northrop, of Clinton, Conn.

"Principle in Politics and the Virtue of Courage." By the Hon. James S. Clarkson, of Iowa.

"Influences of the Labor Movement upon Human Progress." By Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

"America's Suburban and Rural Homes." By George Palisser, of New York.

"Warehouses for Farm Products." By L. L. Polk, President of the National Farmers' Alliance.

"Glaciers of the United States." By Professor Israel C. Russell, of the United States Geological Survey and explorer of Alaska.

Other Features.

During 1891 The Tribune will print a valuable series of articles, written by its own traveling correspondent, on the agriculture of the United States, with explanation of a large number of model farms.

A special correspondent, a practical farmer, is now in France, visiting the farms and farm-buildings of that thriftiest of the agricultural nations of the world. He will report upon the dairy, grain, stock and other branches of French farming in illustrated articles.

Mrs. Annie Wittenmeyer, President of the Woman's Relief Corps, will contribute a column of notes and news to The Tribune's G. A. R. page, every week.

Admirable letters of travel in the Southern States, illustrated with pictures, will be printed, describing the South as it exists to-day.

All the regular features will be continued.

The Home Circle columns will be varied by frequent illustrated articles on home decoration, fashions and other objects of intense interest to women. Written principally for people with little money.

Mrs. Bayard Taylor, the widow of Bayard Taylor, will write articles on Cookery. She is a remarkable housekeeper, with a scientific as well as practical knowledge of her subject.

Steinitz, the great chess champion of the world, will supply a column a week on the greatest and purest of all the games of the home.

Foreign letters, good stories, the news of the day, the best of market reports, book reviews and literary news, witty jokes, etc., etc.

The Tribune is printed in large type and broad columns, and is the easiest paper to read in the country.
