HI SPOTS FROM THE HI SCHOOL

The orders of the week are definitely picnics, for no less than two have occurred, with Freshmen, Sophomore, and Juniors attending. The two lower classmen selected Captain Sam's enjoyable beach near Tolchester, making the excursion on last Thursday afternoon. Following the example of success set by the Press Club, they also indulged in hotdogs, marshmellows, cake, and iced tea, althuogh the swimming end of the program was given equal significance. The previous Wednesday afternoon found the Juniors convened at Margaret Groves's home for their outing—as we might say. Not without food were they, not without water and beach. The two picnics have climaxed the three classes' activities for the year, but the Junior-Senior Prom remains still to be look-forwarded-to.

From the first and second floors of the school building, even to the grounds outside, occupants can hear the Seniors in their practice of graduation songs. Miss Bryan has been directing the students during the first of the week, but has turned assistant since Miss Russell's return on Wednesday. The latter teacher had been ill for the previous week, and it makes us happy to see her back for pre-June Week.

Thanks are unaminously extended here to Mr. L. Bates Russell for his generousity in extending complimentary tickets to all the graduating class and faculty. Mr. Russell has done this for the past few years, and it is indeed an appreciated way to extend his congratulations to the outgoing class. "Turn off the Moon", the cinamusical selected by him, was of noteworthy review, and was obviously enjoyed by every one of us.

Continuing thru this week and on thru the next one has been the half-session day, with classes held from eight in the morning till twelve noon. The regular activities period has been dropped in order that all the major subjects can be provided for. The afternoon has been used by the faculty in completing and tabulating the year's tests and marks, together with annual attendance.

The speaker for the graduation exercises at the New Lyceum Theatre on Wednesday of next week in the morning is of the G-men of Washington, D. C., head of the identification bureau. Inspector Schilder's talk to the graduates will doubtless be enlightening and interesting, different in nature of topic from speakers of the past.

Tickets are now on sale for the Alumni Banquet and the annual dance for the graduates at the Armory here. The dinner and dance will be following the Exercises, and is open to graduates and alumni members only. The speaker of the evening will be the Head of the Maryland Police Department.

The four Press Club pins, awarded to Neal Truslow, Kitty Bringman, Nellie Bexley, and John Eliason, have of late been received by the club secretary, and were awarded to the people this week. The design is a slight departure from the previous one, it being of a quill and inkwell.

That long looked forward to event known as Class Night will make its appearance at William Smith Hall on this Monday of the seventh. The entire group of seventy seniors will be active in some part of the program as the announcement of Mr. Martin and Mr. Poole, faculty sponsers, indicate. While disclosing the program cannot be made here, it is from a reliable source that I know it is one of different tense, of innumerable puns, and hilarious entertainment, with a serious note added at intervals.

The social limelight of the week falls upon two parties of the future—to occur with the innumerable events of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. that of Laura Greenwood and that of Margaret Ann Brice. Miss Greewood will entertain a group of intimate friends at her apartment after the Junior-Senior Prom, with refreshments the prime offering. Miss Brice will that same evening have approximately twenty people for a dinner preceding the dance.

Still of graduating significance are the announcements of the Wednesday Exercises which were received a week ago Friday. Ten apiece were given to each of the Seniors, with additional ones available at five cents each.

Over for some, but not for all, are the final examinations that cause such vibrant conversation between so many groups at this time of the year. Those who have finished are the Seniors, whose final marks for the year were in last Wednesday, and whose exams were completed by last May 28. Just entering the situation are the other classes who have the tests given to them the past week and also this coming one.

Of the most important tests taken by Seniors this year, in fact, during their whole young life, was the one of last Monday, May 31. It was the last intelligence test given to anyone, three being given during one's whole lifetime. From this test, the so-called "I. G.", intelligence quotient, is secured. Termed by educators the country over, as the most practical test given, the Seniors went thru them—most of us unconscious of utmost significance attached. These I. Q.'s will travel with the students from now on, to college and even into the business world, for it is one of the "always asked" questions concerning the qualities of a person.

Before concluding this week, I cannot help but comment on the current news. I must extend my heartest congratuations to both the firemen and townsmen who have so well succeeded in securing the money to build a new firehouse. I know that the less than two hundred voters that passed the bill to expend over $30,000 feel that the need a house to keep our engines and to entertain our firemen is of a much greater importance than is a new school building.

No, I do not want to jump at conclusions, and I know that there is undoubtedly a good argument for those in favor of the measure. But there is also a good argument in our favor. Few fail to realize that the present high school building cost a little over $20,000, two-thirds the cost of the building to be built for the fire-company, that a large addition to the court house was accomplished without a vote of the people, and that the W. P. A. money loaned by the government won't last forever. Few people in Chestertown realize that other communities of our same size and even smaller have a larger, better equipped, and more attractive schools than we. In fact, few people realize that to outsiders, the school and its outward appearance is what the entire town and its people are judged by.

I know that addition by me alone is going to accomplish practically nothing, and that nothing will be done until the town and county as a whole wake up to twentieth century life instead of that of the seventeenth century. I am confident that a better school, thru the addition of two wings, can be built here, without the vote of the people, and with the aid of the United States Government. In conclusion, I will say, that though a graduate, I will never lose sight of the fact of the frantic conditions present, and that I with my classmates, will do everything in our power to present and convince those currently prejudicel.

"Adobe" and Soil

A term often wrongly applied with respect to the texture of soils is "adobe," but the true use of the term "adobe" refers not to the texture of the soil but to a condition of soil structure, according to a writer in the Pacific Rural Press. Any soil that will shrink considerably on drying and break into blocks with wide cracks is an adobe. Most of the adobes have a clay texture, and they should be called "adobe clays."
