Hot Off The Griddle

ESTHER DONLAN

The method usually used in ascertaining whether jewelry is gold or brass or other yellow metal is touch it with a drop of strong nitric acid by means of a glass rod. If brass, or yellow metal alloy or gold has worn off revealing the yellow metal alloy, the drop will form copper nitrate which shows its appearance by a stain, coloring of the acid, and evolution of red gas. Gold, whether plated or if the article be solid, will produce neither of these reactions.
