BETTERTON

This community was distressed when it learned on Tuesday of the passing of Mrs. James Brice. Although she had not been well for some time her sudden demise was a blow to her family and friends. Mrs. Brice was a devoted wife, an understanding mother and an ideal teacher. She had a broad outlook and a personaliy that gave force and vitality to everything done in the school room. She was unusually talented possessing many qualities that made her popular and one of the most useful members of the communities in which she lived. Her musical talent was used for many years as the organist of the Betterton M. E. Church of which she was a member. Sympathy is extended to those who stand in the shadow of bereavement.
