Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1891.

The free coinage of silver has been committed to the tomb of oblivion, so far as the present Congress is concerned, by the Republican committee of the Republican House of Representatives, which made an unfavorable report upon the measure.

Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, has written a letter in which he says that he "does not believe any man can be elected President in '92, who is opposed to free silver coinage." Henry Watterson wrote a letter to Governor Hill, of New York, that pretty effectually settled the latter's chances for the next Presidential nomination of his party, and now Senator Blackburn strikes a deadly blow at the prospects of Mr. Cleveland.

The Advocate may have been perfectly aware of Mr. Cleveland's position on the silver question before his letter expressing his views on the subject. Everybody knew his attitude concerning it during his Presidential term, but his prolonged silence, subsequently, gave rise to a reasonable suspicion that as a Presidential candidate his opinions might have undergone a change. His open assertion to the contrary was hardly spontaneous, inasmuch as persistent efforts had to be made by the Republican press before he was brought to "speak out in meeting."

A Practical Argument.

A leading merchant in one of the principal villages of this county informed us a few days ago that he is selling the Oliver Chilled plough at a reduction of $1.50 from the price of the same implement last year. He is also informing his customers that after April 1st there will be a reduction of two cents per pound on sugars. Binder twine, about which so much was said in the Democratic newspapers, has declined 1½ to 2 cents a pound. These results are attributable to the effect of the McKinley tariff law, which the people were informed imposed a tax of 60 per cent. on everything used by farmers. Circulars to that effect were distributed over this county from the Democratic County Central Committee during the Congressional campaign last fall. Now comes the reply to these misrepresentations in the most practical form—a marked reduction in prices. Democratic ingenuity will seek in vain for any other reason than that assigned for these changes so advantageous to consumers. Readers of the SENTINEL were told at the time that under the McKinley tariff law the annual saving to the people of the country on sugars alone would be fifty millions of dollars a year. A reduction in binder twine was also predicted and the opinion expressed that there would be no general increase in the cost of manufactured products. The opinion is being daily verified by facts, such as those above stated. Many persons were deceived by the Democratic clamor and misrepresentation and permitted the election of Congressmen in 1890, in numerous instances, to go by default, and the return of an overwhelming Democratic majority to the House of Representatives. That majority was obtained by false pretences, but the country must suffer the consequence. Fortunately its power for evil is largely neutralized by a Republican President and Senate, and it is not likely that the deceptions of last year can be repeated in 1892. It is more probable indeed that the people, who are being undeceived by the "inexorable logic of facts," and such practical arguments as the decline in prices of many articles affected by the tariff law, will take summary revenge on their deceivers by an emphatic endorsement of the McKinley law and its promoters at the polls.

The New Sec'y. of the Treasury.

President Harrison has nominated and the Senate has confirmed Ex-Gov Charles Foster, of Ohio, as Secretary of the United States Treasury department to succeed the late Secretary Windom. The best sentiment of the Republican party, politically and financially, approves the selection. Secretary Foster is an able politician, but he is a great deal more than that. His administration as Governor of Ohio was an eminent financial success in consequence of his practical and ample knowledge of sound financial principles. He is the founder of an extensive business that he has conducted with eminent skill and ability. He is a large-brained, level-headed man, and it is believed will demonstrate, in the larger field to which he has been called, his ample capacity to administer the National finances. He holds sound and practical views on the silver question, and will follow in the footsteps of his immediate predecessor on that subject. Such journals as the New York Herald may sneer at him as provincial and narrow, but other newspapers of Democratic proclivities speak of him approvingly.

That the President should have had an eye to the political effect of the appointment was but natural. It is regarded as strengthening the Republican party in Ohio, although the blundering and vicious course of the Democrats since their accession to power has well-nigh destroyed all hope of a repetition of their victory of 1889, and so made it unnecessary for the Republicans to resort to any extraordinary means to achieve success in the next campaign. But in having in respect the interests of his party the National Executive did not sacrifice the public weal in the slightest degree by this selection of the leading officer of the financial department of the government. Whatever may be said of President Harrison by his critics it can never be truthfully held that he ever subordinated the general welfare of the Nation to partisan demands. He did not depart from the policy of his Administration in this respect in naming Charles Foster as the Secretary of the Treasury department.

John L. Sullivan, the brutal pugilist, undertook to browbeat a trainman on a Georgia railroad the other day, and got his eye blacked for his pains. Served him right.

Death of Senator Wilson.

U. S. Senator Ephraim K. Wilson died at his apartments in the Hamilton House, Washington, D. C., shortly after 10 o'clock, Tuesday night, after an illness of only three days. His death was caused by heart failure brought on by indigestion. He was in the 70th year of his age. His death is universally regretted. He was an upright and righteous man and thoroughly conscientious in the discharge of public and private duties. The writer recalls, with great pleasure, official correspondence with the deceased Senator, in which the latter frequently permitted the business features of the correspondence to drift into the pleasant interchange of social courtesies. His was a rare and noble character and men of all parties will unite in doing honor to his memory. The following touching note was written to the widow of the dead Senator by Mrs. Windom, who so recently suffered a similar bereavement in the death of her husband, the late Secretary Windom:

Dear Mrs. Wilson:

My daughter and I offer to you and yours such sympathy as only suffering hearts can give. May God pity and comfort us all.

Sincerely, ELLEN. T. WINDOM.

Senator Wilson's successor will be appointed by Governor Jackson, until the next meeting of the Legislature.

$3,800 in a Feather Bed.

A correspondent of the Baltimore American writing from Hanover, Pa., under date of the 21st inst., says: "There lived for many years in a queer, antiquated brick house at the southern end of Baltimore street, this place, three old maiden sisters by the name of Forney. In the little yard surrounding their residence box-trees, straw-flowers and other plants commonly seen in the gardens here a century ago grew in profusion. The sisters were seldom seen upon the streets, only going to the business portion of the town when it was time to pay their taxes or attend to some money matters at the banks. They lived a quiet mysterious sort of life, and the children for several generations past eyed with fear and wonder the two or three sleek, black cats that usually chased each other through the primly-kept garden. One by one the old ladies succumbed to the infirmities of old age and passed peacefully away, leaving Miss Susan, the youngest, to enjoy as best she could in her declining years the savings of their lifetime. Until a few weeks since she lived her usual quiet life, adding to her small possessions, and then one morning Father Time gathered her to her sisters, and the last one of Hanover's most interesting characters passed out of existence. During the appraisement of her effects on Wednesday of this week the persons preforming that duty were attracted by several peculiar-looking appendages to her feather bed, and upon opening them found $3,800 in cash, among which was a $50 United States compound interest note, issued during the late war, on which the interest had long ceased to accumulate; also, old-style greenback notes, showing that the cash had been left undisturbed for a long time. Nearly the whole horde was in United States paper money. As she had money invested in each of the banking institutions of the town, it is thought she kept this sum in reserve for possible misfortunes or financial panics."

Judge Alvey's Decree Affirmed.

The Court of Appeals on Friday of last week at Annapolis, through Judge J. M. Robinson, announced its decision in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal cases. The decision affirms in every particular the final decree of Chief Judge Richard Alvey, sitting as the Circuit Court for Washington county. The decree restores the canal to a waterway, and virtually places it in the custody of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for at least four years. The opinion in detail in the case was filed Monday morning by Judge Robinson.

Judge Alvey's original decree directs a sale of the canal. Later, on October 2, 1890, this was suspended pending the performance of certain conditions by the bondholders of 1844, which required that the trustees furnish within sixty days a bond to the State of Maryland, in the sum of $600,000, to operate the canal as a waterway. The bond was given, Miss Mary Garrett and John B. McDonald becoming the surety. The decree also required that the canal be repaired and in running order by May 1, but as the judicial proceedings and bad weather have interrupted the work, an extension of time will probably be asked for. The decree concludes that if, at the end of four years from the first of May next, it is found that the canal cannot be repaired so as to produce revenue over expenses, with which to pay the bonded indebtedness, the court reserves the power to direct the execution of the decree of sale. The bondholders of 1844, of which the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has a controlling interest, claim that they can operate the canal so as to make it pay off its bonded debt. The decision has occasioned great rejoicing along the line of the canal.

And now comes a report from Virginia of the discovery of valuable deposits of tin metal in that state, and the organization of a company with large capital to develop the mines. The existence of tin in West Virginia has long been known, and it may be that an error was made in the report referred to by the omission of the prefix to the name of the State. However that may be, the fact remains that active efforts are being made to develop a source of wealth in our own country that, but for the McKinley tariff bill, would continue in the useless condition that has existed through all the years of American Independence. That this tariff measure is stimulating and promoting such efforts creates a strong presumption of its beneficial character in relation to purely American interests.

Readers of the SENTINEL may recall a statement to the effect that a large number of Knights Templar at Chicago had agreed to lose a small portion, each, of cuticle, to be grafted on a brother Sir Knight who had been scalded. The operation was performed some weeks ago, but the Templars' sacrifice was a vain one. Their brother, Sir Knight Dickerson, died at Emergency Hospital, Chicago, on Monday last. A small portion of skin, sufficient in the aggregate to cover a foot square of the sufferer's body, was taken from the arm of each of more than 100 members of St. Bernard Commandery.

Another Mining Horror.

A terrible mining disaster occured at the Spring Hill mines, Nova Scotia, on Saturday last, which resulted in the loss of nearly six score of lives and the injury of forty or fifty of the miners. The disaster was caused by an explosion of fire damp. A singular feature of the affair was a prediction of a neighborhood prophetess, known as mother Coo, who declared that a death-dealing explosion in the mine was impending. The prediction had induced a thorough inspection of the mine by a committee of the miners and also on the part of the owners. These inspections were completed on the previous Tuesday and showed the mine to be in perfect condition, with no trace whatever of danger. Most of the miners were reassured by the result, but a few maintained that the prophetess had never made a mistake and they looked for fulfillment of the prophecy in this case. They were not mistaken. A sudden outbreak of the deadly fire damp occurred, the explosion followed and according to the latest accounts, 119 miners were killed, about 50 women made widows and nearly 160 children left fatherless.

From the Chambersburg, Pa., newspapers we gather that strong efforts are being made to re-open and continue in operation the Taylor Works at that place. A committee of the stock-holders, after examining into the affairs of the company, reported the assets as in excess of liabilities to the amount of $81,000. The sheriff's sale of the personal property, last week, aggregated about $19,000, which, it was said, was more than enough to pay the wages due the men, which were to be liquidated without delay. A movement was on foot to compromise the indebtedness of the concern on the basis of 50 cents on the dollar, and at the last reports nearly all the creditors had signed an agreement to that effect.

The veterans of Company C, Cole's Cavalry, held their annual reunion in the banquet hall of the G. A. R. building, in Gettysburg, Pa., on Saturday evening last. The following officers were elected: President, Lieutenant W. A. McIlhenny; vice-president, Silas M. Horner; secretary, Lieutenant Oscar D. Miller; treas., J. E. Wible; Theo. McAllister, S. M. Horner, O. A. Horner, Geo. Gelwicks, Geo. Eyster, J. E. Wible and C. B. Childs, executive committee, who will select the place for the next meeting.

Four of the Miners who were entombed by the flooding of the mine at Jeanesville, Pa., on the 4th inst., were found alive on Monday last, a period of 19 days and 19 hours after the disaster. They were rescued. The story of their experience sounds like a thrilling romance, and their return to the world seems almost like a literal resurrection from the dead.

The finest quality of LIMESTONE for farming purposes can be found in almost every part of the land, and a GOOD QUARRY is now open, in which there is built a kiln in active operation.

The location of this farm and its excellent producing qualities are not surpassed in Carroll county; A CROP FAILURE ON THIS LAND HAS NEVER BEEN KNOWN. It lies four miles from the nearest railroad station, and is convenient to schools, churches and markets. Purchasers should take advantage of this opportunity to obtain what is conceded to be one of the finest farms in this county.

Terms of Sale as prescribed by the Court.—One-third cash on day of sale or upon the ratification thereof, and the residue in two equal payments of one and two years, respectively, from the day of sale, with interest from the day of sale, to be secured by the notes of the purchaser or purchasers, with security to be approved of by the Trustee.

An Open Letter.

WESTMINSTER, April 10, 1890.

Mr. Jos. B. Boyle:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but temporary relief. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try your Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost instant relief, but a permanent cure. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am,

Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
