Plane At Tolchester Damaged By Fire

The cabin amphibian plane of Captain Bill Wincapaw was damaged by fire on Tuesday of this week which started after the plane landed at the bay shore resort. Captain Wincapaw had landed on the water following a flight and was taxying toward the shore when his engine cut out. He choked his motor to get it started and a backfire blew burning gasoline on the wing setting fire to the wing.

The pilot taxied the plane to the shore where Messrs. Harry Coleman and Wilson Ward quickly extinguished the blaze with fire extinguishers.

Passengers in the all metal cabin knew nothing of the fire although one passenger riding in the cockpit had to be held in his seat when he insisted on jumping overboard.

The plane is held at Tolchester pending the arrival of a new wing and Captain Wincapaw was compelled to postpone an engagement in Hartford, Connecticut where he was due to fly on the night of the fire.

Old Welsh Bridal Custom

Many wedding couples in Wales are not content with a reception lasting only an hour or two, but must have an all-night feast. The "neithior," or wedding feast, and the "ystafell" are the two popular postnuptial ceremonies. The former is held to give the couple a good start in life; the latter consists mainly of carrying the newlyweds' furniture to their new home.
