THE RECENT determination of the State Liquor Control Board to rigidly enforce the State laws as to the dispensing of liquors is certainly a step in the right direction. Too often laws are passed and the lack of enforcement does not give an opportunity to test the justification of these laws. This was proven in the days of prohibition and more recently to a lesser degree in the State law regulation sale of liquors. If all laws are rigidly enforced and the enforcement brings a universal public protest, they can be changed so as to best meet the needs of the public. The present State laws with reference to the sale of liquor are very exacting and the penalty, the loss of license to continue to do business, is sufficient to make dealers live up to the law if they realize that it will be enforced to the letter. The prohibiting of the sale to minors and those already under the influence of liquor, if rigidly enforced, will, we believe, cure much of the present ills.

RECENTLY THE State Health Trailer, manned by a group of able health officials, visited Kent County and examined 313 infants and children of pre-school age. The reports of these examinations were given to the individual parents so that health corrections can be made before the children enter school. In other words the parents are acquainted with the physical condition of their children so that corective measures may be taken at that early age which may prevent more serious effects as the child grows older. Years of experience in public health work has developed a practice of prevention rather than cure. The work deals with tracing out causes of disease and ailments and leaving the correction of these causes to the individuals or their parents. The results of these public health methods is that epidemics from serious diseases have apparently become a thing of the past. The annual toll from typhoid fever has been reduced to a minimum and the public has learned to take better care of themselves and to recognize the value of this care. It is maintained that many of the causes of death among adults can be overcome if known to exist and an annual physical examination by the family physician is strongly urged. The State, through the Health Department, is doing a good job but it can only be effective through the cooperation of the individuals themselves.

RESIDENTS OF quiet, peaceful, rural Kent County find it hard to understand the reports of metropolitan dailies with reference to W. P. A. workers being on strike in protest of having to work 130 hours a month which amounts to 30 hours a week or five hours a day for a six day week. The average Kent County farmer will work at least twice that number of hours in the course of a week with a gamble of what he might receive for his labor. The strike is apparently against work as there is apparently nothing else to protest against in view of the fact that W. P. A. labor is relief labor and is designed for the purpose of enabling men and women who cannot secure employment to receive enough weekly salary to assure food and shelter for themselves and their families. The qualifications required of a W. P. A. worker is ability to work and inability to secure employment. Wages for these workers come from public funds supplied by taxation. If they refuse to work, who cares as they alone suffer. It now remains to be seen as to what will be the outcome; will the handlers of public funds agree that thirty hours a week is too much to ask in return for the support of people in a so-called emergency. It must be remembered that wages and hours for W. P. A. employees are worked out so that these workers will take employment in industry when the opportunity affords. In settling the controversy, we hope that Federal authorities will sift out the cause of the strike, find out whether or not the discontent is not created by a few leaders who are preying on the unfortunate workers and if so, handle these leaders as they would any other individual or group who are working against the best interests of their country.

THE WAR with the insects is on with the Japanese Beetle as the outstanding aggressor. Any of the old time war slogans, urging men to enlist in the service of their country can well be revived and one may join the service without any conscientious scruples or fear of bodily injury. The only thing that is not available in this war on insects is the uniform with its brass buttons which, it is claimed is the greatest attraction for recruits in any conflict. Many people say the beetle cannot be stopped as the present known means of defense against their invasion only destroys a very small proportion of their numbers. This may be true but every gallon of beetles trapped means that many will not destroy flower and vegetable gardens, trees and farm crops and will not also produce a future generation of the insects for next year's destruction. The foundation of this great nation is credited directly to the overcoming of obstacles and not to calmly sitting down and accepting what might come. If the poverty stricken settlers who pushed their way west, cleared the ground and planted their crops had quit when the locust arrived by the millions and turned growing crops into apparent barren fields, there would have been little development in that great agricultural section. If all property owners, and renters in Kent County will erect beetle traps and destroy the entrapped insects, we believe that they will materially lessen the destruction and will at least have the satisfaction of having made a worthy effort. Some farmers are trapping gallons of the insects in their corn fields in an effort to preserve their crops. They cannot, however, succeed unless their neighbors do the same because beetles are no respectors of property lines.

THOSE WHO REMAIN
When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibility rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies within his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.
We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.
