CHURCH NOTES

RADIANT LIVING

Life's Basic PPrinciple

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth

Pastor Ridgely M. E. Church

Ridgely, Md.

Few are there who would dispute the fact that the creed of Jesus, as it relates itself to social implications, is expressed by the Golden Rule, as He states it in His Sermon on the Mount: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

It has been said that the Golden Rule is not original with Jesus. In confirmation of this claim, we are referred to the negative statement made by Confucius: "Do not do to others what you would not like done to yourself." We are told that in the Mohammedan religion, in Buddhism, as well as in the ancient Zoroastrian faith there were also admonitions akin to that given by Confucions.

It remained for Jesus however, to take these old admonitions that were negative in character and give them a Divine touch that has transformed them into a living energetic principle —the Golden Rule.

We speak of it as "the Golden Rule" because it is the basic principle upon which all true and happy living is established. To live according to the Golden Rule is to enter upon a life that is golden not only in character but in reward.

The Golden Rule is not an admonition to refrain from evil doing. On the contrary, it is a divine direction t o put into action some form of service that will be helpful to others.

The Golden Rule is love in action. It calls for the deliberate rejection from one's life of any and all expressions in action or even in thought of the spirit of ill will, of retaliation, of revenge. The Golden Rule calls for the practical application of love, even toward enemies, as illustrated by the kindness of the Good Smaaritan toward the Jew that hated him.

Take the Golden Rule of Jesus as the basic principle of your daily living. It will bring into your life the golden radiance of the joy of brotherhood!

ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

Robert Young and Ann Sothern as a respective ranch manager and a honky-tonk show-girl stranded in a Wyoming carnival town, are the chief protagonists of "Maisie," the smartly-paced, clever-dialogued and well-directed picture showing at the New Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday, July 17 and 18.

Both Young and Miss Sothern show what they can do with meaty roles and entertainment-packed situations in this story which, although placed against eye-striking and picturesgue backgrounds of the cattle country, is decidedly not a Western in the accepted sense, but is an original and highly modern story of four people placed in dramatic juxtaposition.

Young in a straight dramatic part makes a decided departure from his more familiar rib-tickling characterizations and proves himself an actor who knows his business. As the woman-hating ranch manager who through circumstantial evidence is put on trial for the murder of his boss, he gives a straightforward, convincing and sharply-engrained performance. It is an acting assignment which is at all times convincing and telling.

Miss Sothern, likewise, shows herself to be a perofrmer of more than ordinary talent, her part of the impertinent, independent, slightly rowdy but at all times sincere honky-tonk girl keying up every scene in which she appears. The girl couldn't be more lifelike and under Miss Sothern's deft interpretation wins the sympathy and approval of the audience from her first appearance to the final fadeout.

Also of conisderable aid to 'Maisie' is the work of Ruth Hussey, Ian Hunter and Cliff Edwards in the principal supporting roles, and the excellent direction of Edwin L. Marin who has kept the action and dialogue moving at a high entertainment pitch.

A grand-scale romance, born amid the turmoil of a worl dat war, moves the plot of "Hotel Imperial," Paramount's stirring new screen drama, which will have its first local showing next Wednesday and Thursday, July 19 and 20 at The Ney Lyceum Theatre. Isa Miranda, making her initial appearnce in an American picture, and Ray Milland, handsome Paramount leading man, are the stars and the partners in the romance.

So much has been written and said about Miranda during her two years of preparation for the role in "Hotel Imperial" that she is already a Hollywood celebrity, even though this is her first film on this side of the Atlantic. Filmdom expected a lot of the girl whom Gabriele d'Annunzio esctractically called "the most glamourous woman in the world," and the blonde beauty from sunny Lombardy did not dsiappoint. "Hotel Imperial" promises to give the entire nation the chance to echo Hollywood's enthusiasm.

Miranda will be seen as a fiery continental beauty, whose incomparable charms exercise an important effect on the fortunes of war, as Russia and Austria wage the battles of empire on the romantic Eastern Front. Her leading man Milland plays a dashing and heroic cavalry officer and the chief reason for her change from a woman bent upon revenge to one capable of love.

The two meet for the first time in a hotel not far from the battle lines, where Miranda has come to find the man who has betrayed her sister and Milland has come to take refuge from the Russians until he can rejoin his army.

At first thinking the handsome officer the cause of her sister's misfortune, Miranda prepares to hand him over to the authorities, but realizes her fatal error in time to plead for his life with the Russian commandmant instead! Her early enmity turns into an affection equally as violent when Milland takes a job as waiter in the hotel until he can escape.

An intensely dramatic climax is reached with the arrival of the man really guilty of the crime, a traitor who sells military secrets to the Russians while holding a commission in the Austrian army. Milland's coolheadedness and a lucky turn of events combine to give the lovers their chance to settle scores with the criminals and make their own escape at the same time.

"Hotel Imperial" required the services of a cast of experts in supporting roles, and among them are such well known players as Reginald Owen, Gene Lockhart, J. Carrol Naish and Curt Bois. As a special attraction, the picture presents the Don Cossacks male chorus.

Assassinated President McKinley

Leon Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, carried the gun beneath a handkerchief that was wrapped around his right hand. The President was holding a public reception at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, shaking hands with those who passed in the line. The secret service men were standing about, watching those in the line closely. As Czolgosz came along, they saw that his right hand was covered with a handkerchief, but they suspected nothing, thinking his hand was merely bandaged. When McKinley extended his hand to Czolgosz, the assassin fired two shots, one of which was fatal.
