WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.

W. L. W. Seabrook, - Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1891.

The Democratic party in Carroll county has a plethora of aspirants for most of the offices to be filled at the election next fall. Some of them will not be content to submit to failure and a lively time may be anticipated after the nominations.

In New York the Sugar Trust is said to be taking a hand in politics by opposing the renomination of State Senators and Assemblyman unfriendly to its interests. The people are mightier than the Trust and should guard their own interests by nominating and electing representatives hostile to the giant monopoly.

It is not generally supposed that Mr. Frank Brown is the choice of the bosses for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination this fall, but the Carroll county farmer is fighting for the honor with so much vim and energy that the party autocrats may make a virtue of necessity and not only concede him the nomination but claim to have been always for him. The important question for the people to consider, in that event, will be whether the bosses will control Mr. Brown. Maryland has had too much boss rule, by far, already.

The trip of President Harrison through the South, Southwest and California is about concluded, he having reached Springfield, Illinois, on Thursday, on his return to the capital. Those who have carefully followed the incidents reported, of this tour, and read the many speeches made by the President, must be deeply impressed with his ability to say the right thing in the right way. Discussing, briefly of course, matters of public interest, he has made no partisan utterances, but has spoken as an American and as President of the Nation. Yet he has compromised no opinion and yielded nothing of principle in these speeches, which, while always in good taste, have been bold in expression and, though impromptu, elegant in diction. It must be acknowledged that he has few superiors as a speech maker.

Those Democratic journals that make contrasts between what would have been if the Mills tariff bill had become law and what is, in fact, under the McKinley tariff, should remember how egregiously they blundered in their predictions of the effect of the latter. The packing industry, according to their prophecies, was to have been heavily handicapped by excessive increase in the cost of cans, and now cans are bought at less than last year's prices. And binder-twine—well, the soul of the average Democratic editor was vexed with visions of the enormous cost to the farmer of this article, under the McKinley law, and now the unreasonable manufacturer is satisfied with about 30 per cent. less than he got last year. And this is the way it runs throughout the whole range of articles used in the farmers' business. Instead of increasing the cost of farming implements the tendency of prices is downward in everything except farm products. But the average Democratic editor still commiserates the hard fortune of the agriculturist because he doesn't enjoy the high privileges of free-trade, and, inferentially, of course, competition in our own markets with the grain fields of Russia, India and the Argentine Republic.

Lord Salisbury Answered.

The New York Press says: Mr. Blaine's reply to Lord Salisbury's evasive offer of arbitration in regard to Behring Sea, is as able as it is adroit. It is strong, concise and to the point. There is no verbiage about it, no playing with words, none of the solemn and cumbersome cant of conventional diplomacy. The questions which the United States Government is willing to arbitrate are stated with such explicitness as to leave room for no pretense of misunderstanding on the part of Lord Salisbury.

The Secretary of State politely but decidedly corrects the British Premier's pretended misapprehension of the position of the United States in several particulars. He declares that the United States, providing the arbitrators decide against them, will pay just damages to owners of Canadian ships seized, if, in case we shall win, the seals taken by the Canadian vessels are to be paid for at the market price of sealskins. This proposition is so manifestly fair that it will be difficult for Lord Salisbury to refuse it. Mr. Blaine holds that the United States, "without recurring to its inherited and superior rights in Alaska," has "as full authority for going beyond the three mile line in case of proved necessity as Great Britain possesses." This is something which Englishmen cannot deny. And he shows conclusively that the British Parliament no later than 1889 passed a law to control the fisheries in no less than 2,700 square miles of waters off the northeastern coast of Scotland.

Alaska is as much our territory as Scotland is Great Britain's. If Parliament, unchallenged by the world, can pass and enforce laws regulating fishing over that great sea area, "why may not the United States prescribe a space around the Pribylov Islands in which similar prohibitions may be enforced?" This is a pointed question, which the British Government and its servile defendants in the Mugwump press of the United States will find it hard to answer. Mr. Blaine makes it still harder for them by proposing as the needed legislation by Congress, covering our rights in Behring Sea, a paraphrase of the act of Parliament covering the English rights claimed off the coast of Scotland.

In conclusion, Mr. Blaine shows that Russia claimed and exercised undisputed sovereignty over Alaska and that for the first nineteen years of the United States' possession of Alaska England did not question our right over the Alaska seal fisheries. He adds, trenchantly: "It is yet to be determined her the lawless intrusion of the ian vessels in 1886 and subsequent as changed the law and equity of heretofore prevailing." Ameri- atriotism will be sure that it

A Trial of Armor Plating.

An interesting trial of armor plating was recently made on the U. S. naval ordnance proving grounds at Annapolis. By the test it was discovered that the nickel-steel plate, treated by what is known as the Harvey process, offered greater resistance to the projectiles than any other armor plating known. Excellent results were anticipated, but the test proved better than the exectations of the most sanguine. The plates were made by Carnegie, Phipps & Co., of Pittsburg. Speaking of this trial a Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says: "The effect of this upon naval architecture will be of the highest importance. The thickness of armor can be materially decreased, and if the weight thus gained is to be retained for armor it can be much more widely distributed over the ship. Protective decks, without being increased in thickness, will afford a much greater degree of protection and will be able to deflect heavy projectiles that would easily pierce ordinary steel. Gun shields, without being heavier than at present, will be able to protect the gunners from many shots that at present would do great damage. If the weight gained is not to be used for more widespread armor, additional guns and more ammunition can be carried, or the coal supply can be increased and the ability of the vessel to keep the sea can be correspondingly increased. The United States is fortunate in developing such armor just at the time when the armoring of so many new ships is about to be undertaken, and if the sustained results are as good as there is reason to expect, the armored ships of this country will be far superior to any thus far built or designed abroad. According to Colonel Hope, the English ordinance expert, the United States Navy already leads the world in the manufacture of high-powered guns, and, as it is now taking the lead in the development of armor, the day is not far distant when, both in ability to inflict punishment on others and to withstand punishment themselves, the battleships of the United States will stand far ahead of those of every nation on earth."

The Nebraska Governorship.

There seems to be a good deal of misapprehension concerning the decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska in the case against James E. Boyd, who had a plurality of the votes for the Governorship of Nebraska at the election last fall. Boyd was the Democratic candidate. The Republicans alleged that he was ineligible because he is of foreign birth and unnaturalized. Governor Thayer declined, at first, to surrender the office, but Boyd was finally inaugurated and proceedings were begun to test his eligibility which have resulted in the rendition of an opinion by the Supreme Court sustaining the Republican view of the case. There is no doubt about the fact of Boyd's foreign birth, or that he has never been naturalized by any court of the country. The Democrats claim that because he resided in Nebraska when that State was a Territory and at the time of her admission into the Union his naturalization was a result of that transition. The decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska, as we understand the matter, is simply a negative of this pretension. For rendering it the court is now being subjected to the harshest sort of criticism in Democratic quarters, and judicial corruption more than hinted at. Yet the court's view of the subject looks reasonable and will probably receive the assent of most legal minds not warped by partisan bias. The case will probably be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Lynch Law in Queen Anne's.

On the 28th of February last an assault was made by a colored man on Mrs. Howard Tolson, of Kent Island, Queen Anne's county. Mrs. Tolson recognized her assailant as a negro named Asbury Green. The man was recently tried in the Criminal Court for Queen Anne's county, at Centreville, and found guilty. On Monday Judge Stump sentenced him to imprisonment in the Maryland Penitentiary for the term of twenty-one years, stopping short of imposing a capital sentence because, in his opinion, there was ground to apprehend mistaken identity. The nature of the crime fully warranted the extremest penalty of the law, but the doubt in the mind of the judge concerning the identity of the culprit was ample justification for the milder sentence imposed.

An excited mob, however, presumably of citizens of Queen Anne's county, doubtless considering themselves more capable of forming a correct judgment of the case than the officer chosen by them to preside on the bench and dispense justice, forced an entrance to the jail at Centreville, tied a rope around Green's neck and dragged him through the town to the peach orchard of Ex-Sheriff R. Hopper Smith, where they completed their work by hanging the convicted, though, in the opinion of the court, possibly innocent man, to the limb of a peach tree.

Queen Anne's county is rather notorious for lynching people. In the early sixties a colored man was hung, and after the war, a white man named James Pippin accused of murder, but acquitted, was taken from his father's premises and done to death by hanging on a tree in the woods near by.

The Green case is almost as flagrant as that of Pippin, and evinces a reckless disregard of law in Queen Anne's county that naturally leads to crime. There is something horrible in the lynching of a human being who may be innocent of the crime laid to his charge; and when, after a thorough judicial inquiry, as in this case, a court, more likely to be biased against them in favor of the accused, expresses doubt of guilt, the act of the lynchers deserves severe reprehension. Instead of saying they took the law in their own hands the truth simply is that they are violators of the law.

On Monday last a monument was unveiled at the spot designated as the centre of population of the United States according to the census of 1890. It is in the southeastern part of Indiana, twenty miles east of Columbus. It is of limestone, taken from the Bedford, Indiana, quarries, is fifteen feet in height, weighs four tons and bears the inscription: "Centre of Population, United States." This is the second monument erected for a similiar purpose. The first was in 1810, when the centre of population was twenty-three miles west of Washington, D. C.

The Chilian insurgent vessel, the Etata, or Itata, charged with a violation of the neutrality laws of the United States, surrendered to the authorities of this government in the port of San Diego, California, and subsequently quietly escaped to sea. It is understood that the U. S. Cruiser Charleston and perhaps other American war vessels are pursuing her. Various predictions are made as to the result, but there is probably no reason to apprehend any foreign complications on account of the incident.

Johnnie Renner, the six-year-old son of a Kiowa county, Kan., farmer and his eight-year old sister were playing "burying" on Monday. The girl had piled up the earth about the boy until it reached his chin, and he was tightly imbedded when a sow come along with her brood and savagely attacked the girl who ran away. The sow then turned on the boy who was unable to move, and sank her teeth in his face and skull several times. The screams of the children brought assistance, but when the boy was taken from the ground he was dead.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison, the electrican and inventor, says he will have ready for the Chicago World's Fair a combination of photography and electricity whereby a man can sit in his own parlor and see depicted upon a curtain the forms of the players in opera upon a distant stage and hear the voices of the singers. Each movement and color will be plainly reproduced. The system can be applied to prize-fights, the noise, blows, talk and everything being transmitted.

A section of Northern Michigan larger than the State of Rhode Island has been burned over, and many villages have been destroyed. It is feared some lives have been lost. Railroad trains have been abandoned. In Pennsylvania the fires have been doing great damage to the lumber and farming interests.
