AGAIN WE find Betty and Nita Lussier, of Rock Hall, breaking South Atlantic swimming records. These two girls accomplishments have not come easy due to the fact that they have no opportunity to prctice in swimming pools where competative swimming meets are held. Their swimming pool is the broad Chesapeake Bay which is practically in their back yard and it may be this type of practice develops enough additional strength to offset the lack of pool practice. Whatever may be the case, it is certainly true that these two girls have not sat idly by because they did not have every advantage at their finger tips. It is certainly an example to other young boys and girls that accomplishments are not directly dependant upon everything being served on a silver platter. it

PUBLISHED IN this issue of the Transcript are two ordinances pertaining to traffic and parking of automobiles on certain streets in Chestertown. Both of these ordinances are based on corrective measures found necessary by the Mayor and Council in order to avoid congestion and nuisances. At the time that Cross street was widened it was thought that all heavy traffic traveling beween High Street and Maple Avenue would profer to use that street and that it would relieve truck traffic from the narrow Queen and Front Streets. This, however, has not been the case and it has been found necessary to forbid truck traffic on these two last mentioned streets. Another ordinance relative to double parking in the business section of High Street is the result of considerbale difficulty found by officers in keeping traffic moving smoothly when double parking occurs in this area. Chestertown has never had the reputation of being a town to avoid for fear of traffic arrests. These two ordinances should in no way affect that reputation as officials have aparently taken, and well taken the attitutde of welcoming motorists rather than turning them away.

THIS WEEK a 32 foot front store building on High Street in Chestertown was sold for $14,100, and the price did not create any surprise among business men of this town. That amount of money will buy 200 acres of some of the best farm land in the county including also a comfortable home and outbuildings. It is an example of the comparison in the business of farming and merchandising. Recent offerings of inland farm property have failed to create enough interest to consumate a sale. Millions of dollars have been spent in an effort to bring about a profit in farming to compare favorably with that of other business activities. The result of this expenditure has resulted in enabling farmers to carry on but little has been accomplished toward establishing farming as a business whereby the sale of commodities are far enough above cost to net a justifiable profit. A farmer is both a producer and a merchant and even with this combination the profits from both endeavors are so low that breaking even is the only hope of many. Many causes and corrective measures have been suggested and tried but if the average farmer could get a profit for his produce in proportion to the profit made by those business interests who process this product for the ultimate consumption, farming could be placed on its own footing, and would cease to be a great national expense.

THE MANY friends here of Mr. Clarence W. Perkins were distressed to hear of his death this week. It is not unusual for a young man from Chestertown to make a name for himself in a nearby city but it is more unusual for one to maintain interest and friends in their home town as the years pass on. This is true of Mr Perkins. In spite of the fact that he left Chestertown 47 years ago he maintained an active interest in his friends in Chestertown and in his Alma Mater, Wasihngton College. We reprint the following editorial which appeared in the Evening Sun on August 8th which shows the high esteem with which he was held in his home city and the State:

"Clarence W. Perkins, whose death occurred yesterday, held a number of public offices, but his interest in politics and in civic affairs was by no means limited to the advancement of his own career. He gave a great deal of his time and of his abilities to the public service with no thought of either glory or remuneration.

"His most conspicuous service was organization of the city's housing program as executive secretary and director of the Baltimore Housing Authority. He carried to that task a genuine enthusiasm and no little understanding of its problems, for he had given it much study. But Mr. Perkins himself probably would give first place in his social and civic activities to his long connection with the Maryland Training School for Boys. Governor Ritchie appointed him to the board of that institution and, at the time of his death, he was secretary to the board.

"Not the administration of the school but the boys who were committed to it claimed the chief interest of Mr. Perkins. They were "his boys." He knew them. He befriended them. He was their pleader at court when they got into trouble and their willing and sympathetic mentor always. The value of his influence with them can only be told in the persona histories of scores of them."

He felt a diff'rent man next day, Believed the Alka-Seltzer way.

Why don't you take Alka-Seltzer for Gas on Stomach, Headache, Sour Stomach, Colds, Fatigue, Muscular, Rheumatic or Sciatic Pains?

Alka-Seltzer makes a sparkling alkaline drink. As it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate), it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments, then by helping to restore the alkaline balance, tends to remove the cause when due to excess acid.

THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibilty rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies with in his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.

B. R. FELLOWS,
Funeral Director.
