DAIRY PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT SAYS STATE AUTHORITY

Dairy Demand Expected To Rise Despite More Production In 1940

Increased milk production, more cows producing because the number of young stock is more than enough for the normal replacement, a marked reduction in stocks of stored dairy products, and better demand as a result of generally improved business conditions summarizes the dairyman's prospect for 1940, says Dr. DeVoe Meade, specialist in dairy and animal husbandry for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

In discussing the outlook report, issued this week by the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Dr. Meade reports long-time upward tendencies in dairy cow numbers are at present most marked in the northeastern and lake state dairy regions, although over a longer period the corn belt and cotton belt are likely to assume greater importance.

Dairy markets strengthened in early fall following unusually low prices during last summer, says the report. Reduction in dairy stocks and general rise in commodity prices improved the price situation. Further improvement depends primarily on further improvement in business and commodity prices generally.

Continuation of the present way may curtail the import of cheese, as it did in the period 1914-1918, and stimulate the export of some dairy products—particularly concentrated milks. Even though dairy exports expanded during the world war, shipments to foreign countries in the form of manufacutred dairy products represented only a relatively small proportion of the milk produced.

Maryland Market Official Approves Proposed Federal Act

S. B. Shaw, chief of the Maryland State Department of Markets, approved a bill before congress which would provide federal funds for marketing activities in the several states, in his president's address at the annual meeting of the National Association of Marketing Officials in Jacksonville, Florida, this week.

This bill, Mr. Shaw said, passed the Senate without a dissenting vote and has been referred to the committee on agriculture in the House, to be considered at its meeting in January, 1940.

The purpose of this proposed legislation, Mr. Shaw explained, is "to make available to state agencies engaged in marketing activities funds to be used for organizing, fostering, promoting, and developing marketing and marketing service for farm commodities, with a particular view to providing a system which will furnish a steady flow of standardized farm products to centers of distribution."

He listed four specific ways in which such funds could be used: (1) For developing better marketing facilities, auction markets, regional markets, cooperative associations, and the setting up of any kind of machinery for merchandizing farm products; (2) For promoting better handling and storing, better grading and packing, and standardizing of containers; (3) For encouraging the processing and manufacturing of agricultural products; (4) for enlarging and making more valuable market news service.

Cornus Nuttalli Winkenwerderi

When associates decided to honor Dean Hugo Winkenwerder, of the University of Washington school of forestry, they pinned his name on a new species of dogwood developed by a school gardener. Its name is "Cornus nuttalli Winkenwerderi."

Girls for Golfing

It is one of the attractions of Scotland to golfers that the caddy is usually a young and good looking Scottish lassie who follows the player around the course.

Rome's Subway

Once again the extending of the city limits of Rome to Ostia, 30 miles away, includes the construction of a subway system which will pass under the heart of Imperial Rome. The subway will be completed in time to serve visitors to the Rome 1942 World fair, the site of which is midway between Rome and Ostia, ancient seaport.

1939 Pioneer

Mrs. E. B. Clegg of Vancouver, British Columbia, is crossing the United States in a 13-foot boat accompanied by two men. Arriving at Idaho Falls, Idaho, she said the trip gave her satisfaction because she met hardships that her forefathers faced. The party is making the trip by an inland water route from Portland. Ore., to New York.
