Cause and Effect.

If President Harrison had announced a year ago that he would not reappoint any of the men then holding office under him, he would have had a much stronger support for re-election. Not but what his appointees were generally approved of by the people. But there are always an average of at least 10 candidates for every place in the gift of the President. These 10 would have worked very hard to secure Harrison's re-election if they had known that the present incumbents would have been turned out at the end of their terms and new men appointed.

The above from the National Tribune, published at Washington, D. C., and the most influental soldiers' paper in the country, tersely states a truth which is now recognized by all thinking Republicans. There can be no question that, during the presidential campaign, the rank and file felt and believed that, if our party was victorious, President Harrison would retain his old officeholders during his second term. The active part they took in compassing his renomination; the large vote they influenced, controlled and cast for him at Minneapolis, could leave no other impression, and this conviction had much to do with cooling the ardor of many men who would otherwise have been his most active and enthusiastic supporters. There was great dissatisfaction in this State and elsewhere, not so much in respect to the character and fitness of his appointees, as to the rough-shod manner in which they were made; the want of deference which was accorded to the men who had borne the burden and heat of many campaigns, and the seeming readiness with which the appointing power ignored the many and acceded to the request of the few. It is an indisputable fact, that selections were made for the more important offices in this State without regard to the wishes of the party, or as to whether such appointees would or would not add to its strength. The summary (one is almost tempted to say contemptuous) way in which a number of gentlemen applying for various positions were disposed of that the three gentlemen applying for the collectorship of the port of Baltimore might be severally appointed to the best positions within the President's gift, in this State, was enough in itself to indicate, in the opinion of many, the policy to be pursued by President Harrison in the event of his re-election. What happened here, where we could not hope to contribute an electoral vote, was in a larger measure true elsewhere, and became a potential factor to our detriment in the contest. It was not so much the voting strength of the Democratic, as it was the stay at home vote of our own party which caused President Harrison's defeat. And this lukewarmness, this indisposition to "pitch into" the fight was brought about by the appointment of men, who the great majority of our voters believed were rewarded beyond their deserts.

If the general appointments in this State added little or no strength to the party, it may be confidently said that many of the minor appointees became a positive injury, a dead weight to carry. The SENTINEL is not prepared to assert that any combination of circumstances could have brought about the re-election of Gen. Harrison, but this can be safely said: the popular belief, that he would retain in office for another term many of of the unpopular men whom he had favored in his first, had much to do with the falling off in the vote here, in New York, Indiana, and elsewhere. President Cleveland has laid down the rule, that the men who held office under him before shall not pre-empt these places during his second term; and it would have added immensely to our strength in the last campaign, if Republicans could have been made to feel that President Harrison, in the event of his election, would have pursued such a course. After all, Presidents must recognize the the fact, that it is not the few, self-constituted bosses, but the rank and file of the party, the men who cast the votes, that must to be taken into account when appointments are made.

Looking for Sources of Revenue.

The Philadelphia Record, a Democratic free-trade journal, points out that among the "sources of fiscal revenue that belong to a tariff for revenue only," the "first in the list is sugar, which at a duty of 1½ cents a pound only, would yield a revenue of $60,000,000 on the basis of last year's importations. Next comes coffee, which at a duty of 3 cents a pound would yield $18,500,000 more. Tea would produce $4,500,000 revenue from a low duty of 5 cents a pound."

If the purposes of the Democratic party, as outlined in the Chicago platform, are to be carried into effect, it will be necessary to impose the duties suggested in the paragraph from the Record. The revenues of the government from customs are none too great now and will not bear further curtailment. But the Democrats stand pledged to overthrow the McKinley law; to remove duties from raw materials, such as wool, iron ore, &c., and to reduce the schedules in other directions. These losses must be made good, and back must go the duties on sugar, coffee and tea. As these will be revenue duties, purely, they will constitute a direct tax on the essential food supplies of the people.

The Democratic promise to give the people cheaper clothing, though clothing has never been cheaper than it is now, is a hollow mockery in the face of the bald proposition to tax the necessaries of every man's table. Yet this is what a majority of the people voted for when they cast their ballots for a Democratic President and Representatives.

President Cleveland is not adhering very closely to his proposition to ignore the press in making appointments, especially in Maryland. Ernest P. Baldwin, of Laurel, a newspaper man, follows Mr. Ruby, also of the press. Mr. Baldwin gets the very important position of First Auditor of the Treasury. He was in the Treasury department during Mr. Cleveland's first term, and, it is said, has a creditable official record. Probably his residence in the same town as Mr. Gorman had something to do with his prompt appointment.

While Governor McKinley, of Ohio, has persistently refused to receive contributions to assist him out of his financial difficulties; has returned promptly all money addressed to him, and has urged that efforts to assist him in that way be desisted from, the work has gone on, and it is now announced that by April 1st a fund sufficient to liquidate the entire indebtedness will have been raised, chiefly by $1.00 subscriptions. The amount aggregates $95,000. Under the circumstances Governor McKinley will find it difficult to resist the purpose of his many friends to rescue him from financial ruin.

After all, Mr. Cleveland mitigates the blow of his declaration that office holders under his previous administration will not be reappointed, except in special cases. He says this intention will not exclude them from free competition for other appointments. The purpose of discriminating against them in relation to positions with the duties of which they have some familiarity, and then opening the door of prefermentto other places about which they are ignorant, seems to have no reasonable basis, unless, indeed, these old appointees, as a rule, did not measure up to the President's standard of official capacity; or, which may be possible, a mere desire on his part to exhibit his authority.

The time was when every Democratic newspaper in the country kept the word "Nepotism" constantly before its readers by representing the appointment of relatives by officials, having the disposal of patronage, as a great wrong and outrage upon the people. The changes were wrung on the word without cessation. Not so much is said about it now, but the practice has not by any means gone into disuse. By joint resolution the last Congress provided a private secretary or clerk for each Senator and Member of the House, at a satisfactory salary. And now, it is alleged, many of the Democratic Senators have given these appointments to their own sons or other very near relatives. It is further said that Mr. Cleveland informed one of these Senators that no one who had pursued that course should control executive appointments. The latter story may be without foundation, but there seems to be no doubt about the alleged nepotism.

Our Regular Army of To-Day.

"In recent years much has been done to popularize the Army with the young men of the country. By new regulations a soldier may be discharged ufider certain conditions after three years service upon his own application, or he may purchase his discharge under regulations made in the interest of those who have good reasons for engaging in other pursuits. In addition to these advantages in the case of legitimately severing his connection with the Army, everything possible has lately been done to improve the daily life of the soldier. He is furnished with good clothing, excellent, food, means of amusement, school advantages which, in addition to liberal pay, and prospects of premotion equal to those of any profession, open to young men of the country a most desirable occupation.

A term of service, judiciously spent in the Army, is an advantage to a young man, second only to a university course. It improves him physically, broadens his mental view, and fits him to compete in life with the educated and enterprising.

Some of the most successful men in the Western country are among those who have served a term of enlistment in the army. They are proud of their service and grateful for the advantages it has brought them. No young man not having superior advantages need now hesitate to adopt the Army as an experience which will increase his opportunities for success in any profession. [Gen. Merritt in "The Armies of To-day."]

Appointments by the President.

Following are among the appointments announced by President Cleveland during the week:

James B. Eustis, of Louisiana, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to France.

Theodore Runyon, of New Jersey, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany.

John E. Risley, of New York, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Denmark.

Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, to be Commissioner of Railroads.

Ernest P. Baldwin, of Maryland, to be First Auditor of the Treasury. Thomas Holcomb, of Delaware, to be Fifth Auditor of the Treasury.

James C. Jenkins, of Wisconsin, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Seventh Judicial Circuit. Walter D. Dabney, of Virginia, to be Solicitor for the Department of State. Charles B. Stuart, of Texas, to be Judge of the United States Court for the Indian Territory.

John S. Seymour, of Connecticut, to be Commissioner of Patents.

Silas W. Lamoreux, of Wisconsin, to be Commissioner of the General Land Office.

William H. Sims, of Mississippi, to be first assistant secretary of the Interior.

Edward A. Bowers, of Washington, to be assistant commissioner of the General Land Office.

Henry C. Bell to be second deputy commissioner of Pensions.

Horace H. Lurton, of Tennessee, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Sixth Judicial Circuit.

To be marshals of the United States: Frank E. White, of Nebraska, for the district of Nebraska; George Pfeiffer, Jr., of New Jersey, for the district of New Jersey.

A movement has been started among the members of the Grand Army of the Republic in Indianapolis to introduce a resolution in the State Encampment at Evansville, in April, asking that the National Encampment meet at some other place than Indianapolis, the place selected at Washington last year. The veterans complain that the the soldiers and sailors' monument at Indianapolis has been so Mexicanized that it is no longer a monument to the heroes of the civil war, and that the Grand Army of the Republic should not participate in the dedicatory exercises. It was mainly on account of the monument that the Indiana posts desired the National encampment to meet at Indianapolis.

For the SENTINEL.

Baltimore Letter.

An object of great interest to Baltimoreans at present is the great Krupp gun, which will be placed on exhibition at the Columbian Exposition. The gun was sent from Germany and weighs 124 tons. The Maryland Steel Company has been putting machinery in the Longuiel, (on which vessel the gun was shipped) to lift it from the hold. This task will be accomplished by Saturday. Hundreds of persons have gone down to view the monster, but very few have been permitted on board the Longuiel. The gun occupies the freight apartment, and probably part of the vessel's upper works will have to be removed when it is hoisted out.

The Lake Roland Elevated Railway Company is pushing the construction of its road to completion. The elevated portion of the road, which is on North street, from Eager to Saratoga streets, is completed. The company will run double tracks as far down North street as Fayette street, where single tracks are necessary, owing to the narrowness of that thoroughfare. The road will be extended from Roland Park to Lake Roland, where the company has bought 14 acres of land which it will convert into a park, erect a pavillion and otherwise improve it and make it a splendid place for visitors. Free concerts will be given during the summer months, and no doubt the citizens of Baltimore will seek refuge in this beautiful spot, when the heat of summer shall be keenly felt here.

The City College base-ball club will play the Western Maryland College team as soon as the season opens.

Anyone who has not visited Baltimore for several years would be surprised at the growth and improvement of the Monumental city. Nearly all of the city's car lines are run on the rapid transit system, by means of electricity or cable. Then there are quite a number of companies which have their roads in the course of construction, notably the several branches of the Baltimore City Passenger Railway Co., which are being cabled. Another prominent and noticeable feature is the number of large buildings which have been erected recently, among which is the Equitable Building, which is one of the largest and most elegant office buildings in the world. It is ten stories high, and is supplied with a restaurant, and a Turkish bath compartment on a grand scale.

The Western Maryland.

The monthly meeting of the directors of the Western Maryland Railroad Company was held at Hillen Station Wednesday. President Hood submitted and sent to Mayor Latrobe the approximate statement of earnings, operating expenses and net earnings for February, 1893, and a comparison with 1892, as follows:

	FEBRUARY. 1893.	1892.
Gross earnings.....	$77,681	$70,486	$ 6,545 Inc.
Operating expenses	58,320	46,190	13,929 Inc.
	$19,903	$21,295	$ 7,383 Dec.

President Hood says: "The net earnings for January are shown by actual figures to have been but $14,369.62, instead of $19,239.55, as estimated, a decrease of $4,869.93. This change by actual figures for January and estimated for February is due to the unusually severe weather and the condition of the country roads which, for most of the time, were either obstructed by snow drifts or rendered impassable for heavy teams by the depth of the mud, which latter condition still continues.

"The falling off in local freight earnings in February, due to these causes, amounted to $9,445.54, and in passenger earnings to $1,544.67, or to $10,990.21 for the two as compared with February, 1892, while the expenses for February, besides including $2,437 paid for damage to freight by accident and $2,051.49 for steel rails purchased for repairs, also include the cost of doing a heavier through freight business than shown by the approximate figures. February expenses were also increased $966.75 by the advance in wages of enginemen and firemen. This rendering of statements made up of a mixture of actual and approximate figures is so unsatisfactory that we will hereafter, unless objection is made, delay the reports until the actual figures can be given.

"For the five months of the fiscal year ended February 28, 1893, the gross earnings were $442,789.79 and the operating expenses $323,528.07, being an increase of $93,921.22 in revenue and an increase of $51,150.46 in expenses, making a net increase of $42,770.76 for the five months."

How much will it cost to see the World's Fair? The question is agitating more than one household in the land. The fact has been widely published that to see the Exposition, and take in all the side attractions inside the grounds, will cost in entrance fees alone at least $15. The estimate of the Chicago News is $12.50. Privileges of every kind have been sold, and visitors will even have to buy the ice water they drink. In view of these statements it is gratifying to read in the Chicago Tribune that "a visitor can visit the Fair ten days, see all the sights and have a good time for $19." This, of course, does not include railroad fares to and from Chicago but it allows for lunches and Exposition sideshows, and is for the total expenses while in Chicago. This is the lowest estimate. It will be very easy to spend more than nineteen dollars in ten days without half trying.

Mr. Cornelius L. L. Leary, a retired lawyer and ex-member of Congress, died of old age at his home, 1714 Harlem avenue, Baltimore, late Tuesday night. Mr. Leary was born in Baltimore in 1814 and was the son of Peter Leary, one of the founders of the Maryland public schools. Mr Leary belonged to the American party and served in Congress in 1861-62. In 1867 he was defeated in a candidacy for a judgeship. He was married twice. His first wife was a Miss Philips and his second Miss Horton. Three sons survive.

The largest steam flouring mill in the world, located at Litchfield, Ohio, was totally destroyed by fire and an explosion of flour dust on Tuesday. The fire was discovered at 3.30, A. M., and soon spread through the immense building. Suddenly a terrific explosion occurred and the structure was blown to fragments. John Cowle, of Waterloo, N. Y., the head mill-wright, was killed and several other persons were injured. Business houses in the town were damaged to the extent of $150,000. The loss on the mill is estimated at $2,000,000.

The dwelling-house, storeroom and stock of goods of Mr. L. E. Boller, Graceham, Frederick county, were totally destroyed by fire about two o'clock, Friday morning of last week. Mr and Mrs. Boller were nearly suffocated with smoke and barely escaped with their lives. The dwelling of Mrs. James A. Weller, about twenty feet distant, was also completely destroyed. The post-office was located in the building, but all the contents were saved. The Moravian Church was threatened with destruction, but was saved by great effort and by the favorable condition of the weather, which was perfectly calm. The Boller property was insured for $800 in the Mutual Company of Carroll county, and the Weller for $600, and $175 on household effects, in the Royal.

Mrs. Mazie Louise Hood, wife of Mr. Richard H. Hood, and daughter of Mr. John T. Ridgely, of Howard county, died in St. Louis, Mo., where she resided with her husband, who is a son of Col. Jno. M. Hood, president of the Western Md. Railroad Company, on Saturday last. Mr. and Mrs. Hood were married February 20th, 1892, when she was but 17 years of age.

Little Levina was our darling,
Pride of all our hearts at home,
But an angel came and whispered
Darling Levina do come home.
Sad are the days and lonely the hours,
Since our darling has gone,
But a brighter place than ours,
Heaven, now is her home.

The little crib is empty now,
The little clothes laid by;
A mother's hope, a father's joy,
In death's cold arms doth lie.
Go, little pilgrim, to thy home,
On yonder blissful shore;
We miss thee here, but soon will come
Where thou hast gone before.

By her Parents and Grandparents.
