JAPANEZE BEETLE CONTROL WORK STARTED IN KENT COUNTY

Japanese Beetle Trapping Plans For 1940

County Agent McVean announces that through the cooperation of the County Commissioners with State and Federal agencies, Japanese Beetle traps are available for an intensive trapping campaign.

Kent residents who leased traps last year may secure new bait, without cost, when they return the empty bait bottles. If the traps need repair return them also to exchange for new traps. Return the solid corks that came with the bait but keep the cork with wick in it at home to insert when the trap is in use.

Those who want traps for the first time or want extra traps may secure them with bait under a simple lease form which covers a two-year period at a cost of only Fifteen Cents (.15) per trap. Farmers agree that they should share at least a small portion of the cost of furnishing and baiting the traps.

Mr. McVean urges that most farmers need more traps than they have used in past, also that every farmer should use many traps. To be most effective—one trap to each acre of corn land is recommended. In any case one trap to each acre of corn and soy beans is a minimum recommendation. It is not claimed that the traps will catch every beetle but it is an apparent fact that each beetle caught before it lays eggs and before it damages crops by feeding on them means less damage this year and fewer beetles for next and succeeding years. Trapping is but one of the weapons in use. It is supplemented by parasite colonies by spreading "the Milky White" desease—both of which agencies will become increasingly effective as time passes—and by retardation measures such as deterrent spray, grub proofing lawns and by adjusting crops and planting dates.

Some folk argue that the traps draw beetles from long distances and that unless every farmer uses traps, these who do trap are damaged more than if no traps were used. These appears to be little basis of fact in such claims. Study reveals that the bait draws beetles usually not over 150 yards and not over 200 yards in any case. Therefore, unless traps are near the line fences there is no danger of attracting the beetles from the non-trap farms to the baited traps. On the other hand, some farms have found they can protect one crop such as corn by planting such a crop as soybeans on the turn rows or adjacent to the corn. The beetles attracted by both the beans and the bait do little or no damage to the corn—this was true in 1939. The beans and the bait serve as decoys and are effective. The beans adjacent to the trap may show more damage than those further away but the quantities of beetles trapped indicate the far greater damage that would have resulted had no traps been used.

The stations where bait may be had in exchange for empty corked bait, bottles, (soli dcork not thoes with wickes) and new traps secured are as follows: Massey Cannery at Massey from W. R. Newnam; at Locust Grove from Hill Beaston; and at Chestertown, Albert Lee, at jail. Schedule for distribution is 7 A. M. to 9 A. M., 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.; 7 p. m. to 5 p. m. week of June 24 to 29 inclusive.

In the incorporated villages—Chestertown, Millington, Galena and Betterton the traps will be placed and serviced by the Town Councils. Town residents who want additional traps may lease them under same conditions as farmers and from the same stations and on same schedule.
