SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1940

In order to curb the increasing number of fatal automobile accidents, the Commissioners of Motor Vehicles has ruled that during the month of July, drivers involved in certain auto accidents will be subject to an examination. This ruling followed the belief that many accidents are caused by bad vision or other physical defects and lack of knowledge of the laws of right-of-way. Just what effect this will have in preventing accidents remains to be seen but a study of th emonthly reports of all fatal accidents shows clearly that the great majority of fatal accidents are caused by driving too fast for conditions. The power of automobiles has been developed faster than modern highways and while the speed limit in Maryland has been increased it does not mean that this limit affords safe driving on all types of roads. No particular individual or group of individuals are guilty of driving too fast for conditions. Practically all motorists have a tendency to step on it whether in a hurry or not. Those who have accidents are unfortunate and although they might have bee nviolating the speed laws, hundreds of other motorists who are lucky are also violating the same law. It is impossible to patrol the roads to the point where all motorists who exceed the speed limit are apprehended. It remains then for the motorists themselves to sum up the situation and help curb the present delporable death toll. More State officers on the highways may help curb those who are not responsible nor care about the welfare of himself or the other fellow.

Mrs. Nell C. Westcott, manager of the local un-employment office took occasion to answer the editorial which appeared in the Transcript referring to the existing set-up of unemployment insurance. In her reply she compared unemployment insurance to other lines of insurance on the basis that benefits are only paid for the particular damage for which one is insured. What Mrs. Westcott failed to either realize or state is that when one buys insurance they have the choice of buying and paying for the particular kind of insurance that best fits their need; that the unemployment insurance is a law forced upon employers by State Legislators who likely in the main were not thoroughly familar with what they were voting for or what effect it would have upon the thousands of different sizes and types of businesses in the State. Like other laws one must accept it or be fined or imprisoned. We have found that it is just another of those dictatorial policies of government that has justly stricken out the free from the Free State. In our experience we have found it distasteful to both employer and employee. In view of this fact our only defense is an expression in one of the remaining individual privileges, the free press.

In these times of fifth column activities the public has become aroused to the point where such activities must be clothed in secrecy. However care should be used in combating efforts to destroy our Democratic form of government by reporting such activities to the recognized government agencies. Many organizations have been formed whose outward purposes are for the best but the internal workings may be for that which they are supposed to try to distroy. It is perfectly alright for organizations to pass resolutions and their members to be on the alert but it is dangerous for these organizations to become independant vigilence armies lest they be delivered by unscrupulus leaders into the hands of the enemy. Working with the F. B. I. and recognized Federal military organizations instead of independantly is the safest course to follow.

Progress of Merchandising

One of the greatest contributions to American merchandising during the past decade has been the development of a method for moving surplus crops by special drives known as "producer-consumer campaigns." Developed most extensively by the food chain stores, the campaigns have helped move many glut crops in every section of the country. Today leading stores are stressing simultaneously the 13 commodities designated as "surplus" by the U. S. department of agriculture.

Automobile Vapors

Water produced by the autos in this country in the form of vapor from the exhaust annually amounts to 17½ billion gallons, or enough to fill a canal 25 feet wide and 6 feet deep running between New York and San Francisco.

Tree Ring Formations

The concentric rings on a tree trunk owe their existence to certain structural differences between the wood formed in the spring and in the late summer.

"THAT'S OUR RING"

THERE'S always someone to talk with when there's a telephone in the house. Neighbors and relatives are closer. Friendly calls lead to friendly visits.

Make your farm home more liveable by having a telephone installed. The cost is surprisingly low. Inquire at the nearest telephone office.

Resolutions Of Respect

The Woman's Eastern Shore Society of Maryland and especially the Kent Couny Chapter thereof desires to express through the Kent County papers to her many friends and relatives in the county, its sorrow and deep regret at the sudden death of a co-founder and charter member of the society and chapter Mrs. William Dorsey Hines (nee Sue Carter Wilkins).

Since Kent was the oldest—or first laid out—county of the Eastern Shore it was eminently fitting that its founder and first president and first corresponding secretary should have been a Kent woman.

Mrs. Hines was a faithful and loyal member of the society and active in its work from its founding in March of 1926 to her sudden passing to the Great Beyond on June 26, 1940.

Sue Wilkins Hines, as she was always called in the society, was a member of its first Governing Board in her capacity of Corresponding Secretary for its first two years—the maximum time in office in the society—and continued on the Board the four following years first as Chairman of Kent County and then as Chaplain of the society. After that six years of Board service, tho as active and interested as ever she declined to accept any office that automatically made her a member of the Governing Board.

In every office and on all the many important committees on which she served throughout the years she always manifested that sincerity of purpose and dignity and efficiency in office and dependableness that were her outstanding characteristics as a woman and on one in the Society was more genuinely loved and respected in life or more sincerely mourned in death.

Signed:
Mrs. Frances W. Little (nee Virginia Kelly) 1st Chaplain;
Mrs. F. H. Longfellow (nee Phoebe Jenkins), Present Chaplain;
Mrs. S. Lee Startt (nee Martha G. Robinson), Kent County Chairman.
