The Trouble In Rhode Island.

Concerning the political situation in Rhode Island the Baltimore Sun, among other things, says:

> The constitution of the United States, section 4, article 4 declares that "the United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government." If the government of the State of Rhode Island at this present time is republican in form, it is not so in substance. The constitution of Rhode Island provides that each branch of the Legislature shall be the judge of the election and qualification of its members, and yet the Senate undertook to sit in judgment upon the election and qualification of the members of the House, and because two members were seated whose politics are not acceptable to the majority of the Senate, that body refused to obey the constitution and go into joint convention with the House for the election of Governor and other State officers. The Senate then certified to the Governor that there was a disagreement between the House and Senate as to the time and place of adjournment. That official, who was a candidate for re-election, eagerly availed himself of a technicality to prorogue the Legislature and so prevent the election of his successor by constitutional methods. He, therefore, holds the office for another term without having been elected by the people and contrary to the will of the majority. It is the South American method, pure and simple, pursued in a somewhat bolder and balder way because of the knowledge that the people of Rhode Island, being an orderly and submissive people, will not rise in revolution, as the South American people do under similar circumstances.

The Sun omitted some other facts bearing upon the case which presents it in an entirely different light. In Rhode Island a majority of all the votes cast is necessary to elect State officers. Failing such majority, the Senate and House in grand committee are authorized to elect, and, in the event of their failure to do so the old officers hold over. At the recent election none of the State candidates received a majority. The Republicans elected a majority of the members of the Senate and the Democrats a majority of the House; but the Republican majority in the upper branch of the Legislature was greater than the Democratic majority in the lower branch. This gave the Republicans control of the grand committee and power to elect Republican State officers. Not content, however, to abide by the decision of the people, as expressed in accordance with the laws of the State, the Democratic majority in the Lower House, for the sole purpose of acquiring a majority in the grand committee, immediately upon assembling unseated two Republicans whose election was properly certified and admitted two Democrats to their places. The House made no inquiry into the facts involved, but acted arbitrarily and not judicially, as the Sun would lead its readers to suppose. While it is true that each branch of the Legislature is "the judge of the election and qualification of its members," it is also true that in its organization only those who are properly certified can participate. If a contest as to the validity of the election of a member be made, the facts relating to it become matters of judicial inquiry; testimony must be taken pro and con and presented to the body sitting as a court, and opportunity be given to the contestant and contestee to present facts and argument in support of their claims. This was not done by the Democratic branch of the Rhode Island Legislature, but, as already stated, Republicans were ousted and Democrats seated summarily and arbitrarily, without any inquiry into their respective claims. The rendition of a judgment by a court or jury, in a suit involving individual rights, without having heard a word of testimony, would be about a parallel to the action of the Rhode Island House.

The Sun has no word of condemnation for this atrocious proceeding, but wails loudly over the defeat of its purpose by the action of the Senate. That action prevented the consummation of a scheme of rascality second only to that practiced by the Democratic Governor and other New York officials in the conspiracy which gave to that party the control of both branches of the Legislature of 1892 in that State. Any other action would have been impossible to a self-respecting body. The Senate could not avoid the acquisition of a knowledge of the outrage perpetrated by the House under the form of power—not right—and, having that knowledge, was bound by every consideration of equity and justice to prevent, if possible, the consummation of the iniquity.

It may be added that there are not wanting signs that the administration at Washington was involved in the conspiracy to seize the State government of Rhode Island. A Republican elected to the Legislature happened to be also a postmaster. He could not hold both offices at the same time, and tendered his resignation as a government officer to Postmaster General Bissell. Clamorous as the Democrats are for the postoffices, the resignation of the Republican in this particular instance was not accepted.

When the Sun desires again to treat its readers to a homily on pure government, and to deplore the existence of political trickery, it could not do better than use the villainy of its Democratic friends in New York, and the rascally scheme of the Democratic conspirators to obtain control of the government of the State of Rhode Island as the basis of its remarks.

The Republican State Central Committee met in Baltimore on Wednesday, but transacted very little business of importance. Chairman H. M. Clabaugh was engaged in court here and could not be present, and none of the other Carroll county members were in attendance. The meeting was quiet and harmonious. The selection of a new chairman, in case Mr. Clabaugh persists in retiring, was quietly discussed by the members, but no one had any idea as to who might be persuaded to accept the position, which involves considerable labor and no little expense. Among the names spoken of were those of State Senator Washington Wilkinson, of St. Mary's, and Charles T. Westcott, of Kent, but it is not known whether either of these gentlemen would accept.

Big Men and Little Folks.

The hyperbolism of Mr. Dan D's. communication concerning "Little Folks," printed in another column, will be apparent to readers of average intelligence, and even the "little folks" may be able to discern the egotism evinced in this production of a full grown mind; to say nothing of the lack of logic displayed in the attempt to connect the opposition to the Sunday opening of the World's Fair with the Blue Laws of Connecticut, or the bad taste manifested in likening a christian man, whose conscience revolts at the wholesale desecration of the Sabbath, and who refuses to participate in it, to a petulant child refusing to play because it can't have its own way.

The local managers of the World's Fair are unper contract with the government of the United States to close the gates of the Fair on Sunday. The christian sentiment of the people's Representatives in Congress was sufficiently powerful to make such action a condition of the five million appropriation of government money in aid of the Fair. The money was accepted upon that condition, giving thereby the force of a contract to the transaction. It might have been declined, and should have been if a purpose existed to ignore the condition. If it was intended to ignore or evade the condition the bad faith of the local managers was simply premeditated, and seeming acquiescence a paltry trick to defeat the intention of the people as expressed by their Representatives in Congress. Even Mr. Dan D. admits some reason in the charge of breach of contract and law, but seemingly its justification in the plea "that almost every advance of liberty has involved a like infraction." He cites the emancipation of the slaves as an example, an assumption not warranted by the facts of history, except when emancipation was the result of armed revolution. The greatest acts of emancipation in history, perhaps, were those of the United States and Brazil, and they were engrafted in the very organic laws of those countries. But he further says: "So all reformers have acted, and perforce, for denial of right has ever been set in the letter of the law." This is simply the argument of the anarchist, especially as applied to the violation of a compact in which the violator has made a great gain by agreeing to certain conditions. If its propriety be admitted there is an end to the sanctity of all law and every man with a full grown mind should be permitted to follow the bent of his own sweet will in his relations with his fellowmen. The chief difficulty, in that case, would be in deciding who possessed full grown minds, as differences of opinion might arise concerning that as well as other questions, and the individual might not be accepted at his own estimate.

Recurring again to the matter of the Sunday opening of the Fair, we would say, briefly, that the local managers can divest their conduct of all question of bad faith by refunding the money accepted from the government, and in that event can open the gates without making themselves inimical to the charge of being contract and law breakers. Furthermore, in that case, those who wish to visit the Fair can do so without let or hindrance from the "little folks," but these same "little folks" will insist that, while they are not the keepers of other men's consciences they are of their own, and have a perfect legal and moral right to boycott the Fair if they see proper to do so.

The Inevitable Consequences.

President Cleveland has announced that he intends to call an extra session of Congress on some date during the first half of September, unless some contingency shall arise making an earlier date imperative. While deferring such action to the period mentioned, the President is evidently impressed with the conviction of the existence of "fear and apprehension in monetary circles," which he believes threatens to "bring suffering to every home in our land." If he be correct in that conclusion—and there seems to be no reason to doubt that he is—it looks to ordinary mortals as if the contingency requiring prompt legislation is upon us. Banks and business houses are failing in every direction; confidence is being destroyed and contraction of trade is becoming more pronounced daily. This state of affairs is simply the result predicted by the Republicans as sure to follow a Democratic triumph in 1892. That event ensuing the consequences are inevitable and President Cleveland seems to have no confidence in the abilty of a Democratic Congress to avert them. In fact, he is aware that a large portion of the Democrats elected to Congress are at variance with his own views of the financial question, and it has been gravely suggested that he is anxious to work a conversion in their views by giving them an object lesson which may change their opinions in relation to the kind of legislation necessary concerning silver. But the free silver men still cling to the idea that unlimited coinage will prove a sovereign remedy for all the financial evils threatening the country, and both they and the President have, apparently, lost sight of the fact that the most prominent factor in the business depression under which the country is laboring is the threatened change in the economic system of the government, and the substitution of free trade for protection. Nothing but an abandonment by the Democratic party of its purpose to subvert the protective system, can avert a dire calamity to the country.

Firemen's Association.

The Maryland Volunteer Firemen's Association met at the City Hall, Frederick, on Thursday. About sixty delegates, representing the city of Baltimore, Hagerstown, Frederick, Westminster, Port Deposit, Frostburg and Union Bridge, were in attendance. Cumberland, Cambridge and other points indicated by letter the intention of being represented in the association, but were unprepared at this time to send delegates.

At the suggestion of E. M. Mobley, of Hagerstown, the old officers of the association, consisting of J. Roger McSherry, president; Wm. M. Crimmins, recording secretary; Wm. R. Henshaw, assistant secretary; and H. R. Hack, treasurer, were re-elected for the ensuing year. Each organization named a vice-president, and Mr. O. D. Gilbert was selected as the representative of the Westminster department in that office.

It was decided to hold the next annual convention in Hagerstown on the second Thursday in June, 1894.

Governor McKinley Renominated.

The Republican State convention of Ohio, held on Thursday, renominated Gov. McKinley by acclamation amid a scene of wild enthusiasm. A committee waited upon the Governor and conducted him to the hall, where, after verbally accepting the nomination and briefly reviewing State questions, he discussed, in his forcible manner, the question of national politics. Among other things, he said:

The national administration has done nothing thus far, except to create in the minds of business men a deep distrust. The financial situation, which, for the most part, has prevailed since the 4th of March, has not been improved, nor has the financial stringency been relieved by anything the national administration has said or done. It has announced no policy, suggested no relief and given no sign of its disposition or ability to restore confidence, stop the outflow of gold to foreign countries, and the contraction which has taken place at home. The one hundred millions of gold reserve, which Mr. Cleveland, in his first administration, set apart as a sacred fund to redeem the greenbacks, and which sum he dedicated to that purpose, and no other, he has been the first, singularly enough, to encroach upon. He announced in 1885 that this sum of one hundred millions was a trust fund for the redemption of the greenbacks of the government.

Mr. Cleveland fixed that sum as the danger line. So, when he was compelled to cross it, as he has been several times since the 4th of March, is it to be wondered at that serious apprehension and insecurity everywhere prevail? He put up the danger signal and the country took note of it, and was naturally mistrustful and disturbed.

The Democratic victory of 1892 has not been able to bring the good times promised. It has not been able to maintain the good times which were enjoyed everywhere in this country on the day of the victory. Business failures have increased, banks have suspended, money is harder to borrow, and borrowers are compelled to pay higher interest for their loans than for many, many years. Feverish uncertainty prevails in every financial and business circle. Labor and capital are in doubt about the future. It has been our condition for two months and no change for the letter is at this moment apparent.

If it is true, as the administration boldly proclaims, that our financial distress is occasioned by the silver purchase law, which requires the government to buy $4,500,000 ounces of silver every month and issue treasury notes therefor, then why does not the administration convene Congress and repeal the law? Mr. Cleveland vainly sought its repeal before the inauguration, but we have heard little from him in that direction since. Believing he knows the cause of the trouble, he makes no effort to remove it, and in this is the responsibility, and from it he cannot escape.

The administration has been in power three months. I submit to the people, I ask my countrymen, are they encouraged or satisfied or contented with what has been already done? Has the new administration brought hope or courage? Has it quickened business activity? Has it opened new avenues of industry? Has it increased the demand for labor? Have the rewards of labor been increased under the new administration?

How many Democrats are disappointed, and would gladly recall, if they could, their votes after the short experience they have had! If the promised reforms of the administration have alarmed the country, what will their fullfillment do? If the promise of the delivery of Democratic measures has unsettled business, what will actual delivery do? All that is left for the country is to vote down its former instructions in every state where opportunity is presented preceding the assembly of Congress.

Little Folks.

In every mood and manner, the child is an autocrat. He is fit, only, to be a despot or the subject of a despotism. He might make a very pretty angel, but would be a very poor citizen of a free State. In fact, were the stature and strength of manhood conjoined with infantile impulses, jails and asylums for the insane, would have to be multiplied indefinitely. While displayed by weakness these impulses are amusing to the million and instructive to the philosopher. But it is a fact of nature that a majority attain age and height without a corresponding sublimation of primal propensities—there are ten to tell of the muscle of the soldier and but one that can speak of the mind of the statesman or scholar. Little folks truly! Still, history encourages hope. The time of the Blue Laws was an improvement on the age of Charlemagne when nations were baptized by force; barbarous and bigoted seem the Blue Laws now. There has been amelioration but no extinction ot little folks. They are unhappy still if others are allowed to do things unseemly to them, though their liberty to do or not to do is left unimpaired. An incident for which we need not rely on the doubtful pages of the past, is in the memory of many. When Sunday trains began running on the Western Maryland loud were the privite and pulpit opinions against the enormity. But as soon as it was noticed that explosions and collisions did not avenge the law and the gospel the bigot soberly pocketed the price of his Sunday-sent milk and the fanatic grabbed his grip and boarded the Sunday train to preach somewhere against a new extension of liberty,—likely the Sunday opening of the World's Fair. The observation that little folks need not go on Sundays does not satisfy the little folks. They demand that the acts of others shall be consonant with little folks' conscience. With more reason they speak of breach of contract and law but reck not that almost every advance of liberty has involved a like infraction. So the slave was emancipated, so reformers have acted, and perforce, for denial of right has ever been set in the letter of the law. The declamation further runs "this is a Christian Country"; and the little folks, by restraint and compulsion, would conform it to their ideal. But most characteristic is the compound cry of boycott and despair, expressed in the appropriately puerile language of little folks, "now I ain't going to play now".

Who is "Ichabod?"

MR. EDITOR:—Some people in this world appear to see things through their own distorted personality. I dare be sworn that "Ichabod," the author of a communication from this place, published in last week's Advocate, touching the resignation of Postmaster Drach, is afflicted with that sort of vision, and that personal spleen, originating when and how it matters not, prompted the gratuitous attack on one of the best and bravest men in this community. I feel confident it was not the expression of a politically partisan sentiment, for Mr. Drach enjoys the respect of Republicans and Democrats alike. Slurring him, and through him the G. A. R., of which he is a member, will not make him any enemies, nor will it add to the list of friends of his assailant. His fidelity to duty and his patriotism are written in his blood and stamped upon his maimed body. Shame to the American who offers to either the insult of a sneer! The glory of his gallant deeds cannot be dimmed by the pen of an unknown detractor, who, no doubt, properly calls himself "Ichabod."

A CIVILIAN.

Firemen's Celebration at Frederick.

The firemen's parade in Frederick, on Wednesday, was one of the greatest public demonstrations ever witnessed in that city, which forty years ago was celebrated for the immensity of its political processions. About forty-five organizations, with apparatus, were in the line, from Baltimore, Reading, Pa., York, Pa. Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Alexandria, Va., Altoona, Pa., Conshohocken, Pa., Winchester, Va., Columbia, Pa., Washington, D. C., Waynesboro, Pa., New Brunswick, N. J., Wrightsville, Pa., Chambersburg, Pa., Shephardstown, W. Va., Charlestown, W. Va., Portsmouth, Va., Philadelphia, Pa., Wilmington, Del., Allentown, Pa., Hanover, Pa., Mechanicsburg, Pa., Phœnixville, Pa., East Berlin, Pa., Harrisburg, Pa., Frostburg, Cumberland, Lonaconing, Hagerstown, Middletown, Mechanicstown, Union Bridge, Westmnster, Annapolis and other places. The Westminster Band, 23 pieces, accompanied the department from this city, and no better music was heard from the line and no handsomer company seen in the parade than was rendered and presented by the Westminster boys. The department was under command of Mr. Jos. D. Brooks, marshal. The Union Bridge Company was headed by the Union Bridge Band, 25 pieces, with Mr. Wm. Marshall captain, and made a highly creditable display. Mr. J. Roger McSherry, of Frederick, was chief marshal of the parade. Thousands of visitors, from the neighboring counties of Maryland and adjoining States, thronged the streets and witnessed the demonstration.

A firemen's convention, was held on Thursday. The department of this city was represented in the convention by Messrs. O. D. Gilbert, E. J. Lawyer, Denton S. Gehr, J. D. Brooks, and the Union Bridge Company by Messrs. Chas. A. Hiltabridle, James A. Seabrook, Wm. Eckenrode, Edward Hoover, George H. Mitten.

A Board to Examine Pensions.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—To properly comply with the order of Secretary Hoke Smith of May 27, 1893, revoking order No. 164 and directing the commissioner to have an "examination made to determine what pensions have heretofore been allowed under section 2 of the act approved June 27, 1890 in disregard of the terms of said act, in conflict with the ruling of this department in the case of Chas. F. Bennett," Commissioner Lochren to-day organized a "board of revision," consisting of twenty-three men, who have been selected with special reference to their fitnes for the place. The duties of the board of revision will be to draw from the admitted files as rapidly as may be practicable all cases allowed under section 2 of the act of June 27th, aggregating over 300,000, and to determine whether the allowances are in accordance with law. The board will act under the immediate supervision and direction of the commissioner, who will give proper instructions as needed. The Board is made up entirely of officials of the pension office.

The great tragedian, Edwin Booth, is dead. He was not quite sixty years of age. He had reached the greatest eminence in his profession and was without a rival in this country. He was a man of pure and honorable character and a true-hearted patriot. The mad act of his brother, John Wilkes Booth, in assassinating President Lincoln, colored and saddened his whole life, probably hastening its end.

A despatch from Washington, yesterday morning, announced that a building, either owned or rented by the government, in which six hundred clerks and other employees connected with the War Department were at work, had collapsed and fallen. The number of fatalties could not be given, but it is supposed 150 were killed and many more injured.

Henry Clay Smith is the first colored man to be recognized officially by this administration. He is an original Cleveland man in Alabama, and his appointment is a recognition of services done the democratic party in his home at Birmingham.

Eli Tucker has been found guilty of murder in the second degree in the Circuit Court for Harford county for killing Mr. Johnson, a brother of Mrs. Rev. Dr. Killgore, of this city, at Bynum's Station, some time ago.

President Cleveland has appointed a Tammany man postmaster of New York, much to the disappointment and chagrin of the Mugwumps.

If there is one subject more than another in which American girls and women are interested during the summer months it is lawn tennis, and no one more competent to discuss the subject can be found than Miss Mabel Esmonde Cahill, the lady champion of the United States, who contributes a valuable article on "The art of Playing Good Tennis" to the June Ladies' Home Journal. Mr. Willard Spenser adds attractiveness to the number by an exquisite song, "A Dream of Love," the first composition which he has given to the public since his successful comic opera of "The Little Tycoon." Mr. Arthur Warren writes entertainingly of the Empress of Germany in her home, his article being profusely illustrated from original photographs. Three beautiful pages of "Needle work for idle Summer Days" are followed by "The Story of the Roses.' by H. H. Battles. Mr. Howell's charming study of girl-life, "The Coast of Bohemia," gains in interest as it proceeds, and Mr. Harben's interesting story, "Before two Altars," is brought to a dramatic conclusion. The Editor writes earnestly on the seriousness of leaving the male members of the family alone in city houses during the Summer season. The summer traveler and the Chicago Exposition receive attention in "If You go to the Fair," by Mrs. M. P. Handy; "Some Smart Traveling Suits," by Mrs. Mallon, and "The Art of Traveling Easily," by Ruth Ashmore. Women who are interested in equestrianism will appreciate the page devoted to their hobby, in which the leading article by Mr. H. C. Merwin, on "When Woman Takes the Reins," is supplemented by some practical suggestions on "Dressing for the Ride." Palmer Cox contributes a page of fun and frolic, this time taking his "Brownies" through Italy. The description of decoration of "The Back of an Upright Piano," by James Thomson, will be found valuable, as will the page of "Household Hints for Summer" and Miss Parloa's "Care of Cutlery and Glass." Other Articles are Miss Hooper's "Remodeling Last Year's Gowns," "The Summer's New Hats," by Mrs. Mallon, "Planning a Home Wedding," by Helen Jay, "Sketching from nature," by Maude Haywood, and "Life in the Invalid's Room," by Elizabeth Robinson Scovil. Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Mrs Bottome and Eben E. Rexford all add attractiveness to an issue that goes out to its hundreds of thousands of readers in a dainty cover, exquisitely illustrated by W. Hamilton Gibson. Published by The Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia for ten Cents per number.
