Big Men and Little Folks.

"Why, some men are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them," said the self-complacent Malvolio. He might have added that some assume greatness and vaunt their own superiority by estimating as "Little Folks" all who fail to give assent to their views.

It is in the minds of many little folks that the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath, which is recognized in the statutes of many of the States, is being invaded unnecessarily and that somewhere a limit should be set to these encroachments. These little folks believe that the Creator set apart one day in seven and commanded it to be kept holy. They may not be fully agreed as to the extent of the modification of the methods of its observance introduced under the teachings of Him whom christians worship as the Redeemer of men, but its sacred character is recognized, to a greater or less extent, throughout christendom. To repudiate this as the character of the day is, in a measure, to repudiate its author and His authority to command His creatures.

Men of assumed greatness of intellect appear to have a penchant for enforcing argument with illustration. Hence, reference to the Hampdens and the Pembrokes, and the reiteration of the assertion "that the slaves in this country were "emancipated in disregard of legal and sacred texts." If the latter assumption be correct, why have we a 13th amendment to the Constitution of the United States?

But the Hampdens and the Pembrokes, and the Washingtons, the Madisons, the Websters, the Grants, the Gladstones and other little folks, of later days, as well, who were all lovers of liberty, respected and upheld the Christian Sabbath, probably regarding it not only as a divine institution, but as a great conservator of Liberty. True it is, at any rate, that in the two great countries in which it has the fullest recognition, the personal safety, security, rights and liberty of the individual citizen are most sacredly preserved. England and America, the freest of the nations of the earth, have been the foremost in upholding the Sabbath as a sacred institution.

The gravest innovations upon its sanctity in this country have been made in the section into which the customs of Continental Europe have been introduced, and in the city where guardians of the public peace were destroyed by death-dealing bombs thrown by the hands of anarchists in the name of the Liberty that is invoked against the opponents of Sunday opening. Few, if any of the men accessory to the assassination were Americans or Englishmen. In the great city of New York, on the other hand, where Sabbath observance is under the regulation of law, the anarchistic element has found little foothold and Haymarket assassinations have had no place.

Little folks may be pardoned for believing that the examples cited are favorable to the contention that the truest liberty of the citizen is conserved by conforming the laws of the State to the Divine Law and recognizing in human enactments man's obligation to obey the commands of his Creator, among which is the iryunction to "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Even those who estimate themselves as intellectually great men because they discard this obligation and regard as only "Little Folks" those who accept it as binding upon their consciences, might, by a little observation, learn that the greatest safeguard to their persons and property is found in the prevalence of christian churches and christian worship throughout the land. A churchless community, as a rule, is a lawless community, and there is no real liberty without law to restrain the vicious and protect the weak.

And so, after all, the subject of the Sunday opening of the World's Fair resolves itself into a question of maintaining at least some public show of respect for a day set apart for such observance by the Creator himself. That the local laws of Illinois permit its flagrant violation is a matter of supreme regret; and not less is it to be regretted that the Chief Justice of the United States, himself a citizen of the place where such violations are notorious, should have found no warrant for enforcing the obligations of a contract against the Sunday opening. The decision, however, does not change the moral aspect of the question, or make the Sunday running of variety theaters, on the World's Fair Grounds, any less reprehensible and obnoxious to the christian sentiment of the country. It is certainly no violation of law, or transgression of the rights of anybody, to withhold patronage from an institution so conspicuous in its hostility to a principle generally recognized by this christian sentiment, whether that course take the form of a boycott, or individual action.

Under the decision of the Chief Justice the gates are open, but Attorney General Olney, it is said, will advise that the sum of six hundred thousand dollars of the five million appropriation remaining unpaid, be retained in the Treasury, and will institute proceedings to recover a million, nine hundred thousand dollars paid to the managers of the Fair. The remainder was put into souvenir coins and is regarded as beyond the reach of legal process. Other injunction proceedings to close the gates have been begun by John Wanamaker and other stockholders of the Fair, upon the ground that a severe financial loss will result from the determination to keep them open.

Big men may regard these proceedings as puerilities, but they at least indicate the purpose of the "Little Folks," to make their protests against Sunday opening as emphatic as possible.

Four persons, three women and one man, perished in a fire at Duluth, Minn., on Tuesday night.

A Correction.

"A reiterate with greater emphasis that there was no resignation, even though the SENTINEL did carefully repeat it last week."

The above is an extract from a letter of Mr. Frank J. Devilbiss, of New Windsor, published in the Advocate last week, and has reference to the question of the resignation of Postmaster Drach. It is quoted for the purpose of calling attention to and correcting the intimation that the SENTINEL repeated the story of the resignation in its issue of the 10th inst. Not a word was said by the SENTINEL on the subject, in that issue. Mr. Drach's letter of resignation was published on May 27th, and the SENTINEL had then heard no intimation that it had not been mailed to the Department, nor has it heard anything to that effect since, except the assertion of Mr. Devilbiss. The letter was published and commented upon in good faith, but the opinion was then expressed that if the resignation "had not been tendered a vacancy would have been made." If, as Mr. Devilbiss states, "there was no resignation," the SENTINEL's opinion on that point is fully verified, and, as then asserted, "it is very manifest that the present administration has no love for the brave men who endangered their lives to save the country."

Mr. Devilbiss, in attributing to the SENTINEL a repetition of the story of the resignation, probably had in mind a communication on the subject, signed "A Civilian," which appeared in the SENTINEL of the 10th inst. Reference to that communication, however, does not disclose any very clear declaration on the particular point in question, and it can hardly be said its author confidently asserted that the resignation had been sent.

This explanation is made for the sake of accuracy, and not because the matter is of very great importance. The SENTINEL only referred to it originally for the purpose of emphasizing its opinion that service and suffering in the cause of the Union would not be a recommendation to the present administration, and that is about all there is in it. The controversy between Mr. Devilbiss and "A Civilian" is a side issue which we trust will not be permitted to divert attention from the real point involved in the subject.

We have been informed that the paragraph setting forth the purposes of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, upon which the Advocate predicated a long article last week, in opposition to the institution, has long been abrogated and that there are no companies, battalions or regiments connected with the order. There are commanderies, the members of which wear chapeaux and regalia and are armed with swords, but they are not of a military character. Our information comes from a well posted member of the order. If correct, the Advocate's labored argument against the order was a pure waste of ammunition. From the best information obtainable we are sure there is no politics in it. In Pennsylvania, where the order has an extensive membership, the chief officer is a Democrat. A Democratic member assures us he has never heard politics referred to in connection with it. Our neighbor need not be apprehensive that it is a Republican trick to overthrow the Democratic party. That event may be confidently anticipated without the assistance of any organized bodies outside or inside the Republican ranks. The people will do it.

United States Senator Leland Stanford, of California, died suddenly of apoplexy, at his home at Menlo Park, in that State, Tuesday night. His valet found him dead at midnight. He was in the 70th year of his age, having been born in Albany county, N. Y., March 9th, 1824. He was one of the richest men in the country, his fortune being estimated at twenty-five to fifty millions of dollars. He was pre-eminently a man of affairs. The annual wine product of his vineyards is said to be nearly a million and a half gallons. His real estate embraced a large amount of property in San Francisco and large tracts of land throughout the State. He was an extensive breeder of blooded horses, having at one time 900 on his stock farm. He leaves a widow, but no children, his only son having died some years ago. He founded and endowed the Stanford University, with twenty millions of dollars, to his son's memory. He was a Republican and his successor will be appointed by the Governor of California, who is of the same political faith.

The Democratic State Central Committee has called a State convention to be held in Baltimore, September 27th, to nominate a candidate for Comptroller. The convention to nominate a candidate for Chief Judge, and also a candidate for Associate Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, will meet in this city on Thursday, August 10th.

Edward Koontz, of Frederick, is said to be the coming man for Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue for Carroll and Frederick counties. This is rough on Ex-Deputy Krise, who served considerably less than four years in the place during Mr. Cleveland's first term, and is again an applicant.

Twenty-eight pension examiners were dropped from the service on Wednesday by Secretary Smith, upon the recommendation of Commissioner Lochren. Mr. James P. Matthews, of this State, was one of the number. All are Republicans.

Collector Marine has recently made several appointments to places in the customs service, all the appointees being Democrats. Is he bidding for retention to the end of his term?

The 1893 edition of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's annual book of Summer Excursion Routes has just been issued. It is tastefully gotten up and presents in a practical and comprehensive manner about four hundred popular summer resorts from which excellent selections may be made for either limited trips or extended sojourns during the summer and early fall months. The great variety of routes suggested, the complete schedules of rates, the graphic and exhaustive descriptions of the different places, the explanatory maps and the illustrations, make this volume a most valuable guide. Copies of this book may be obtained at any ticket office of the Pennsylvania Railroad on payment of ten cents, or upon application to the General Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railroad, Philadelphia, it will be forwarded upon the receipt of twenty cents.

For the SENTINEL.

"Ichabod."

MR. EDITOR:—In the Advocate of 3rd inst., over the signature "Ichabod," the following communication appeared:

The announcement through the columns of the SENTINEL that our postmaster resigned, fell very flat upon our community. The letter of resignation alleged to have been sent to the Department, we think was "the letter that never came." Although projected "better than he knew," it was reported something after his peremptory removal. The G. A. R. Men got matters muddled. Fourth Assistant P. M. General Maxwell knows no East, no West, no North, no South, nor even a G. A. R. who bared his breast to a merciless foe "in the hour of the Nation's peril," and our Postmaster met the common fate of all. Surely we regret the letter of resignation was not received by the modest Assistant Postmaster General in time to have relieved him of this "embarrassing" duty, oet doubtless great supplication will ascend for his "continued good health" and "successful administration" of his affairs. A clean case of decapitation, gentlemen, decapitation! Court-martialled in—precipitatedly out. Thou art fallen. ICHABOD.

New Windsor, Md.

In the SENTINEL of the 10th inst. you kindly published some reflections of mine concerning this communication which have drawn a reply from its author over his own signature. Upon that reply I have no comments to make, except to admit my inability to get at the meaning of some of its high sounding phrases. The invincibility of a "lack of logic and an abysmal deficiency of common sense," is an observation too profound for my limited comprehension, nor can I understand how an organization can "usurp its true sphere."

I do think, however, that the tone and spirit of this latter communication confirm my judgment of the first and fully justify the comments I made upon it through the columns of the SENTINEL by your courtesy in allowing me that privilege. That the readers of the SENTINEL may have an opportunity to judge of the matter for themselves the reply to those comments is hereto appended without further remark. Here it is:

In the SENTINEL of last week, "A Civilian" bristles with indignation at the facts I mentioned the week before, which seem to have touched the nerve of special sensibility. This is invincible, even though he be not "distorted personally," that he displays a lack of logic and an abysmal deficiency of common sense. He would have us believe he does not possess the discriminating sense between personality and argument. Imputing my motives, without reasoning my premises, savors of cheap wits. Far be it from my object to "slur" any one, but simply to state facts. My article was not intended to make the ex-postmaster an enemy, neither was it to convert a friend to me. I do not wish to advertise myself in that particular. There are many noble men in the G. A. R, whose blood, although now bought with a price, stained the soil for American freedom, yet when an organization usurps its true sphere, and in numberless instances becomes a political tool, it stands pro tanto as a reproach to American civilization. No one, be he spirit or human, entertains higher esteem for the man who fought "in the Nation's peril" than I, yet sweet Charity should not temper justice, nor dethrone judgment, and give a verdict of acquittal to the traverser because he faced the Rebels at Appomattox.

I reiterate with greater emphasis that there was no resignation, even though the SENTINEL did carefully repeat it last week. It was a removal; only this, and nothing more. Col. sent the letter too late, or never sent it, and the modest General Maxwell, at the suggestion of his constituents, with the one graphic sweep of the pen engrossed, "Removed" across the expiring Commission, and the "Crack of doom" was heard. This I can prove. And it is surprising to every one but "A Civilian" that a gentleman so readily embarrassed as General Maxwell, would, peremptory remove a Union Soldier, after having received his letter of resignation, especially when a bid for tenure of office could be plainly read between the lines. Verily, General Maxwell is not the urbane and sympathetic official as delineated in the letter that never came, nor went. "O mystery of a blind, remorseless fate!"

This is the last I desire to say about the last stage of the most unprincipled act of political poltroonery ever played in our county. FRANK J. DEVILBISS.

New Windsor, June 15.

If you will kindly give the aforegoing a place in the SENTINEL I will be your debtor? A CIVILIAN.

New Windsor, June 21.

Miss Borden Acquitted.

The jury in the case of Miss Lizzie Borden, accused of murdering her father and step-mother, at Fall River, Mass., in September last, promptly rendered a verdict of acquittal, on Tuesday. The result was a foregone conclusion. The prosecution of Miss Borden was more like persecution, the Fall River police having acted throughout as strenuous partisans against her. The trial of the case demonstrated that she was an extremely illused woman. About all the ground for suspecting her was the inability of the stupid police authorities to account for the murder except upon the theory of her guilt, and they do not seem to have hesitated to commit perjury to secure the confirmation of that theory by a verdict against her. Fortunately she was ably defended and has not only been declared not guilty but well-nigh proved innocent. Public opinion at the outset, misled by police misstatements, was against her, but the scene in the court-room at New Bedford, when the verdict was announced, clearly exhibited a reversal of judgment and the public conviction that she is innocent of the horrible crime which the police authorities labored so zealously to fix upon her. The many spectators present broke into prolonged cheering, which the officers of the court made no attempt to suppress.

Miss Borden bore the severe ordeal of the trial with astonishing fortitude and courage, and her bearing was thoroughly consistent with the theory of her innocence. The crime of which she was accused, and has been triumphantly acquitted, is shrouded in mystery. The police authorities, by adopting a false theory and bending all their energies to confirm that judgment, have done absolutely nothing to discover the real perpetrator of the crime. Miss Borden's innocence has been practically demonstrated; but who committed the murders?

Frank Bowhan, a resident of Liberty, Frederick co., committed suicide at his home Tuesday evening by blowing off his head with a gun. He fastened the weapon to a fence and attached a string to the trigger, which he jerked with his foot. The remains were buried in Liberty cemetery at midnight. Bowhan was about 65 years old, unmarried, and a tailor by trade. The suicide is attributed to despondency over his condition. It is said he was a man of dissipated habits.

Lutheran Reunion.

A meeting composed of representatives from the English Lutheran churches of Baltimore and Washington, D. C., was held Tuesday night in St. Mark's Lutheran Church, on North Eutaw street, Baltimore, to prepare for the annual reunion of the denomination from the two cities and vicinity. There was a full attendance from all the churches, and much enthusiasm was manifested in the undertaking. The meeting was organized with Rev. L. M. Zimmerman, president of the Baltimore Lutheran Church Extension Society, as chairman; William L. Armiger, as secretary, and Henry C. Hines, as treasurer. After a full discussion it was determined to have the reunion at Bay Ridge, on Wednesday, July 26th, as that place could be conveniently reached from both cities.

A committee of five (three from Baltimore and two from Washington) was appointed to arrange a suitable program of exercises for the afternoon on the grounds. It was announced that Rev. Dr. David A. Day, from the Lutheran Mission, at Liberia, Africa, and Rev. L. B. Wolf, from the Guntur Mission, India, both of whom have but recently returned from their foreign fields, would take part in the exercises.

It was also determined to organize two large choruses from the choirs of the various Lutheran churches of the two cities, each under a separate leader, to furnish the music for the occasion.

Invitations were extended to the churches of Frederick and Westminster, to participate in the reunion.

A panic created by a false alarm of fire in a Russian Church, several days ago, resulted in the trampling to death of 136 persons, nearly all of whom were women. Twenty more were killed by leaping from the windows and numbers were injured.

Lightning struck a circus tent in which a performance was in progress, at River Falls, Wis., Wednesday afternoon, killing seven persons and injuring ten to thirty others.
