A recent test conducted on the Washington Boulevard by the Maryland traffic safety committee, convinced the committee that more men should be made available to the State Police in order to curb reckless driving according to a statement made by the enforcement committee chairman this week. Intensive patrolling by the six available State Police on that boulevard failed to curb the death toll and injuries from accidents. The educational campaign conducted by the committee has probably helped but only rigid police enforcement can curb the reckless driver who has no regard for law or the safety of the traveling public. A large State Police force will necessitate more expenditure of State funds and until such funds are available a more rigid patrolling of the roads by the present force may prove helpful. The large majority of arrests for violation of the motor vehicle laws are minor offenses where the violation in no way threatened the life or health of anyone. We believe that all laws should be enforced rigidly, yet if the limited number of State officers devote their efforts toward enforcing those laws that cause death and injury it might help correct the present condition until a large police force can be secured. It might also help if there was less thought of collecting money fines and more thought of the safety of the traveling public. We do not mean to put the entire burden or blame for the present conditions upon the police force as the motorist himself has a very definite responsible part, and can greatly assist in the work. Until the motor vehicle law violations are put in the same class as other law violations we cannot hope for a correction of conditions.

Next Wednesday is compulsory registration day for all men between the ages of 21 and 35 years inclusive. We have urged in these columns the necessity of registering and have pointed out the penalties for not registering. This registration is compulsory according to a proclamation which we received from President Roosevelt yesterday. The registration is made as easy as possible here as all regular places of registration in Kent County will be open from 7 A. M. to 9 P. M. They may register at the most convenient place and are not confined to their own precinct or their own county or even their own State. We again emphasize the fact that the registration is compulsory and the law provides a severe penalty for those who are within the age limit and do not comply with the law.
