Washington College Sports

By
"Bing" Hartnett

Washington College closed its doors today for its spring recess and will not open again until April 7th. All athletes, students, and what have you have gone off to some nook in the land to forget all for one short (but we hope) glorious week.

Coach Kibler and his men had luck with the weather this week and got in several good practise sessions, which are much needed, what with the opening game scheduled for Kibler Field on Friday, April 11th against American University.

This week was the first chance anyone had to take a glimpse at the 1941 crop of ballplayers. Before these outdoor sessions all predictions had to be made from data on paper, which many times proves fallacious, but with the candidates now working out day by day a more concrete estimation is gradually coming to front. Even now, though, little can be said about the new candidates by way of performance since they have not yet really limbered up enough to show their stuff.

At this early date, one of the most promising of the new rookies is Frank Samele, who made a great name for himself on the basketball court. Samele is a candidate for an outfield position and has a better than good chance of making of starting team. He is a hard hitter, hits to any field and handles himself well in the outer garden. Other promising candidates for outfield postions are Jim Stevens (who is "in" if he shows up to anywhere near his old form), Stoney McLaughlin, who shows promise at the plate but needs brushing up in the outfield, Ray Kirby, Robinson, Quillen and Messick. Of this aggregation we would pick from performance in these practise sessions Stevens, Samele, and Kirby to chase the fly balls.

A keen battle is going on for the position behind the plate between "Pickles" Munyan and Frank Gibe. Munyan, a sophomore, was held back from getting any experience last year by an injury he received before the first game. Frank Gibe, a freshman plays the infield or catches just about equally well. He seems to fit into the college picture better behind the plate. Gibe turned in a good year last season for West Nottingham Academy. As it is, Munyan and Gibe are out for their first season and one of the two will land the job—either one could hold it down but the question is which one and the boys are really working.

Another likely looking candidate from West Nottingham Academy is Dick Lynch, long and lanky pitcher who won every game he pitched in last year for the Academy. He has plenty of stuff on the ball and fair control. His main object in coming to Washington College was to play ball under Coach Tom Kibler and with such a spirit he may land a pitching berth. Maguire and Porter and several others have taken regular turns on the mound. Porter has an unorthodox delivery, tossing the ball completely behind his back before his pitch. He's interesting to watch. Much of Washington College's success depends on the ability of these boys. Selby and Rayne, the mainstays of the staff, are rounding into shape for the season.

The first string infield in practise sessions has seen Fetter on first base, Jim Bush on second, John Huff at shortstop nad Joe Bremer at third base. Bush remains the most erratic of the bunch. He looks like a million dollars one day and muffs easy grounders the next. When he's "on" no one can touch him in fielding around second base. Bremer and Fetter's value to the team is already known. Both are great fielders and Bremer is the hardest hitter on the team. Fetter is a little weak at the plate, but proved last year in several games that he comes through in the pitches. Bob Ruff saw duty for the first time at the Thursday session at shortstop position. He is battling with Hoff for that position, with O'Brien a candidate not out of the picture. It's that old feud of Huff and Ruff all over again. The shortstop position is pehraps the most wide open vacancy and most undecided on the entire team.

We see that Mike Kardash is still with the Orioles and no mention yet of his being farmed out. He may make the grade. Copple did not fare so well with the Pittsburgh Pirates and is reporting back to Harrisburg. Tough luck for "Lefty" but he's not through yet.

If oxalic and ammonio solutions are used with great care, ink stains often can be removed from fabrics with no loss of color of fabric.
