SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1895.

Less than three years ago the Harrison Administration was able to substitute two and a half per cent bonds for the four and a-halfs then coming due. Now, after two years of Democratic rule, the government can only borrow at a fifty per cent. advance on this rate. Truly the country is paying dearly for its new economic policy, and for the change so persistently thrust upon it by Democratic and Mugwump influences.

Technically speaking the new bonds about to be issued by the goverment are not sold, under the resumption act, but are to be used in purchasing gold, as provided by the Revised Statutes, Section 3700, which reads as follows: "The Secretary of the Treasury may purchase coin with any of the bonds or notes of the United States authorized by law, at such rates and upon such terms as he may deem most advantageous to the public interest." For all practical purposes, however, the effect is the same as if the bonds were sold for gold, instead of gold being purchased with the bonds; and neither could be done if the resumption act were not in force, It is said that Messrs. N. M. Rothschild & Sons, of London, have contracted to furnish 3,500,000 ounces of gold and take payment in the new bonds.

President Cleveland seems to be determined to discredit and depreciate the silver currency of the country. He has called for another gold loan, this time to bear interest at four per cent. The amount of the loan is to be sixty-two millions of dollars, one half of which, it is said, will be taken by foreign capitalists. It will command a sufficient premium to make the interest rate three and three-fourths per cent., payable in coin. Mr. Cleveland notifies Congress that if authority were given to specify payment of principal and interest in gold the loan could be floated at three per cent. This is officially declaring the existence of a premium value on gold, and it would not be surprising to see business generally forced to a gold basis and the depreciation of the paper and silver currency of the country.

The birthday of Abraham Lincoln, February 12th, was widely celebrated and many eloquent words were spoken in honor of his great character. The day is everywhere growing in interest as the country learns more and more of the simplicity, nobility and true greatness of the leader whose purity of life, tenderness of heart and wonderful ability shed lustre on American statesmanship and on the American name. In pure patriotism and consecrated devotion to principle and duty he was the equal of Washington, and in intellectual gifts his superior. He was, as Washington was not, a man of the people, sprung from the humblest station and in touch with the aspirations of the lowliest born. His name may well be linked in closest union with that of the great Liberator, and those who honor it honor themselves, as well, in the deed.

Hon. John L. Stevens, ex-minister to Hawaii, died at his home in Augusta, Maine, last week. Mr. Stevens was at Honolulu during the Revolution which overthrew the monarchy and substituted republican government in its stead. President Cleveland's Commissioner, Blount, reported that Mr. Stevens had lent his official influence and aid to the revolutionists, without which the movement would have been a failure. It is now well known that Blount obtained his information from adherents of the monarchy and Minister Stevens' own statement completely discredited the unreliable information upon which President Cleveland proceeded in his unsuccessful efforts to reinstate the dethroned queen. The death of Mr. Stevens revives the story, which, however, has never lost interest to the American people. The power displayed by the young republic, in suppressing the recent royalist insurrection, furnishes incidental proof that the people engaged in overthrowing the monarchy were amply able to accomplish that object without Minister Stevens' assistance.

Pleading for the Conspirators.

Many leading Americans, among whom are several Republican Senators, appear to think that the reputation of President Dole, and of the young republic of Hawaii will be clouded and tarnished if the death penalty be visited upon any of the conspirators who recently attempted to overthrow the established government by violence and force. Why this should be so is not very clear. The conspirators were guilty of a capital crime under the laws of Hawaii. They engaged in the conspiracy with a full understanding of the consequences of failure. They knew that their lives would be legally forfeited and that they could only avoid the penalty with certainty by making their revolt successful. They failed and a number of them have been tried by court martial, found guilty and sentenced to be hanged.

While it might be a matter of regret if these sentences were carried into effect, it would scarcely be a cause for impugning the motives or the humanity of the Hawaiian authorities. Mr. Thurston, the Hawaiian minister at Washington, in a timely review of the situation at Honolulu, shows that the authorities have hitherto acted with great forbearance toward the leading insurrectionists, and recites a number of executions in the United States to show that the imposition of the extreme penalty of the law in the case of Wilcox and others would be entirely justifiable. In fact, it might be an act of humanity to make him and his fellow-leaders an example to others. Leniency and forebearance now might embolden the malcontents to future conspiracies against the government, and cause the loss of many more precious lives. The death of young Carter deprived the young republic of the services of one who might have conferred honor and benefit upon his country. It does not appear that the execution of those guilty of causing his death would be a very great crime against humanity.

Thus far President Dole and his advisers have acted with prudence and skill. They are conversant with the situation in Hawaii and the conditions surrounding the government and should be given credit for a purpose to do that which will best promote the future stability and peace of their country. While we shall rejoice if justice be tempered with mercy in the cases of the condemned conspirators, and of the exqueen whose complicity in the effort to overthrow the republic and restore the monarchy is admitted, we shall not regard the exercise of severity and the imposition of the extreme penalty of the law, in any case, an act of inhumanity.

In the case of the queen there is every reason to believe that the worst that can befall her will be banishment from the country, a fate which she richly deserves, considering her own bloodthirsty purpose to behead the republican leaders at the time she anticipated her restoration to the throne, by the assistance of President Cleveland, as a moral certainty.

Clean Men Needed.

From the Balto. American.

In Chauncey Depew's brilliant address on Lincoln there was a significant sentence. "In the midst of a community which drank," he said, "Lincoln was a temperance man; in the midst of a community which swore, Lincoln was free from blasphemy; in the midst of a community not highly moral, Lincoln was as pure as an angel." A certain allowance is, of course, to be made for the zeal of the eulogist, but the fact remains that Lincoln was a clean man, with a clean moral record and a clean adherence to principle.

A soiled life, however great it may be in ability, always has its weakness. The old idea of wild oats is gone. Sowing them means a crop of punishment. On the other hand, a clean life carries the largest influence, and one of the most noticeable tendencies of the day is the general recognition of the fact. Purity societies are springing up in the churches. All positions of trust and profit go by preference to the young men who are clean in their lives. There is always need for clean men, and if the boys of this generation are wise they will keep themselves pure.

Death of Rev. W. T. D. Clemm.

Rev. W. T. D. Clemm, an aged minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died in Baltimore on Tuesday last. Mr. Clemm was pastor of the First M. E. Church, Annapolis, at the breaking out of the war of secession. He was a native of Tennessee, and in the early days of the war sympathized with the South to such a degree as to frequently engage in discussion as an advocate of the right of secession. The writer frequently combatted his arguments, and heated controversies ensued. In the midst of one of these arguments Mr. Clemm suddenly exclaimed: "Let us stop this. I am convinced that I have been wrong in my views of the subject. There is not, there cannot be, any right of secession on the part of a State of this Union. It simply means political destruction. I cannot help a feeling of sympathy for the Southern people in this struggle, but they are in the wrong and I can no longer refrain from acknowledging it." From that moment he assumed a conservative position, but later became a strong Unionist, and subsequently expressed regret that he had not done so at an earlier period.

Mr. Clemm was one of the oldest ministers of the Baltimore Annual Conference, having reached his eighty-first year. He was a genial, lovable man, inclined to radical views on moral questions and fearless in their expression. He was an entertaining speaker and possessed a keen intellect, and though he passed away at a ripe old age his presence will be greatly missed in the circle in which he was ever an element of interest and an inspiration.

Nine Men Tried for Murder.

The strange spectacle of nine men on trial for their lives was witnessed in the Criminal Court of Baltimore last week. The accused were all colored men, and the charge against them was the murder of Constable Edward Carver, at a store in Westover, Somerset county, on the night of June 7th, 1894. The accused, it was alleged, began to raise a disturbance, when Constable Carver, who happened to be present, ordered them to desist and threatened to arrest them, whereupon they seized him, thrust him out of the store and with knives, razors and bludgeons, stabbed, cut and clubbed him to death. There were ten of the colored men involved in the murder, but one of them, Isaac Kemp, who was regarded as the ringleader in the crime, was subsequently taken out of the jail at Princess Anne and lynched. The nine now on trial in Baltimore were: John Handy, Leonard Conquest, George Holden, George Parker, John Williams, Thomas Smith, George Brown, George Harman, Alfred Conquest.

John Handy, George Holden and George Parker were found guilty of murder in the second degree; Leonard and Alfred Conquest of manslaughter and the other four, Thomas Smith, Geo. Brown, John Williams and George Holman, were acquitted.

A remarkable murder case has been on trial in Minneapolis, Minn., during the past week. A man named Harry Hayward is accused of the murder of a Miss Ging, a handsome young milliner, for the sake of securing an insurance on her life. The principal witnesses for the prosecution are a man named Blixt, who confessed to having been employed by Hayward to assist in the commission of the murder, and Adry Hayward, a brother of the accused, who testified that Harry endeavored to induce him to commit the murder. If the testimony is true Harry Hayward is one of the most hardened wretches in the world and could commit a murder with as little feeling as most persons would have in decapitating a chicken.

Conductor Samuel Horn, of the Western Maryland Railroad, had a rough experience during the great storm last week. His train was snowbound for sixty-two hours, in a cut near Greenvillage, on the Baltimore and Cumberland Valley Division, and Conductor Horn fell through a culvert three times and was badly hurt about his head and legs. He also fell off his train.

The Great February Storm.

The great February storm, a local account of which will be found elsewhere in the SENTINEL, extended all over the country from Maine to Florida and west beyond the Mississippi. Through Illinois and Iowa the temperature ranged from 20° to 30° below zero. Railroads and county thoroughfares were blockaded and travel seriously obstructed. The most remarkable feature of the storm was its severity in the South, where the damage done was incalcuable. The following telegrams tell the story, briefly; amplification is unnecessary:

Wilmington, N. C., Feb. 8.—With one exception this is the coldest day here in 24 years. Only about one-fourth of an inch of snow has fallen, but the wind ranged from 40 to 46 miles an hour near midnight, and it kept at this rate for several hours. At 8 o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 10° above. On January 6, 1884, it stood at 9°. Ice is thick enough here for skating. The weather bureau predicts colder to-morrow and Sunday.

Charleston, S. C., Feb. 8.—The temperature at 7.30 this morning was 12° above zero, the lowest for any February day on record in this vicinity. High northwest winds raged the entire night at an average of 26 miles an hour. It has moderated considerably. All tender plants above ground have been killed. Strawberry blossoms are killed and the berry will be delayed four weeks beyond the usual time. It will be April before the first berries ripen. The cabbage crop will average only 25 per cent. of a crop. Lettuce, marrowfat peas and smaller varieties are all killed. The destruction is universal over the Southern trucking section and extends to Florida.

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 8.—This is the coldest day in the history of Savannah, as far as official records can determine. Early in morning the thermometer at the weather bureau registered 12° above zero. In the suburbs of the city the mercury fell to 6° and the outlook is for equally as cold if not colder weather to-night and to-morrow. Much suffering exists among the poorer class of whites and among the negroes whose houses are not built for severe cold and who are not supplied with fuel and proper clothing. The entire country is frozen. Truckers had little in ground to lose.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 8.—Alabama is experiencing the coldest weather for thirty years. Another light snow fell last night and a high northwest wind still prevails. The thermometer stood 8° above zero at 9 o'clock this morning. The wind last night broke many plateglass windows here. Business in the small towns is practically suspended. The loss of cattle is heavy.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 8.—The mercury here dropped to zero this morning. The reports from different sections of Georgia indicate that the oats crop throughout the State has been entirely destroyed by the freeze. In counties where the last cold spell did not hurt or only partially damaged the crop, the entire crop this time has been killed. In many sections the crop has been replanted and has been killed for the second time

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 8.—Snow fell here for four hours this morning, the first time on record. The mercury fell to 24° above last night, but rose slowly to-day. The orange trees, which had begun to grow freely, are all killed, and the damage to truck and fruit farms is enormous.

Middlesboro', Ky., Feb. 8.—The mercury fell to 15° below zero this morning. The wind is blowing a gale from the northwest. Suffering among the poor is intense.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 8.—It is the coldest here with one exception in twenty-five years, the thermometer averaging six degrees below zero. The river is very low here and freezing over.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 8.—The thermometer registers 3° below zero, the lowest since 1886. Howling northwest wind.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 8.—The thermometer at the State College weather observatory registered 14° below at six this morning, the lowest since 1872.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 8.—Two and two-tenths degrees below zero, the coldest since January 8, 1886. The river is full of ice, and local packets remain at the bank.

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 8.—Palm Beach on Lake Worth, was the warmest point on the mainland of the whole United States this morning, the mercury showing 35 degrees above zero. On top of the freezing temperature last night Tampa reports snow falling at daybreak, and at 9 o'clock the snow-storm was increasing. This is unprecedented in that Florida latitude. The mercury fell to 14 degrees at Titusville, 22 degrees at Tampa, 28 degrees at Jupiter. At Key West and Palm Beach the mercury dropped from 54 degrees to 35 degrees. These were the only points in the State above freezing. Orange and other fruit trees are probably all killed outright except the oldest and toughest of them, for they were naked, budding and full of sap, and therefore particularly susceptible to cold. The loss will aggregate many millions of dollars. The average life of a tree is thirty years, which means fully twenty prosperous crops for trees now beginning to bear. All early vegetables are ruined and 100,000 boxes of strawberries which would have been had are now beyond hope.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 8.—The thermometer stood at 8 degrees to-day, the lowest point since records have been kept in Columbia.

Information has been received in Baltimore that the Indianapolis court having charge of the distribution of the Iron Hall funds will sign the decree required by the Baltimore Circuit Court of a prerequisite to sending to Indianapolis the money in the hands of the Maryland receivers. In accordance with the decree prepared here the Maryland branches of the order are not to be suspended for shortage, and the Maryland members are to share equally in the distribution of the fund with other members. The money will not be sent to Indianapolis until a certified copy of the Indianapolis decree has been received in Baltimore.

The Coast of Nova Scotia was visited by a tidal wave during the prevalence of the great storm last week, and much damage was done. A hundred houses were swept away.

The latest action of the House of Representatives on the financial question was to vote against the issue of bonds payable in gold. The vote was 120 for to 167 against.

Letter From Pine Grove, Pa.

EDITOR OF SENTINEL:—I presume it is natural for any of us when absent from home that our thoughts sometimes take us back to home and friends, and especially so in times of disaster or distress, when one is apt to wonder whether all is well at home. I have been located in Lebanon and Schuylkill counties, Pa., since the beginning of the present month and have just passed safely through the heaviest snow blockade that has visited this part of Pennsylvania for a quarter of a century, and from what meager reports we have received here I am led to believe the blockade has been general throughout the Middle and New England States. Travel has been almost entirely suspended here since Thursday night, 7th inst. I arrived at this place from Jonestown the evening of the 9th, having been nearly three hours on the way, the entire distance being only seventeen miles. The train consisted of three engines and two cars. One of the cars was used to haul the snow shovelers, about thirty in all. The train hands had been out for thirty-eight consecutive hours. It is thought nearly all the roads in this section will be able to run through trains by the eleventh.

During the month of January I was in Susquehanna, Wayne, Munroe and Pike counties, in Northeastern Pennsylvania. Portions of all four of them are thinly settled. I took the time to go down in a coal mine at Forest City, in Susquehanna county. The mines are being worked by electricity and it is supposed before very long the mine mule will be a thing of the past. It is hard for any one to imagine the miles and miles of railroad leading off in all directions, from one to three hundred feet under ground, with an electric light plant, blacksmith shop, barns, engines for hoisting &c., and perhaps not more than from twenty-five to fifty feet lower down will be another of the same magnitude, as a number of the mines you might say are two stories and those in the lower mines can sometimes hear those digging in the upper ones. While it is not a very clean or pleasant place to go into I think any one that has an opportunity will never regret a visit to a coal mine. Pike county is noted for its long miles, rattlesnakes and Democrats, as out of a voting population of sixteen hundred the Democratic candidates are generally elected by about thirteen hundred majority. But at the last election this majority was reduced nearly one-half. There is also abundance of other game besides Democrats. Pheasants, quail, and rabbits are very plentiful. I would recommend Pike county as a good place for our Carroll county sportsmen to visit for good gunning. Deer and bears are also quite plentiful in some sections. There are a number of small streams in which trout are plentiful; so the tourist can amuse himself with rod or gun.

Trusting that I will not weary your many readers by what may be to the most of them a very uninteresting letter, and also hoping by the time this reaches you the snow blockade, with all its disasters and discomforts, may be a thing of the past and that Grover C. may have found purchasers for all his last issue of bonds, I remain yours, &c.

J. G. S.

It begins to look as if Mr. Booze, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Third District of this State, will be able to demonstrate his election over Hon. Harry Wells Rusk, who was apparently counted in by the election officers after the repeaters had done their share towards giving him a majority.

Snow fell on Thursday in New Orleans and in many parts of Texas. At San Antonio the snow was six inches deep, the heaviest ever known there. It was twelve inches deep at Galveston.

The proposition to resubmit the prohibition amendment in North Dakota has been defeated.

AN OPEN LETTER.

WESTMINSTER, April 10, 1890.

Mr. Jos. B. Boyle:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but temporary relief. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try your Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost instant relief, but a permanent cure. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am,

Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
