WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.

W. L. W. Seabrook - Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1895.

The Republicans carried the city of York, Pa., at the election on Tuesday last.

Selling four per cent. coin bonds at 104 when they are worth 116 and are eagerly taken at the latter figure is a specimen of financiering savoring of incapacity or something worse. Yet that is a fact alleged against President Cleveland and his Secretary of the Treasury. Somebody must have pulled the wool over their eyes.

It is reported that Collector Shaw has decided in the interest of party expediency, to give nearly all the remaining places at his disposal to the counties. Out of the forty-four places in the unclassified service, the city has already secured twenty-seven or about two-thirds. Consequently, it has been decided to shut down on city applicants and give their rural brothers a chance.

In a paragraph of eighteen lines in last week's Advocate about as much political vindictiveness is concentrated as could well be compressed into that brief space. Some one suggests that the SENTINEL should reply to it. To what end? Abuse is always the weapon of those who are without other resource, and there can be no reply to such a diatribe except supreme contempt. As to its glaring misstatements they are but repetitions of similar declarations heretofore thoroughly controverted by the SENTINEL.

If President Cleveland should read the leading editorial in last week's Advocate it would, with all his avoirdupois and personal greatness, make him feel exceedingly small. Such drastic criticism from a Democratic source must be, to the great man, exceedingly humiliating. On the other hand it is doubtless pleasant reading to the chief Maryland Democratic boss, who was so unsparingly denounced last fall by the Democratic convention of Carroll county, a convention in which the Cleveland wing of the party in the county was in the ascendency with the concurrence and aid, we believe, of the editor of the Advocate. No wonder Democracy is bewildered and unable to tell "where it is at?"

Philadelphia Overwhelmingly Republican.

The Republicans made a clean sweep at the municipal election in Philadelphia on Tuesday, electing Charles F. Warwick mayor, over Ex-Governor Pattison, by something like 60,000 majority. Pattison ran as a reform candidate and had the support of some Republicans. He expected to carry the city by 20,000 majority and give further impetus to his Presidential boom. But alas! the fates and a good many Democratic votes also, were against him. The Democratic party seems to be so thoroughly discredited that its own adherents in times past are not willing to invest it with authority, even in municipal affairs, when the best opportunity to do so is offered. The Republicans seem to have elected not only the mayor by an overwhelming majority, but to have elected all the police magistrates, select councilmen, and well nigh all of the 79 common councilmen.

The Naked Facts.

The following from the New York Tribune of Monday, 18th inst., clearly and forcibly outlines the course of Secretary Carlisle's financial schemes, backed, if not instigated, by President Cleveland:

"The pretended 'option,' which was not an option, expires to-day. Nobody ever had an idea that it could be used in time, or was anything else than an attempt to deceive. Facts indicate that the gold bond message was itself a sham and a fraud, never intended or expected to accomplish anything except to gull voters and cover a questionable contract. The Democratic record, so confusing that few remember its details, puts the matter in a strong light, and is a sufficient answer to every pretence that Republicans have hindered good legislation.

"It begins with the President's indorsement of Secretary Carlisle's elaborate scheme for wildcat State banks, destruction of National banks and suppression of legal tenders. The attempt to railroad it through without a day for real consideration was beaten, and the measure died as soon as its real nature was known. But it blocked the way until December 20, when a canvass showed that it would be beaten in the House by 50 majority, and a substitute was reported on the 21st. This substitute, Bill No. 2, provided for no bonds, and for no retirement of legal-tender notes, which the President has declared absolutely necessary for safety, except with 'surplus evenue' which did not exist, but it in no way abated warfare on National banks. As late as January 3 this was demanded by the President as 'the clear duty of the House,' was adopted January 7 in Democratic caucus, 81 to 59, and was defeated January 9, 123 Democrats and 1 Republican voting in favor of a rule to shut off all chance of amendment, while 41 Democrats, 7 populists and 82 Republicans voted against a gag law for a bill so bad.

"Yet the President and his tools stuck to this bill, and were canvassing and contriving means of winning silver support for it as late as January 25. Thus nearly two months of the session were thrown away in the desperate effort to force through the wildcat State banking scheme, and to break down National banks. This scheme has driven $60,000,000 out of the Treasury, and provided for no issue of bonds, gold or other, and not a thing was proposed by the Administration to defend the reserve. Just two-thirds of the Democrats voted for this, the worst of all the bills proposed, and the only one which a majority of Democrats supported.

"A Washington telegram noticed the presence of Mr. August Belmont at the Capitol about January 25, and Democratic newspapers afterward mentioned that his visit 'had doubtless prepared the authorities for what might be expected' ('New-York Times,' February 1), and the bankers here had for some days assumed that Belmont & Co. would lead in a syndicate to place a large block of bonds abroad. President Cleveland, according to a dispatch to The Tribune, had told Mr. Belmont, before the gold bond message was sent in, to go ahead and form a syndicate to take bonds. The message was sent in on the 28th, and with it Administration Bill No. 3, introduced by Mr. Springer. Before there had been time to report the bill to the House, the contract with Messrs. Belmont and others was virtually made. Secretary Curtis was sent on, leaving Washington on the morning of January 30th, conferred with Messrs. Belmont and Morgan, and returned with their agreement January 31, and the same day a Washington dispatch to 'The New-York Sun' announced that an issue of bonds had been decided upon and orders given for more men to print them, beginning the next day. Full accounts of the Belmont contract were published February 1. There was not even a decent pretence of desire that the bond bill should pass. On the 29th it was amended in committee; the next day Democrats were told that the Administration did not consider it satisfactory, but it was reported February 1, the very day the contract was announced in all the papers.

"This was a bill to redeem and retire greenbacks, with unlimited issues of fifty-year gold bonds, amended to make them redeemable in ten years. The second section provided that greenbacks should be cancelled, and the fifth that duties should be paid in gold only, but the latter was omitted by amendment. The third provided for National bank circulation to the full value of bonds deposited, but the fourth took away the value of circulation by cutting off notes below $10 each, and providing for small silver certificates instead. It is not to their credit that any Republicans voted for such a bill. But under the clamor and the fuss that was raised for gold bonds, as if it were not perfectly known by a canvass of Senators February 2 that no such bill could be passed, 44 Republicans voted February 7 with 91 Democrats for this dangerous measure, while 95 Democrats, 10 Populists and 57 Republicans voted against it. Further proof of the fraudulent pretence that the bill was desired to relieve the Treasury was given by the defeat of Mr. Reed's substitute, which proposed 3 per cent bonds to maintain the gold reserve and 3 per cent. certificates redeemable after two years for the deficiency in current expenditures. Only 8 Democrats and 101 Republicans voted for this, while 178 Democrats and 10 Populists voted against it.

"The next day President Cleveland announced by message the bond contract, which, as several dispatches had bluntly stated, was to be kept back until after the vote. This contract included an option for gold bonds which would expire on the 18th. The Administration did not get its partisans to report until the 13th a resolution for substitution of gold bonds, which was beaten on the 14th, 89 Democrats voting for and 94 against it, with 10 Populists, while 51 Republicans voted for and 63 against it. It deserved to be beaten by a majority of both parties, for it was plainly never intended to be passed. Had it passed that day, just three working days were left for action in the Senate.

Every possibility of financial legislation was killed by the President's message proposing gold bonds to retire greenbacks and to deprive bank circulation of its value by substituting silver certificates for small notes. This message, delivered on the 28th, marks the beginning of a policy of false pretence, to cover up a contract for sale of bonds to a foreign syndicate, on the pretext that Congress would do nothing to relieve the Treasury. The President could have passed Mr. Reed's substitute February 7, for he could have added at least 50 Democratic votes to the 101 Republican votes had he not actually contracted with Mr. Belmont several days earlier. Down to the time that contract was made, every possibility of useful legislation was blocked by the wildcat banking bill, which the President demanded, though it contained no provision for bonds."

Death of Fred. Douglass.

Frederick Douglass, the celebrated colored orator, died very suddenly of heart failure at his home in Anacostia, a suburb of Washington, D. C., on Wednesday evening, aged 78 years. Douglass was born near Easton, Talbot county, Md., in February 1817. He was born a slave and belonged to Col. Lloyd, whose name he bore until he changed it to Douglass. The story of his life is like a romance. He was sent to Baltimore at the age of ten years and lived with his Master's married daughter. He learned to read and write by forming letters and words in the sand and on logs about the wharves, and getting the white boys with whom he played to tell him the names of the letters singly and the words they spelled when variously combined. When he reached the age of 21 years he forged a permit to ride on the P. W. & B. Railroad, and escaped to Philadelphia. He gradually rose to emminent distinction as one of the greatest orators in the country. He held several positions of trust and responsibility under the government and amassed considerable wealth by lecturing. His second wife, who survives him, is a white woman. He was, himself, a light mulatto, with massive frame and large head, crowned with a mass of woolly hair, as he himself described it. His mother was a negro slave and his father a white man.

Several citizens of Westminster remember a brilliant and highly entertaining lecture delivered by him in Odd Fellows' Hall, this city, about twenty-five years ago, under adverse circumstances, in which he sketched some of the leading incidents of his life. His little audience kept him speaking, by urgent requests, for two hours, and wanted to hear still more.

Capt. and Mrs. John W. Worth last Saturday evening celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of their marriage at their residence, No. 336 East Twentieth street, Baltimore. Captain Worth is chief of the inquiry division, Baltimore Postoffice, and has been connected with the Postoffice for about a quarter of a century. He is also assistant quartermaster general of the Department of Maryland, G. A. R.

Murder at Ellicott City.

Daniel F. Shea, a merchant of Ellicott City, was brutally murdered in his store in that place on Tuesday night. The crime was not discovered until 9 o'clock Wednesday night. Mr. Shea was seen putting up his store shutters about 9.30 Tuesday night and remarked to some one that he was going to Baltimore the following day. His store remained closed all day Wednesday and finally Chief of Police Vansant climbed to the front balcony and forced an entrance to the house where Mr. Shea lived alone. Descending to the store he found the merchant lying on the floor in a pool of blood, cold in death. His skull had been broken in several places with some kind of blunt instrument and the brain was oozing out. There were twenty-five wounds on his head. Jacob Henson, a young colored man employed by Mr. Shea to do chores about the store, has confessed that he committed the murder, but claims that it was done in a fight with the murdered man. As Mr. Shea's pockets were rifled and the money drawer overhauled by the murderer with his bloody hands there can be no doubt that his object was robbery.

Congressman Talbot is making good use of the few remaining weeks of his term, and is endeavoring to fix all the postmasterships in his district before March 4. His efforts are now directed towards securing a Democratic postmaster at Havre de Grace, to succeed Mr. Edward Hall, whose term does not expire until next year.

For the first time in many years the spectacle of men at work upon the streets of Baltimore, who are not Democrats, was witnessed last week. This is due to the provision of the ordinance placing the selection of the workmen in the hands of the City Councilmen.

For the SENTINEL.

The Other Side of the Question.

As the usual preliminary to an election, the agitation of the liquor question, has arisen, it is not deemed inappropriate to make some suggestions to those intemperate and mistaken advocates of an abolishment of one of the universally used gifts of Providence, but unfortunately sometimes abused, which latter arises not from the article itself but from a lack of proper training on the part of the parents and teachers of the young. All sumptuary laws hitherto passed have resulted in evasion, trickery and perjury, and when public sentiment is opposed to such radical schemes, a like result will always follow. If those clerical agitators would relinquish their abuse of those who choose to engage in a business not prohibited by law or morals, and make an endeavor to impress upon all they come in contact with, of the absurdity and degradation of over-indulgence, want of self will and personal respect, such a course ought to do good, if exercised at the right time and place. The course of continual fault-finding at the wrong end, results, as events have proved, only in confusion and more contrariety of opinion. It is absolutely no use at this late day to decry the use of an article used from time immemorial, and although Father Noah was overcome, his example in that respect must not be followed, but his remorse remembered, and only good effects will result—in other words it is the use and not the abuse which is allowed.

Various laws have been enacted to either restrict, abolish or diminish the traffic, such as prohibition, local option or high license, none of which has accomplished the aimed-at results. The fact is this—if a man wants a drink he wants it and will have it. A high license law was passed a short time ago for Philadelphia. The result by statistics now before me is, it is true, a reduction of saloons from 15,000 to 5,000, but a vast increase in drunkenness. Carroll county has a high license law, which was concocted by two or three small-fry politicians, and which has abolished one kind of saloon and converted the cross-road groceries into groggeries. Instead of a direct tax to support the public schools, they resort to the form of taxing one business for the support of another.

It would seem to most persons a great stretch of authority on the part of the various ministers who signed the communication in regard to the licensing of hotel and restaurant keepers, in that they anathematize all those who would presume to attest the character of the applicant; and certainly this sort of persecution will have anything but a favorable effect in diminishing the abuse of one of the articles provided by Providence for our use and benefit.

Your correspondent hopes the foregoing will have the effect of promoting a spirit of self-control upon the part of those who wish to indulge in a social glass occasionally, and also in less intemperate remarks on the part of those who by their denunciations only engender ill feeling and opposition.

THE INDEPENDENT, NEW YORK.

The first issue of The Independent for March will contain a symposium treating of the various interests of the South, by numbers of distinguishad statesmen and other writers, among whom are several U. S. Senators, members of the Cabinet, prominent editors and eminent clergymen. It will also contain a series of articles on the Industrial condition of the various Southern States, indicating opportunities for financial investment. Each State will be treated in a separate article by a member of Congress. The issue will certainly be a very useful and interesting one and should have a wide circulation. Single copies can be obtained for ten cents by addressing The Independent, 130 Fulton street, New York.

PETERSON FOR MARCH.

Continued improvements will be made in this publication, special effort being made to maintain a high rank in the literary portion without lowering at all the beauty of the illustrations and letter-press. Among the attractive literary menu for March will be an article by Dr. J. Howe Adams, of Philadelphia, on the university founded by Franklin. An article on the Vatican, copiously illustrated, many of the photographs being used for the first time, will be a prominent feature. Stephen B. Elkins, well known as a public man, will contribute an interesting and valuable paper. "A Painter of Western Character," with illustrations by Charles Craig, is an interesting article dealing with the life-work of an eminent artist in the far Western States. The issue for March promises to be better than any issue yet given to the public, and will strengthen the opinion freely expressed that "Peterson is by far the best dollar-a-year magazine published." Address The Peterson Magazine, 109 and 111 Fifth Avenue, New York.

A REVOLUTION IN CHEAP SOLID LITERATURE.

The Forum, a year ago, took the bold and unprecedented step of reducing its price from $5 a year to $3—the first instance of so solid a periodical being put forth at so popular a price. Literature of this class has always been high, because it is written only by the very best writers, and because there had hitherto been but a comparatively small reading public that was thought to appreciate it. The Forum proceeded on the supposition that the spread of intelligence and the ever increasing independence of thought in the United States, opened up a very much larger field for serious literature of the very highest kind than had ever been suspected. It tried the very bold experiment, therefore, of reducing its price by half. The year since this reduction in price was made has been the dullest year in two decades. Yet the increase of circulation and of influence has been so great that The Forum has already a larger circulation than all the other American non-illustrated monthlies put together. It has made the discovery that the number of serious students of important subjects is very much larger in the United States than anybody has supposed, and very much larger than the number in any other country. The Forum circulation in the United States is larger than the combined circulation of the three great British Reviews in Great Britain—larger than any similar periodical enjoys anywhere in the world.
