DO YOU REMEMBER—When at this season of the year about the only intellectual enjoyment was the "joint debate" of the literary society of which every community of any size would boast. Momentous questions were discussed by local preachers, teachers, lawyers and laymen, and a full house was always present to imbibe the last word of argument advanced by either the affirmative or the negative debaters?

PROVIDE FOR OLD AGE

Old-age pensions is the subject of the day which appears to be on every tongue. We believe the problem could be solved in no more equitable or satisfactory way than to require that every one who arrives at the age of self-support be required by the national or his state government to make provision for a subsistence in their declining years out of the incomes received during the active years of their lives .

In this way, no one could be required to swear that he was a pauper, or destitute, or anything else, except that he had reached the age at which pensions start.

If there should be such a contributory plan provided in this country, there would be little need for any organized pension system. The number to be cared for in old age would be reduced to a minimum.

It is a favorable sign today to see so many young people, more than ever before, eager to stand on their own feet and earn a competence. They are preparing themselves for a business career in order to grasp the ever new opportunities open in the varied branches of business. Probably the introduction of business and commercial special courses in our high schools is a leading factor to this end. The condition, it is said, exists regardless of sex.

HOMES OR AUTOMOBILES

A detailed survey of a representative group of 10,000 insured families in the United States, showed conclusively that the owning of a home is scarcely in the race for popularity when considered with ownership of an automobile.

Note these remarkable figures: Families owning automobiles, 8,200, or 82 per cent; families owning homes, 4,900, or 49 per cent; families owning homes, unencumbered, 2,450, or 24½ per cent.

Fifty-one per cent of these families enjoyed an increased income, while 22.8 per cent suffered declines in salaries.

Pride in home owning, be it ever so humble, has suffered numerous and hard knocks in these latter years.

WINTER IS HERE

Make no mistake—the old-fashioned winter is here with a vengeance. The reminiscers, once wont to lament the winters of their childhood, are maintaining a quiescent attitude just now. Week by week, snow and ice bound, we have anticipipated a respite from the severity of the weather. The weather department has been unable to throw out encouragement, but there is a ray of hope in the fact that but seven weeks intervene between now and Easter.

What would happen if the calamity howlers in every community would turn about face, get on the right track and use their influence and energy in constructive work? Why, the knocking would cease, and there would be a boost that would create enthusiasm and faith in the future!

The big labor leaders at Washington have followed the politicians and called each other names. More than that, Mr. John L. Lewis, the Moses of the United Mine Workers, was handed an increase of $13,500 in annual salary. He is now to draw $25,000. Few "name callers" fare so well.

It is agreed that the country is better off now than at any time during the past year, but no political partisans can be found who will agree upon the reasons for the improvement.

Is it not much easier to stand on the side lines and criticise the players?

25 Billion Phone Calls Made in 1935

Telephone calls in the United States lead all forms of communication in volume. There were 25 billion calls made from the 17,000,000 telephones now serving this country last year, as compared with 17 billion calls made in 1910.

In 1935, according to the telephone almanac issued by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., there were 13 billion letters mailed, while 165 million telegrams were transmitted. This compares with 8,800,000,000 letters in 1910 and 100 million telegrams.

Only 212 million telephone calls were reported in 1885, which was seven years after the invention of the telephone by Alexander Graham Bell. During that year there were two billion letters mailed and 40 million telegrams transmitted.

There are now about 34,000,000 telephones in the world, 93 per cent of which may be interconnected with telephones of the Bell system. Thirty-five years ago, only 36 per cent of the telephones in the world could be interconnected.

A DEBT TO COMMUNITY

Every buyer in your town owes it to his community and to his family to first try to buy everything he needs in his own community. And merchants owe it to the local buyers to keep in stock attractive goods at fair prices. If both do their part, your town will grow and prosper. Without this co-operation, business will lag.

Those who advertise must always keep two things in mind. First, they must have something to sell. Second, they must tell others about it.

(Opinions Expressed in this Article Are Not Necessarily the Views of This Newspaper)

ON THE POLITICAL FRONT

The, "A full dinner pail," "A chicken in every pot", and "A car in every garage," and "The more abundant life for the forgotten man," conjectural promises of the politicians are giving way to attacks upon the New Deal and The Supreme Court, and to outright invitations and promises of reward to deserters who join the camp of the opposition.

Ex-President Hoover's Lincoln Day speech was steeped with the advice of the investment banker.

In order to fully comprehend its significance one must read his testimony given in court recently in support of Stanford University's petition praying for permission to invest part of their funds in common stocks.

That testimony supported the theory that if the spending program of our Federal Government ran its true course, as such programs have since the beginning of time, it would naturally end in inflation, In view of this, the University desired the permission of the Court to invest trust funds in common stocks as a hedge against such an event.

He pointed out in his speech that the stock market averages had reached their 1936 levels, and that the prices did not reflect an improved business condition, but rather indicated an abnormal demand for equities because of the fear of inflation.

That statement is hardly true. Corporation reports continually show an improved earning position in all lines of business, and earnings are a true index of business conditions.

He failed utterly to point to the road that would lead us out of the social upheaval resulting from the abnormal economic inequalities prevailing in both industrial and farm quarters.

On the other hand, Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, in an address delivered before the National Republican Club in New York, warned that the country could not prosper if labor and the farmer continue to be denied their fair share of the returns of their labor and production.

In stinging language he attacked the New Deal, and declared in favor of a free and unhampered Supreme Court. Yes, he did not tell us how labor and the farmer was to achieve this fair share of the fruits of their labor and production.

One thing, however, was made clear by him, and that there is a place in a Republican Cabinet for a "deserving democrat".

* * *

THE LOBBY, THE PRESS, NEUTRALLITY AND THE CAUSE OF WARS.

Around Washington it is an accepted fact that the leglalative branch of the Federal Government is divided into four, and not two branches. The Constitution provides for two—The House of Representatives and the Senate—but custom has set up two additional, The Lobby and The Press.

Like every other game, or business, law-making has rules. Some are prescribed in the Constitution, while others are the outgrowth of custom.

Before a proposed measure reaches the floor of the House of Representatives or the Senate, the constitutionally constituted bodies of the legislature, it has been either enacted or defeated in the Chambers of The Lobby and The Press.

There are times when the Press is as submissive to the dictates of The Lobby as the Congress has been, in recent years, to the Executive,

It—The Lobby—however, is the one body of our representative government that is truly representative. It is submissive to no one. It represents the "interests". No one else, Simply the "interests".

The ultimate END desired by the constituents or The Lobby is, at all times, fully known by their representatives. The issue is never confused, and they are well organized and financed to accomplish their purpose.

On the floors, and in the committee rooms of the Congress it has been charged recently that there is a large and powerful lobby in Washington directing its energies to defeating neutrality legislation. It is said that the government of the lobby is that such legislation will block foreign trade, destroy profits and retard economic recovery.

It has been intimated that large and influential newspapers who are "in on the know", as they say down in Wall Street, are furthering the cause of this lobby by bold, shouting headlines in large headlines, before the final passage or defeat of the act, the fact that the bill will be abandoned at this session of Congress.

Is it WAR or PROFITS.

PROFITS! What are they when we think of the HELL or WAR?

But is it merely PROFITS?

THE CAUSE OF WAR AND NEUTRALITY AND THE CAUSE OF

It is a fundamental principle of logical statesmanship, enunciated by Aristotle, the Greek philosopher selected by Phillipp of Macedon as the tutor of his son, Alexander the Great.

"There are, indeed, two sorts of states to which he (the statesman) must see that his constrymen give no offence. States stronger than his own, and States with which it is advantageous to trade."

This was wise statesmanship long before the time or Christ, and its wisdom has not diminished with the ages.

Devasting wars that bend nations to both knees do not occur between a weak and a strong nation. They take place only when two, or two combinations of nations, are equal, or nearly equal in power of arms and resources of supplies.

The war between the States in America found its origin in an incident occuring at Fort Sumter, The World War, one occurring in a small and unimportant Slavonic State. Neither incident was the real cause of the conflagration which ensued.

The real cause laid deeper.

Germany of 1914 desired, like Italy of today desires, expansion. An expansion which would give her territory for her increasing population, more natural resources and greater markets for her increasing production.

England, like England of today, refused to sanction expansion because she would have no commercial rival.

For fifty years prior Germany had struggled for this position, as she called it, in the Sun. She had built her Nation, her institutions and her arms to where she believed them sufficiently strong to assert her claim.

England of 1914, like England of today, believed that her arms together with the arms of her allies, were sufficiently strong to repel those claims.

When two strong men, or two strong nations, with opposing views meet they must choose between striking a bargain or clashing. If a bargain is not struck, the clash which will naturally ensue becomes a death struggle.

There was no bargain to be had in 1914. There seems to be none to be had today.

Effective neutrality legislation does not seem possible at this, or any other session of Congress.

Neutrality is an attitude. It is thoroughly defined in the Law of Nations, It cannot be legislated.

The legislation which is being held out to be legislation of neutrality is two fold in its scope.

First, it announces that our Government intends that we, as individuals and as a Nation, shall renounce our rights in International Law. It tells us that our Government will not press a claim growing out of a violation of a right. Since there is no right without a remedy, it denies us the right to claim damages should we be injured by a belligerent upon the high seas.

Second, as a punitive measure against all belligerents, it announces that we will, at the desretion of the Executive, invoke embargoes and boycotts against all. That is, it intends to accomplish neutrality by actually violating neutrality.

Should a nation at war with another—a nation with its back to the wall—claim the right to block the trade routes of the world, could we, a world power who has fought for the principle of the freedom of the seas, concede to that nation such a right? If we did, would we not be conceding that such a nation was stronger than us?

By continually maintaining a degree of strength, and by promoting an advantageous buying and selling market, we hardly need fear an offender, much less an invador.

Should Europe go to war America would, indeed, become the base of supply for all the armies of the world. But the fact that Europe failed to discharge the debts of the last war, and are now unable to finance a large war on a cash basis, should sufficiently deter trade to ultimately effect the embargoes and boycotts sought to be effected by the so-called neutrality legislation.

COW SENSE

Here's a little verse for your scrapbook. It's called "Cow Sense".
Don't know who wrote it—
"The cow is untutored in market researches.
Her world is the pasture, her shelter the birches,
Confronted with tests on supply and demand,
She'll chew on her end and just won't understand.
Although mentally slow (she is far from the quickest),
She instinctively knows . . .
And unfailingly goes
To the spot in the field where the clover is thickest."
