At a general Court Martial held at the city of Washington, whereof Brig. Gen. Smith of the Militia D. C. was President, the Court on the 12th inst. decided, that Capt. SAMUEL T. DYSON, of the United States corps of Artillery, being commanding officer of the U. S. fort Fort Washington, did on or about the 27th day of August, 1814, when an enemy was approaching said Fort, misbehave himself before the enemy and shamefully abandon the Fort and Post which he then and there commanded, and which it was his duty to defend.

Also, that he did, at the same time and place, cast away and destroy his arms and ammunition, dismantle and destroy the fort; and, without any necessity therefor from the pressure of an enemy, did march off the garrison from the same, in violation of his duty, and contrary to his orders.

And the court sentenced the said Samuel T. Dyson to be dismissed the service of the United States.

Which sentence has been approved by major-general Scott, commander of the 10th military district. Ibid.

COMMUNICATION.

BIOGRAPHY OF ANOTHER AMERICAN HERO.

Among that proud galaxy which so gloriously illuminated this Western Hemisphere during the Revolutionary War, there was none, perhaps Washington excepted, that shone with a lustre more bright and useful than General FRANCIS MARION, of S. Carolina. Many of his achievments indeed are of that daring character, that, though well attested, they read like romances.

When one of our finest armies under Gen. Lincoln was captured at Charleston, and another under Gen. Gates was cut to pieces at Camden; when a choice division under Gen. Sumpter was completely surprized, and that under Beaufort entirely massacred; when by such a run of horrible blunders and disasters, the last spark of Liberty seemed to be extinguished in the Southern States, and multitudes of frightened citizens thought of nothing but getting British protections—then it was, in that dark and hopeless state of our cause, that Marion came forth. Instead of floating with the coward herd down the stream of despair, he rose up on the wings of Genius and Virtue against the clouds of war, and like the eagle of Heaven seemed to rejoice in the darkening storm. 'Tis known to many of his countrymen now in Congress, that at this awful crisis he had but thirty men! with only two rounds of powder and ball! and thirteen swords! And yet, with this slender stake he played the game of war with such astonishing skill, that in five weeks he gave the enemy as many signal overthrows!—Britons were captured—tories dispersed—whigs reanimated—crowds flocked to his standard, and battles were fought on a larger scale, and with overwhelming success! Thus, through the smiles of Heaven, on the valor and address of this extraordinary individual, the sacred fire of Liberty was kept alive in a very important section of the Union, and at length was made to burst forth with a fierceness that entirely consumed the hopes of its enemies.

At all times it is the first of duties among free governments to record the exploits of the HEROES of their Liberties—But especially at a time like this when the cloud of war is again hanging dark over our heads, it becomes most imperiously our duty to hold up the great examples of those who in a former war were chosen of Heaven to rouse their despending countrymen—to keep up their spirits, to husband well their slender means—and by a constant series of wisely concerted, brilliantly executed measures, to lead them at length to victory and to glory.

In the first rank of this glorions band, by universal consent, both of friends and foes, stands the unconquered and unconquerable Gen. Marion—swift as an Eagle, bold as a Lyon, artful as a Fox, no enemy ever surprised him, few ever escaped him. As a flash of lightning on a herd of ill-fated buffaloes, so was Marion's charge on an enemy whom he had marked for destruction. The frightened neighbors heard the clap, they smelt the air strong with gun-powder, and saw the earth strewed with the victims of his sword; but whence it came or whither it went none could tell—and yet few commanders have ever been half so gentle to their own men, or so generous to vanquished foes as Marion.

"No man" says General Green, "has a better claim to public gratitude and admiration than General Marion. History furnishes no equal to him in the art of partizan warfare."

General Henry Lee says—"Marion was virtuous all over—and his history is admirably calculated to shew what wonders may be done, even with slender means, by a brave individual, whose soul is devoted to the good of his country.

Lord Cornwallis has been often heard to declare, that "there was no partizan officer in the American army whom he so dreaded as General Marion."

In short, it is hoped, that the reader will find in the LIFE OF MARION, a rich assemblage of that moral and military heroism, which, while it charms all hearts, has an admirable tendency to multiply in our land, Virtuous youth—Soldiers of sentiment, and excellent Partizan officers!

This interesting work, from the most authentic documents, is now preparing for the public eye—in one volume of near 300 pages, neatly printed and bound, and to be delivered to subscribers for one dollar—to non-subscribers one dollar and a quarter.

M. L. Weems, Author of the "LIFE OF WASHINGTON" (in a small volume) that has been so unexpectedly honored by the citizens of Baltimore and the U. States, is now receiving subscriptions for the "LIFE OF MARION."

FROM THE DEMOCRATIC PRESS.

Men of enlarged views, of all parties, in the United States, will find very considerable light thrown upon the subject of our eastern central and southern commerce, in the 10th Chapter of Mr. M. Carey's recent publication, under the title of "The Olive Branch," or "Faults on Both Sides." It begins in page 184, and continues to page 215. Men of candid minds will also find very interesting papers from the most decided or respectable men, public bodies and publications, worthy of general and calm reconsideration at this time in the same little book, in the same chapter page 58 to 89. The subject of impressment is well elucidated by the written acts of chief justice (late secretary) Marshall, Mr. Rufus King, Mr. Pickering, Mr. O. Wolcott, Mr. B. Stoddard, &c. of dates anterior to the presidencies of Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Madison, from the year 1792, when Gen. Washington was in his first term, to 1801, when Mr. Adam's term ended. There is, in short, in Mr. Carey's book a collective view of a great number of relative and important historical truths, which are no where so carefully collected, no where so impressively presented. Every man, however well informed, if busy in his public or private duties, will find much to aid him in "the Olive Branch." The writer may have occasionally erred; he must have erred, in the wide range he has given to his heart and mind, while penning the Olive Branch—but, on those points every independent man can and will of course, think for himself. Let him them read and consider, that he may decide for himself.
