Very Poor Authority.

"Everybody knows, except perhaps the SENTINEL, that nobody can get a nomination in the Republican party unless he is endorsed by Harry Clabaugh, and George Sharrer."—Advocate.

On this subject, as on every other requiring intelligent opinion and accurate statement in relation to matters political, the Advocate is very poor authority, as the SENTINEL has frequently demonstrated. The duty of exposing this weakness in our neighbor is not a grateful one, but occasions arise when it has to be performed, and the present is one of them. Let an example or two suffice.

Readers of the Advocate will remember that along in April and May last it was rampant in favor of bimetalism, and, by implication at least, advocated free coinage. The SENTINEL controverted its articles on the subject and opposed the free coinage of silver, except upon an international basis. In reply the Advocate alleged that this paper believed that bimetalism meant ruin. The statement was unqualified and carefully refrained from making known the SENTINEL's real view in the premises. Following is a fair sample from the article referred to:

"Up to date the SENTINEL believes that bimetalism means ruin. It don't know why, except it believes that is the Republican position. Next year it will be for bimetalism. It wont know why, but it will be advocating bimetalism because the Republican National Convention will say that bimetalism is right. And not only will the Republican National Convention declare for bimetalism but the Democratic as well."

But the signs of the times indicate that neither the Republican nor Democratic convention, in 1896, will declare for bimetalism, at least not of the Advocate's kind, and that paper has conveniently dropped the subject. Its advocacy of free coinage may have been sincere, although based upon a serious error in judgment, but its opinion that its views would be endorsed by the National Conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties was utterly without warrant, except in its own imagination, upon which it seems prone to draw from its facts.

Another instance of the weakness referred to is directly connected with the Advocate's present opinion of the omnipotence of Messrs. Clabaugh and Sharrer, in Republican conventions. It isn't very long since it gave expression to an opinion directly at variance with that now entertained by it. Republican primaries were held during the afternoon and evening of Saturday, August 3rd. Tickets for and against the nomination of Mr. Clabaugh for Attorney General were in the field, in a number of districts. The Advocate assumed an intimate knowledge of the probable result and said:

"The probability is that Carroll's five votes in the Cambridge convention will be cast neither for Lowndes nor Clabaugh. Mr. Clabaugh, it is said, will have to hustle pretty lively to carry his own district."

Everybody now knows that the Advocate didn't know anything about it. The Republicans of most of the districts elected delegates to the county convention in favor of Mr. Clabaugh's nomination. And because the delegates obeyed the wishes of their constituents the Advocate now goes to the other extreme and declares that "nobody can get a nomination in the Republican party" without Mr. Clabaugh's endorsement. It is about as near right in that assertion as it was when it stated that the probability was that Carroll's five votes in the Cambridge convention would not be cast for Mr. Lowndes or for Mr. Clabaugh. It adopts any theory that suits its convenience, and assumes its correctness upon entirely insufficient data, as it has done in the cases cited.

It is driven to desperation, in the present campaign, and is floundering around in a vain endeavor to find some theory to offset the open and palpable facts that Mr. Hurst was forced on the Democratic State convention by Messrs. Gorman and Rasin and that the Democratic voters of the State had no voice in the nomination.

There is not the remotest parallel between the course pursued by the Republican convention of Carroll county and the body that obediently accepted the will of the two great Democratic bosses. The Carroll county and the Cambridge conventions obeyed the will of the people who were represented by the delegates. The convention which nominated Mr. Hurst repudiated the will of the people by whom it was chosen and carried out the will of two men—two out of a hundred thousand. The Advocate endorses and approves the action of the Gorman-Rasin convention, but denounces a body that simply carried out the wishes of its constituents, as boss-ridden, and finds in its obedience to the popular will a warrant for classing the man of its choice for a State office, as the boss without whom nobody can get a nomination in the county. For barefaced inconsistency and blind, unreasoning partisanship, this is without a parallel. But nothing better could be expected of the Advocate.

It Should Be a False Hope.

A Democrat of mature years and high standing in this city, and withal prominent in the party counsels, recently offered a wager that Mr. Hurst would be the next Governor of Maryland. A Republican who overheard the proposition remarked:

"Well, he will not be elected."

To this the proposer of the wager promptly replied:

"Neither was John Lee Carroll elected in 1875; but he was Governor, all the same."

Trust in the ability of the bosses to make Mr. Hurst Governor against the will and the votes of a majority of the people, then, seems to be the reliance and only hope of his adherents. It ought to be a false hope. It is enough that the Democratic party—or that portion of it that is supporting Mr. Hurst—is dominated by bosses and ruled by boss methods. It is intolerable that the people of the State have been and are again threatened with the same sort of domination through corruption and fraud upon the ballot. The suggestion ought to, and we believe will, intensify the revolt in the Democratic party against the bosses and bossism, and insure an overwhelming ring defeat. Corrupt and pliable election officers must be given to understand that the doors of the penitentiary will open wide to receive them if they persist in doing the bidding of their more corrupt masters.

Important News.

The forty-six thousand negro voters and all the Tax-Dodgers of Maryland are supporting Lowndes, Graham and Clabaugh, and Reassessment is the issue.—Advocate.

This is the first intimation to the public that Mr. Lowndes is to have the support of his competitor, Mr. Hurst, the greatest Tax-Dodger of them all.

Respectfully Referred to the Advocate.

The Somerset Democrats have put a negro in office, and last fall they had negro speakers on the stump. Evidently, Mr. Miles does not agree with the other Gormanites who cry "negro supremacy."
Baltimore Evening News, (Dem.)

The straits in which the Maryland Democratic bosses and their ticket have been placed, by the revolt of self-respecting Democrats, are shown by their resort to most ridiculous stories to bolster up their falling cause. One of these appeared in the Washington Evening News on Thursday, and was made the subject of Washington correspondence in yesterday's Baltimore Morning Herald. It is to the effect that an understanding exists that if the Republicans carry the Legislature Ex-Gov. Whyte is to be elected to the United States Senate, and that the fact has created considerable dissatisfaction within the Republican party. The story is too absurd to be given credence by any intelligent or thoughtful person. It's real purport does not appear on its face. It isn't told to cause trouble among the Republicans. Its real object is to discredit Governor Whyte and to break the force of his repudiation of the bosses' ticket. But as the story "will not wash," the scheme will have an ignominious failure and react against its inventors.

In the contest between the British yacht Valkyrie III, and the American yacht Defender, at New York, the latter won the first race, sailed on Saturday last, by nearly 9 minutes. In the second race on Tuesday, the Defender was crippled by a foul with the Valkyrie, but sailed the race and came in only 47 seconds behind over a 30-mile course. She was awarded the race under the rules of the yachting association. Lord Dunraven, owner of the Valkyrie, refused to sail the third race on Thursday, unless an absolutely clear course was guaranteed by the association. Everything was in readiness for the race, but the Valkyrie did not start. The course was the clearest yet offered the yachts, patrol boats having been sent out to keep back excursion vessels. This was all the association had power to do, but it was not satisfactory to the Englishman and the Defender was given a walk over, and the American's cup is still retained in the United States. While it is clear that the Defender is the better boat there is much regret that she was not given further opportunity to demonstrate her superiority over her British rival.

Charles Walter was killed by the trolley car, Hancock, in front of his residence on the Emmittsburg road, near Gettysburg, last Sunday afternoon. His horse and wagon, in which he had been carrying visitors over the battlefield, were standing in front of his house as the car approached. The horse, which was facing the car track, became frighthed and Walter ran out to prevent his running away. The horse turned suddenly and the rear wheels of the carriage were thrown around, striking the unfortunate man and knocking him in front of the car. He was dragged about 100 feet and was dead when extricated.

The New York Herald says "exports of products have been light, while imports continue heavy." And this is the way the Gorman tariff bill has opened foreign markets to American products.

It is said that Ex-Gov. John Lee Carroll may take the stump for the Gorman ticket in Maryland this fall. Inasmuch as the only hope of the success of the bosses' nominees lies in methods similar to those which placed Mr. Carroll in the executive chair, it is peculiarly appropriate that he should be called upon to help in the desperate game in contemplation.

Grand Encampment G. A. R

It is estimated that fifty-thousand veterans marched in the parade of the G. A. R., at Louisville, Ky., on Wednesday, and that the spectacle was witnessed by six hundred thousand people, among whom were many old Confederates, who cheered themselves hoarse in honor of their former foemen. A very sad event in connection with the encampment was the accidental explosion of a caisson of Battery A, Kentucky National Guard, by which four artillerymen and a colored driver were killed and two artillerymen wounded. The battery was on its way to fire a salute in honor of the G. A. R., when the explosion occurred. The Encampment elected Gen. Isaac N. Walker, of Indianapolis, Commander-in Chief for the ensuing year. The next Encampment will be held at St. Paul, Minn.

From our Special Correspondent.

BALTIMORE, SEPT. 12th, 1895.

When the recent Republican State Convention finished its work at Cambridge, on the afternoon of August 15th, nearly every member of that earnest and intelligent body of men—the ablest and most representative convention of the party that ever assembled in Maryland—shook hands with some other delighted Republican or with himself, and all united in declaring the ticket just named as the strongest ever put forward by the party for the suffrage of the people of the State. Four weeks have passed since that convention so ably accomplished the work entrusted to it, and the members of the party and the general public seem better pleased than ever with the result. The ticket named is one that grows steadily in popular favor, and the incoming tide is yet at the beginning of the flood. Upon its broad bosom it bears the solid, enthusiastic and united party, and more, it is bringing into the broad harbor where victory awaits, thousands of the best Democrats in the state—men who value principles above practice, and the welfare of their beloved State far more than party supremacy.

Could a campaign be more auspiciously inaugurated than the one upon which the Republican standard bearers are entering? Could a ticket be more enthusiastically received or more cordially supported?

There is an air of gloomy apprehension today about the Democratic headquarters at the Carrollton Hotel that was never there before. There is an anxious look upon the faces of that party's leaders that is strange to the beholder. And when you speak to one of them and tell him that the very air is full of prophetic whisperings of Republican victory in this year of grace, 1895, he will shake his head gloomily and reply as in a dream, "Verily, I fear so." No one ever knew the like of this before.

The Republican leaders have several good reasons for the faith that is in them this year. First and foremost, there is the personnel of the State ticket. The mind of men runneth not back to the time when the party could boast of such an admirable ticket, such an enthusiasm arousing ticket, such a vote winning ticket. Upon this point suppose we

SUMMON EXPERT TESTIMONY.

You know, in a case in court, an admission from the other side is considered of more value than any testimony of your own witness. Here is a witness that ought to be impartial, because it is from the ranks of the opposition. On the morning after the Cambridge Convention the Baltimore Sun, for many years the leading Democratic paper, not only in Maryland, but the entire South, said:

"The Republican State Convention at Cambridge yesterday nominated probably the strongest ticket that it could have put in the field. Personally the nominees are above criticism. They are all gentlemen of high standing and of undoubted character and worth. Mr. Lowndes, the nominee for Governor, is a man of fine business ability and varied practical experience, thoroughly conversant with the needs and resources of the State. Mr. Clabaugh, the nominee for Attorney-General, is a lawyer of prominence and ability, and Mr. Graham, the nominee for Comptroller, is a young lawyer who has already won popularity and esteem in his section. The ticket represents the best elements of the Republican party in Maryland, and the gentlemen who compose it are identified with the substantial interests af the State."

Now, the Sun does not often extol anything that is Republican; it imagines that few good things can come out of this Nazareth, but it is conceded to be an honest paper, and in this instance recorded its honest opinion. Cannot the Republicans of Maryland well afford to feel proud of a ticket, therefore, that wrests such golden opinions from a great adversary on the political field?

But the Sun does not stop there. Being, as said before, an honest paper, and confronting a condition upon which an honest opinion is expected, it is frank and honest enough to FOLLOW THE TRAIL TO ITS END.

It also said in the same issue and upon the same subject:

"There is another point upon which the Republican party has the right to congratulate itself in connection with the ticket nominated at Cambridge yesterday, and that is that it was nominated by the Republican voters of the State, and not by bosses and machines. There was a spirited and earnest rivalry between the friends of the aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination, but it was a contest of the people and among the people. The primaries were fair, free and unfettered, and the will of the people as recorded at them was expressed in the convention. No boss undertook to step in and override the popular will, or to force the convention to drop the candidates the people wanted and nominate those he had determined upon. There was a refreshing contrast in all this to the spectacle presented by the recent Democratic convention in this city, and the Republicans are to be congratulated, not only on the personnel of their ticket, but on the fact that it was not dictated by a political autocrat."

So much for expert testimony in the case now on trial before the great jury of the people.

Do you know the Republisan nominees very well?

THE CHIEF STANDARD BEARER.

Among the progressive men of Maryland there stands no more prominent figure than that of the Hon. Lloyd Lowndes, of Cumberland. A man of strong individuality, of sturdy and independent habits of thought, of a winning courtesy and innate refinement of feeling and manner that attracts and charms and holds, he is an ideal candidate for the high and honorable position of Governor of our proud old State. His friends are legion, and no man has ever been known to be his enemy. He is a keen-sighted and progressive, yet conservative man of affairs, and his commanding position in the business world has been won solely by the ability, the pluck and the persistence of the man himself. He is interested in agricultural pursuits, and the needs of the farmer are open books to him. He is closely connected with many important business enterprises, and the business men of the State feel that their interests will be safe in his hands. Those who know him best love him best. Probably the best analysis of his character was given by Mr. David W. Sloan in presenting his name before the Cambridge convention. Mr. Sloan said:

"The selection of Mr. Lowndes

WILL INSPIRE CONFIDENCE

and enthusiasm in our party, and will rally to our standard men who love State more than party, and who will feel that with him as the executive of the commonwealth, the affairs of State will be administered upon principles of business for the good of all—not for the personal profit and aggrandizement of the few; that with him it is possible to cast out them that bought and sold in the temple of State, and to overthrow the tables of the money changers and the seats of them that sold doves. I speak of him as those amongst whom he lives, and who know him by his work, speak of him. Connected with diversified interests, he knows the requirements and necessities of all. A tiller of the soil, his agricultural needs are those of every farmer in the State. Together their interests blend, and will bring a sense of security under his executive management. Engaged in mining and manufacturing, the chords of interest of the laborer in each branch of industry will tune in harmony with his. The head of a large banking-house, the financial men of the State have confidence in him, and know that their interests are identified with his, and that mistaken judgment or error on his part will bring disaster to him or his, also, if it should to them. A God-fearing man, who for twenty years has served in the vestry of the Protestant Episcopal Church of his town, the Christian people of this State are assured that no wrong-doing in matters of State will pass by without rebuke from him."

The above is the tribute of a warm personal friend, and some may think the picture overdrawn. Those who know Mr. Lowndes know that it is not. There are many, too, who know him and love him for other reasons. His charities have always been as liberal as they have been quiet and unostentatious, and many an institution owes to Lloyd Lowndes debts of gratitude for liberal subscriptions that have gone to the credit of that ubiquitous individual known as "a friend."

POPULAR HARRY CLABAUGH.

Mr. Lowndes' associates on the ticket are both young men, but each has shown abundant evidence of that sturdy character and true worth that brings men to the front solely through the efficiency of merit. Mr. Clabaugh is one of the bright young men of the State, and his enthusiasm in the cause of Republicanism is infectious, it bubbles and sparkles to the surface so at all times. Few members of the party stop to figure out what they owe to Mr. Clabaugh. Three years ago—, when he assumed the chairmanship of the State Central Committee, he found a badly beaten, disorganized and discouraged party, inclined to war with itself more than with the common enemy. Mr. Clabaugh went earnestly and diligently to work to correct this sort of thing. Now he gives up the position with the party harmonious and united, and with every prospect for a magnificent victory this fall. When he assumed the reins of management there was a solid Democratic delegation from Maryland in Congress and but two lonely Republicans in the Baltimore City Council. Now the congressional delegation is equally divided, and the Republicans control the First Branch of the City Council. Is not that a good showing for three years work?

To know Mr. Clabaugh is to like him. His bright and sunny disposition would chase away any fit of the blues, and his genuine and unaffected cordiality of manner makes friends at once. It is this winning combination of force of character and charming personal traits, coupled with the courtesy and refinement of the cultured Christian gentleman, that has won and holds for Harry Clabaugh hosts of friends in all parts of this State of ours. This was an ideal selection to strengthen the head of the ticket.

THE EASTERN SHORE END.

Mr. Robert P. Graham, the candidate for Comptroller, comes from that home of princely good fellows, the Eastern Shore, and therefore it goes without saying that he is a splendid running mate for Messrs. Lowndes and Clabaugh. "Bob" Graham, as he is affectionately called by young and old alike in his native town of Salisbury, is a handsome young fellow and is liable to play havoc with the hearts of the fair sex during the coming campaign. Mr. Graham was Republican candidate for mayor of Salisbury in 1893, and was nominated by the recent Republican County Convention of Wicomico for the office of State's Attorney. He is exceedingly popular, and is regarded as one of the most promising young men of his section of the state.

Now, with a ticket like this to emblazon upon the banners, and with a discontented and disheartened foe to face, can you wonder that Republicans who watch the drift of straws upon the surface rejoice and are exceeding glad in these mellow September days, because of the bright promise of the future? But it must be a campaign of hard work, of great watchfulness, of skillful management. Mr. Lowndes and Mr. Hurst have both spent some time recently in taking in various county fairs and getting acquainted with the people. This is merely a preliminary skirmish. Plans for the active work of the campaign are now being perfected at party headquarters and soon the roar of the gun will be heard. It will be the greatest campaign in the history of Maryland.

The Republican party is fortunate this year in having Congressman Geo. L. Wellington at the head of affairs. He is a skillful general and a wide-awake sentinel. Nobody ever caught Mr. Wellington napping at his post. This means that spirit will be infused in the fight all along the line. Like the patriots of old, the Republicans this year "know their rights and dare maintain them."

LALLA ROOKH.

A Series of Gorgeous Carnival Nights to be given in Baltimore—Moore's Beautiful Poem Idealized in Spectacular Form.

An amphitheatre has been erected in the city of Baltimore, Greenmount and North Avenues, which will accommodate nearly fifteen thousand persons. An immense lake has been prepared in front of this structure, and a miniature city built, covering over 15,000 square yards of oil painting on wood, iron and canvas, representing the "Vale of Cashmere." Nearly $100,000 will be expended in a gorgeous open-air spectacle, illustrating the story so beautifully told by the Irish poet, Tom Moore, of "Lalla Rookh," and as low excursion rates have been promised into Baltimore during this period, an opportunity is offered whereby one may be transported to that delightful Province of the Sun, of which the Irish bard sings so charmingly. This great carnival exhibit will commence September 10th, continuing every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening during the period of five weeks. Special excursions will be arranged on all roads running into Baltimore, and the lowest possible rates have been promised.
