around him and kissed his coal blackened face, crying and laughing at the same time.

Mattern, on account of going against all instructions, was taken before an examining committee and fined one month's wages, but otherwise was not punished, as it became well known why he had done such a desperate act. As for Dr. Sardo, no blame was attached to him; on the contrary, his humane deed brought him considerable practice.

NOBODY ELSE.

Two little hands so careful and brisk,
Putting the tea things away;
While the mother is resting awhile in her chair,
For she has been busy all day,
And the dear little fingers are working for love,
Although they are tender and wee,
"I'll do it so nicely," she says to herself—
"There's nobody else, you see"

Two little feet just scampered up stairs,
For papa will quickly be here;
And his shoes must be ready and warm by the fire
That is burning so bright and so clear.
Then she must climb on a chair to keep watch;
"He can not come in without me.
When mother is tired I open the door—
There's nobody else, you see."

Two little arms around papa's dear neck
And a soft, downy cheek 'gainst his own;
For out of the nest so cozy and bright,
The little one's mother has flown.
She brushes the tear-drops away as she thinks;
"Now he has no one but me,
I mustn't give way; that would make him so sad,
And there's nobody else, you see."

Two little tears on the pillow, unshed,
Dropped from the two pretty eyes.
Two little arms stretching out in the dark,
Two little faint sobbing cries.
"Papa forgot I was always waked up
When he whispered good-night to me,
O mother, come back, just to kiss me in bed
There's nobody else, you see."

Little true heart, if mother can look
Out from her home in the skies,
She will not pass on to her haven of rest
While the tears dim her little one's eyes.
If God has shed sorrow around us just now,
Yet his sunshine is ever to be;
And He is the comfort for every one's pain,
There's nobody else, you see.

The Read Leaf.

From Harper's Bazar.

If when October steals across the scene there were denizens of some near planet to gaze upon the earth, even on our one section or phase of it—what a wonderful and changeable star she would seem to them! A little while ago she swung a living emerald with the summer greenery, as just before that she was a sapphire and silver globe, with the winter snow and ice and their azure rifts and shadows, and here she is blazing with tints and glints of ruby and topaz and amethyst in the deep dyes of the Northern woods of our parallels. What fortunate beings those gazers may imagine the dwellers on such a star as this must be; what higher order of life may they conjecture it! What superior sensitiveness and virtues must those have who live in it; what completer faculties and undreamed of powers walking among these jewelled splendors, or mayhap not walking, but dowered with wings! Deluded dreams! Perhaps they think that death, by-and-by, if their deserts are such, will take them to these enchanting regions, and give them the freedom of all these radiances and marvels. Perhaps they wonder what produces these marvels, and apply their powers of search—have their theories and contentions and parties regarding the constitution of the next inner or outer planet, as the case may be, meaning the earth—wonder what we call ourselves, and give us a name that we may never know.

Eggs Shipped Without Shells.

A consular report tells of large quantities of shelled eggs being sent to England from Russia and Italy for the use of pastry cooks, bakers, hotels and restaurants. The eggs are emptied from their shells into tin cans holding 1,000 or more, and after being hermetically sealed are packed with straw into wooden cases, the taps through which the contents are drawn being added by those using them. Great care is necessary in selecting the eggs, as a single bad one would spoil the whole lot. Lower price and saving of time and greater ease and less expense and loss in handling are named as the advantages of this system. Thus far the Russian product has been uniformly good, whereas the Italian shipments have so frequently been spoiled that analysis of the Russian supply has been ordered to determine if preservatives are used.

Pin Recovered After Thirty Years.

From Portland, Me., Press.

The Hon. A. S. Twitchell, of Gorham, N. H., who was in town recently attending the reunion of the Fourth Maine Battery, told an interesting war experience. During his journey South, he and his comrades were obliged to travel in box cars, and he lost a Masonic pin, having the square and compasses inclosed in a circle of gold and his name engraved on the back. During the reunion, very much to his surprise, the pin was returned him by one of his comrades, who said that he received it a short time ago from a Grand Army man from a distant State, who happened to see Mr. Twitchell's name in a paper connected with the reunion, and, not knowing Mr. Twichell's address, sent it to the comrade to return to him.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Castoria promotes Digestion, and overcomes Flatulency, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, and Feverishness. Thus the child is rendered healthy and its sleep natural. Castoria contains no Morphine or other narcotic property.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 South Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From personal knowledge and observation I can say that Castoria is an excellent medicine for children, acting as a laxative and relieving the pent up bowels and general system very much. Many mothers have told me of its excellent effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"For several years I have recommended 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., 125th Street and 7th Ave., New York City.

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
CARLOS MARTYN, D. D., New York City.

FERTILIZER
For the Farmer.
Reduced in Price,
Quality Maintained.

From 35 to 38 bushels of wheat per acre and a "rousing crop of grass in the bargain," by the use of Zell's Fertilizers.

For sixteen years I have been selling Zell's Fertilizers and the equally famous Chemical Co. of Canton's Fertilizers, with a steady increasing demand for them. This, with the most flattering testimonials that could here be produced, if we had space, from many of the most progressive farmers in Carroll and adjoining counties, and the much reduced price for which these goods are offered for the season of 1895, should convince the farmers that they cannot do better elsewhere. We will not be undersold by the same quality of goods. I have but little expense in the sale of these Fertilizers and therefore can sell on small margin. Should I not call on you personally, just come, prepared to load your wagon, to the Machinery Building of J. Q. ### Cushing's Daring.

On the night of October, 27th, 1864, Cushing slipped away from the blockading fleet, and steamed up the river toward the wharf, a dozen miles distant, where the great ram lay. The Confederates were watchful to guard against surprise, for they feared lest their foes should try to destroy the ram before she got a chance to come down and attack them again in the Sound. She lay under the guns of a fort, with a regiment of troops ready at a moment's notice to turn out and defend her. Her own guns were kept always clear for action, and she was protected by a great boom of logs thrown out roundabout, of which last defense the Federals knew nothing. Cushing went up-stream with the utmost caution, and by good luck passed, unnoticed, a Confederate lookout below the ram.

About midnight he made his assault. Steaming quietly on through the black water, and feeling his way cautiously toward where he knew the town to be, he finally made out the loom of the Albemarle through the night, and at once drove at her. He was almost upon her before he was discovered; then the crew and the soldiers on the wharf opened fire, and at the same moment he was brought to by the boom, the existence of which he had not known. The rifle-balls were singing about him as he stood erect guiding his launch, and he heard the bustle of the men aboard the ram, and the noise of the great guns as they were got ready. Backing off, he again went all steam ahead, and actually surged over the slippery logs of the boom.

Meanwhile, on the deck of the Albemarle the sailors were running to quarters, and the soldiers were swarming down to aid in her defense. And the droning bullets came always thicker through the dark night. Cushing still stood upright in his little craft, guiding and controlling her by voice and signal, while in his hands he kept the ropes which led to the torpedo. As the boat slid forward over the boom, he brought the torpedo full against the sombre side of the huge ram, and instantly exploded it, almost at the same time that the pivot-gun of the ram, loaded with grape, was fired point-blank at him, not ten yards off.

At once the ram settled, the launch sinking at the same moment, while Cushing and his men swam for their lives. Most of them sank or were captured; but Cushing reached midstream. Hearing something splashing in the darkness, he swam toward it, and found that it was one of his crew. He went to his rescue, and they kept together for some time, but the sailor's strength gave out, and he finally sank. In the pitch darkness Cushing could form no idea where he was; and when, chilled through, and too exhausted to rise to his feet, he finally reached shore, shortly before dawn, he found that he had swum back, and landed but a few hundred feet below the sunken ram. All that day he remained within easy musket-shot of where his foes were swarming about the fort and the great drowned ironclad. He hardly dared move, and until the afternoon he lay without food and without protection from the heat or insects. Then he managed to slip unobserved into a dense swamp, and began to make his way toward the fleet. Toward evening he came out on a small stream near a camp of Confederate soldiers. They had moored to the bank a small skiff, and with equal stealth and daring he managed to steal this, and began to paddle down-stream. Hour after hour he paddled on through the fading light, and then through the darkness. At last, utterly worn out, he found the squadron, and was picket up.—"Hero Tales From American History," by Theodore Roosevelt, in October St. Nicholas.

According to Professor Panton, of the Ontario Agricultural College, there are nearly 100 species of insects that prey on grain and forage crops; upward of 40 attack vegetables; no less than 50 menace the grape; and 5 threaten the apple. The pine has 125 species as enemies; the oak, 300; the elm, 80; the hickory, 170; the maple, 75; the beech, 150; while the unfortunate willow battles against some 400 species of insect foes. Some idea of the immense loss that is sustained by the human race from insect pests may be imagined from the fact that in 1884, in the United States alone, the amount is estimated to have been $400,000,000, but in 1891 it was $300,000,000.

In a series of interesting experiments made to ascertain why trees are so frequently struck by lightning, it was demonstrated that the green wood is in all cases a bad conductor of electricity, and so much the worse in proportion as the tree is richer in oil. On the contrary, the green wood of such trees as are poor in oil conducts electricity relatively well. Living wood is a much better conductor than dead. The existence of dead branches in trees of both categories, therefore, increases the danger.
