ANCIENT WATER HEATERS.

From Boston Transcript.

In two of the museums of old Romon antiquities at Naples there are several water heaters, which indicate that the principal of the water tube, the crowning feature of modern boilers, was fully understood and appreciated some 2,000 years ago. Mr. W. T. Bonner of Cincinati has been investigating these heaters and found them to be as interesting as they are beautiful. One of them consists of an outer shell 12 inches in diameter and nearly 17 inches high, surmounted by a somewhat hemispherically shaped top. Inside this shell is an internal clyinder, also having a hemispherical top, which is 10 inches in diameter and 12 inches high. The two shells are connected at the bottom by a rim, like the mud ring of a locomotive firebox, and the space between them was fillen with water. The grate was formed of seven tubes made from sheet bronze, rolled and soldered or brazed. These tubes open at both ends into tne bottom of the space between the shells, thus forming a water tube grate for the fuel to rest upon.

Charcoal was probably used with this heater and was placed on the grate through an opening 4.8 inches high and 4 inches wide, closed by a beautifully decorated door. The gases from the fire escaped into the outer air through three small openings formed by tubes crossing from the inner to the outer shell about 5 6 inches above the grate. The whole apparatus was raised about 12 inches on a tripod so as to allow air to reach the fuel. In another boiler of somewhat the same type the outer shell has the form of an urn, while the inner shell rises from a water tube grate to an opening in the side. It is 12 inches in diameter at the widest part, 17.6 inches high and supported on a tripod about 4 inches high. Its general shape is much like that of the silver cream pitchers known as the Paul Revere patterns, although, of course, it is much larger and has a top closed by a lid. It has been suggested that these utensils may have served at some time to heat wine as well as water, which suggestion appears reasonable, as many historians state that the Pompeiians made great use of hot drinks. It may be that they were found in one of the termpodi or cafes of which there were several in Pompeii.

WHY GRANT NEVER SWORE.

Gen. Horace Porter, in his "Campaigning With Grant" in the May "Century," says: While sitting with him at the camp-fire late one night, after every one else had gone to bed, I said to him: "General, it seems singular that you have gone through all the rough and tumble of army service and frontier life, and have never been provoked into swearing. I have never heard you utter an oath or use an imprecation." 'Well, somehow or other, I never learned to swear," he replied. "When a boy I seemed to have an aversion to it, and when I became a man I saw the folly of it. I have always noticed, too, that swearing helps to rouse a man's anger; and when a man flies into a passion his adversary who keeps cool always gets the better of him. In fact, I could never see the use of swearing. I think it is the case with many people who swear excessively that it is a mere habit, and that they do not mean to be profane; but, to say the least, it is a great waste of time." His example in this respect was once quoted in my hearing by a member of the Christian Commission to a teamster in the Army of the Potomac, in the hope of lessening the volume of rare oaths with which he was italicizing his language, and upon which he seemed to be placing his main reliance in moving his mule-team out of a mud-hole. The only reply evoked from him was: "Then thar's one thing sart'in: the old man never druv mules."

"Does your poetry pay?"

"Well, it just keeps the wolf from the door."

"I suppose you read it to him."

"They say Weaknee has been wandering in his mind lately."

"Well, he's safe enough; he can't get far."

Brooks—"You havn't called on Miss Lovely lately."

Tommy Huggum—"Not since I broke my arm."

A VEXED QUESTION, BUT RESULTS IN GOOD IF WELL DONE.

From Philadelphia Press.

The cleaning of gloves is a vexed question. The great establishments for scouring and renovating clothing seem to ignore this portion of their work with a contempt for such small economies quite characteristic of the American tradesman.

The stained, stiff gloves that are returned by most of our regular scourers as "cleaned" are in marked contrast to the work of the French glove-cleaners. A glazed kid glove is difficult to clean, because the polish is removed in the process of the work and cannot be restored, but gloves of the soft-finished undreseed kid, if they are of first quality, may be repeatedly cleaned, and only grow softer and prettier in the process. They may lose a little of their color, but the more delicate and flower-like the bloom on the surface of such a glove the more desirable.

If the gloves are very much soiled it will take patience to clean them thoroughly, but the result will amply repay one for the trouble, always providing they are gloves of fine make.

Purchase at a chemist's a pint of the nicest refined benzine. Do not attempt to get the deodorized fluid; if the gloves are properly aired every particle of the unpleasant odor will pass away, and they will quickly take on the fragrance of violets or any perfume which lines your glove sachet. Stretch the gloves—on your hands—one at a time. It is a great convenience for two persons to do this work together, one putting on the gloves and the other cleaning them. A pair of wooden hands of the size of your hands is a great convenience. Have a supply of small cloths of white cotton, or better still, of linen. Dip one of these cloths in a little of the benzine and begin rubbing the gloves. Clean them first carefully at the tips and wherever they are most soiled. Do not saturate the leather with benzine at any time, but apply just enough of the benzine with the cloth to remove the dirt. It will require vigorous rubbing to do this. In a few minutes the cloth will be so soiled that a clean one must be used. Renew the cloth frequently, as it absorbs the dirt. Rub the gloves with downward strokes from the fingers to the wrist. After a short time the gloves will be found perfectly clean, but they have now the harsh look of a "cleaned glove."

Bring forward a bowl of talcum powder. Rub the gloves thoroughly with it, applying it with a flannel cloth. This powder absorbs any remnant of oil, such as is found in even the best refined benzine, and restores the soft velvety surface of the glove. After the glove has been rubbed thoroughly with the powder, clean it off with a fresh flannel, shaking the gloves well. Hang them out in the open air for a few hours, where the sun cannot reach them. In a little while take them in and lay them away in your glove sachet.

Some glove cleaners use a preparation of one quart of deodorized benzine with one dram of sulphuric ether, one dram of chloroform and two drams of alcohol. The gloves are washed in this preparation. There is the same objection, however, to this process as there is to all processes where the leather is saturated, that it is apt to make the gloves stiff and hard. Talcum powder may be purchased at any good druggist's shop.

AN ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY.

When Sir Humphrey Davy was a boy of sixteen, a little girl one day came to him in great excitement and asked why, when she rubbed two pieces of cane together, they should make a spark of light. Humphrey was a studious lad, who spent hours in thinking out scientific problems. He patted the child's curly head and said: "I do not know, dear. Let us see if they really do make a light, and then we will try to find out why." He soon found that the little girl was right; the pieces of cane, if rubbed together quickly, gave a tiny light. Then he set to work to find out the reason; and after some time thanks to the observing powers of his little friend, and his own kindness to her in not impatiently telling her not to "worry," as so many might have done—Humphrey Davy made the first of his interesting discoveries. Every reed, cane, and grass has an outer skin of flinty stuff, which protects the inside from insects, and also helps the frail-looking leaves to stand upright.

Ella—"My husband says he thinks of me morning, noon and night."

Stella—"You must be doing your own cooking."

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. If you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your wall will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar in wall paper.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER
