A note written by Santa and attached to the big newspaper press stated that all details had been arranged for The Jeffersonian's Community Christmas Tree and Realistic Garden, and that he would be back to put the finishing touches on it before it was thrown open to the public on December 18th, to remain until after New Year.

AREA OF DUNDALK AVIATION FIELD TO BE ENLARGED.

The flying area of Logan Field, Dundalk, will be increased approximately one-fourth when new hangars, including storage tanks and pumps, now under construction at the southwest corner of the field have been completed, it was learned at Third Corps headquarters.

Four dilapidated Besseneau hangars, canvas affairs with wooden frames, are to be replaced by three naw structures of permanent air service type. The old hangars, originally designed as temporary knock-down structures, were erected during the World War.

The new ones are constructed of steel girders with asbestos covering and metal roofs and sides. Underground oil and gas tanks, a new feature at Logan Field, are being installed in connection with the construction work.

A large concrete platform will be built near the tanks to enable planes to taxi close up to them. This arrangement, together with a long rubber hose, is expected to facilitate service and eliminate former fuel problems.

Material for two of the new hangars was furnished by the Government, but the funds for the actual erection of the buildings was supplied by the State of Maryland and the work was done under the supervision of the National Guard.

Work on the third hangar is being done by contract under the supervision of the Third Corps Area quartermaster and involves an expenditure of about $9500. Altogether, the three new hangars will accommodate 18 planes.

According to Capt. Charles T. Phillips, Third Corps Area air officer, the new hangars will not be completed for about three weeks. Efforts will be made, however, to take care of about a dozen planes expected to fly here for the Army-Navy football game.

The old hangars and other buildings at the opposite end of the field, now being occupied by the Maryland National Guard air unit, will eventually be razed.

LABOR ORGANIZATION FOR SPARROWS POINT WORKERS.

Efforts to form a labor union among the workers at the Bethlehem Steel Company's plant at Sparrows Point will be made by Daniel M. Gayton, a national organizer of the American Federation of Labor, according to his announcment at the meeting of the Baltimore Federation. He asked for co-operation of the unions of the city in this movement.

After a debate renewed from week to week since the election, a resolution was passed condemning those men who "live on or by the American Federation of Labor for their utterances and activities opposed to the action of the American Federation of Labor in the last Presidential campaign."

A number of speakers made it clear they believe a labor official has a right to vote as he wants to, but they acted against the best interests of the movement in trying to influence votes for any candidate except La Follette, who had the official indorsement.

A copy of the resolution will be sent by wire to the labor convention in El Paso, Texas.

pany. Walter McPhail, who was with him, signalled an approaching electric car to stop in time to prevent it from running over Mr. Price. The Tapscott machine is said to have been running at a high rate of speed. Several other young men were riding with him, and it is claimed that all but one of them left after the accident.

Young Price sustained a deep gash on the forehead, was also cut on the arm and leg and bruised about the body.

He was taken to his home on the Joppa road, at Towson, and attended by Dr. Daniel Jenifer.

Marshal of Police Carroll E. Stansbury is making an investigation of the accident. Both machines were badly wrecked.

FIND DRY LAW SAVES $200,000,000 ANNUALLY—RESULT OF COMPARATIVE 8-YEAR SURVEY

Actual Decrease In Arrests For Drunkenness 1,000,000, Report Of World League Against Alcoholism Shows.

(Special to The Jeffersonian)

Crime in the United States, in proportion to the population, has decreased rather than increased since prohibition went into effect, according to a report made public by the World League Against Alcoholism. Savings to the States through the decrease in crime exceed the amount formerly paid as revenue by the liquor interests, the report sets forth, the saving being "conservatively estimated" at $200,000,000 annnally.

The survey, which the league says is the most extensive of the kind ever made, is based on figures from the police departments of 300 cities and the District of Columbia, every State except North Carolina and Oklahoma being represented. It covers arrests for all causes in the last four years prior to prohibition and the first four years of prohibition.

"It is true the number of arrests in the 'dry' period in the 300 cities is greater than the number for the 'wet' " the report says, "but when analyzed in connection with the increase in population, which is 5,000,000, the findings are contrary to the accepted belief that we are growing more criminal.

"The actual decrease in arrests for drunkenness since the Volstead act went into effect is 42.3 per cent for the 300 cities, or a million fewer cases of drunkenness each year than there were in the 'wet' period, for the whole nation. Where formerly 'drunk' cases made up 32.5 per cent. of th etotal arrests, they now are cut to 18.8 per cent.

"From 1913 to 1916 there was a yearly average of 58,946 arrested for all causes out of every 1,000,000 population. The total for 300 cities was 1,756,078. During the first four years of prohibition arrests for all causes were 2,040,700, or 58,859 per 1,000,000 population. The population in these cities has increased 5,000,000 during the four years. Applying this ratio of increase to the entire population, we have a yearly total of nearly 10,000,000 fewer arrests during the 'dry period than during the 'wet.'

"Failure to take into consideration all the surrounding circumstances is largely responsible for much talk about increase in crime. Police records show the greatest single factor in arrests today is the automobile, especially in the big cities. The largest number of arrests generally is for violation of traffic laws.

"The savings to the States that can be pointed to directly in connection with our crime situation are bigger today than they were before prohibition. The 1,000,000 fewer drunks, the arrest of each costing the police department alone $94, has resulted in savings from $95,000,000 yearly. Adding to this the additional cost of trial and detention this amount could be doubled and yet be a conservative estimate."

MARTIN J. MURPHY DEAD.

Martin J. Murphy, formerly assistant trainmaster at the Union Station, died at his home at Delight, after a brief illness. He retired from active duty in 1911, following long service with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Jane C. Murphy; two daughters, Mrs. Agnes S. Heany and Mrs. Helen Davis, and two sons, J. Harry and John F. Murphy.

Funeral services will be held at 9 A. M. today (Saturday) in St. Charles' Catholic Church, Pikesville. Requiem mass will be sung. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, Govans.
