SOME TRADESPEOPLE.

The swallow is a mason,
And underneath the eaves
He builds a nest, and plasters it,
With mud and hay and leaves.

The woodpecker is hard at work!
A carpenter is he;
And you may find him hammering
His house high up a tree.

The bullfinch knows and practices
The basketmaker's trade;
Oh, what a cradle for his young
The little thing has made.

Of all the weavers that I know
The chaffinch is the best;
High on the apple tree he weaves
A cosy little nest.

The goldfinch is a fuller;
A skillful workman he!
Of wool and threads he makes a nest
That you would like to see.

The cuckoo laughs to see them work:
"Not so," he says, "we do;
My wife and I take others' nests,
And live at ease—cuckoo!"

MOVING TO THE NEW LIBRARY, WASHINGTON.

From the Scientific American.

The old Congressional Library at Washington has been closed, and the work of removing the books to the new building has been commenced, a work which it is expected will take about three months. The moving, according to Assistant Librarian Spofford, embraces "the loading of books from their present shelves in the Capitol building into boxes, separately numbered and ticketed, so as to indicate the place they will occupy in the ironstacked rooms of the new library. Each division will be preserved in distinct order, and such rearrangement and classification as the detailed treatment requires will be gradually worked out. It is proposed to leave in each library division and subdivision enough shelf space for several years' growth, so that no further removal of books need be made for a long time to come."

Supt. Green has an ingenious arrangement for removing dust from the books before they are placed upon the new shelves. He has attached an ordinary rubber hose to the air compressor of the pneumatic tube system, and, to use his language, will just "turn the hose" on the dusty books. Instead of water, however, a stream of air, under heavy pressure, will do the work. At the end of the hose is a broad nozzle, one-sixteenth inch by four inches, which will enable the air to play on the books in a stream the shape of a brush. "It is likely," said Mr. Green, "that the general public has very little idea of the number of people who visit the new congressional library building. All during the spring and early summer our visitors averaged 1500 a day. Even now, with the city emptied by the summer exodus, the number is about 1,000 visitors a day."

Assistant Librarian Hutchison says the new library is "the most gorgeous public edifice in America. It has the largest golden dome in the world, with 10,000 square feet of surface. It is lighted by 1,800 windows; there are 25,000,000 bricks and $1,250,000 worth of granite. Congress appropriated $6,000,000 for its cost. The builder turned over $300,000 to the Treasury of this money when he handed over the keys." In the rotunda or reading room, over which Mr. Hutchison will preside, there will be room at the tables—allowing four feet for each person to spread himself in—for 260 readers at one time, and this is exclusive of the alcoves for students pursuing some special line of research. On the great dais in the center will stand the librarian and his clerks, taking orders for books and telephoning to the men in the distant book stacks. From the stacks the books will be sent to the reading room in traveling trays like those employed in retail stores for conveying bundles and money. A tunnel three feet underground and containing an endless chain railway connects the library with the Capitol, so that when a member of either house needs a book, even in the middle of a speech, it can be supplied at a moment's notice. The library of Congress ranks sixth among the libraries of the world in its present contents. France has the largest, England next; then comes Russia, and Germany follows with her libraries in Munich, Berlin and Strasburg, the last named holding almost equal rank with ours at Washington.

A teacher was once telling some children the story of the loss of the White Ship, and finished by telling them that, after hearing of his son's death, King Henry never smiled again.

One little girl in the class, on hearing this, said:

"Please, teacher, what did he do when they tickled him?"

Good morning my dear child. Is your mamma at home?

Willie—Yes, sir, she's at home; but I'm afraid the consolation of religion will be thrown away on her to-day, sir.

Dear me, and why so?

She's having trouble with her jelly, sir.

"My dear," said the editor's wife to her husband, "I want $40 to pay for my new bonnet. This is a perfect poem."

"I never pay for poems," replied the brute of a man.
