LaGrippe,

Followed by Heart Disease, Cured by DR. MILES' HEART CURE.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I reduced the doses, having gained fifteen pounds, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

TO THE VICTIMS OF THE MAINE.

Tread softly, O winds, in thy path o'er the deep:
Disturb not the bosom so sacredly folding
The loved of our Nation, who silently sleep
Among the sad secrets her vast depths are holding.
Here bows fair Columbia in anguish and pain,
To weep for her loved of the "ill-fated Maine."

Roll softly, O waves! Lay aside the bright crest
With which thou art ever thy bosom adorning.
A mantle of sadness becometh thy breast,
Which holds for our Nation the secret of mourning.
Chant softly, O billows! thy requiem refrain,
O'er the grave of our loved of the "ill-fated Maine."

Look softly, O stars, from the windows of night,
Who, trembling and pale, while our people were sleeping,
Mute witnesses stood, to the heart-rending sight,
Which filled all our Nation with sadness and weeping;
Keep watch, silent stars, from the sky's somber pane,
O'er the cold resting place of our loved of "the Maine."

O'er the bier of her loved ones our fair Nation bows
With sad, broken spirits, and grief-stricken faces,
And sacredly, over the brave victims' brows,
Her pledge of devotion and reverence she places,
While sadly her choirs chant their sorrowful strain
O'er the fate of the loved ones, who died on "the Maine."

A MAN TIGER.

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS.

We were encamped on the banks of the Chumbul river, on the east side of the Chittore hills, India. It was a government party, in charge of Captain Jordan, a military engineer. The object was to see if the river could be tapped and a canal constructed to run the waters across the flat country to the east for irrigation purposes. There were two English soldiers and a party of 20 natives detailed with the captain, and two English officers and mnself were with the survey as volunteers. This meant a surveying and hunting party combined. There was plenty of game in the Chittore hills, and Captain Jordan was a veteran hunter as well as a prominent engineer.

We had not yet got settled in camp when the natives appeared to tell us some queer stories regarding a tiger which had lately made his appearance in the neighborhood. In the first place, he was of astonishing size. No one had ever seen his like. In the next, as they declared, he had more the face of a human being than of a tiger. Again, he had been encountered, face to face, by several natives, but instead of attacking them had contented himself with a look and then walked off. On one occasion he had entered a village and stealthily approached an old man who was cooking his supper at a fire. His presence was not discovered until he rubbed his nose against the old man's shoulder and emitted a sound like the purring of a cat. Dumb and helpless with terror, the native waited to be attacked, but after walking around the fire two or three times the beast went off into the thicket. This old man stoutly declared that the tiger had the face of a man and that it seemed to desire speech with him. The beast had been roaming about for three weeks when we got there, but in all that time had not attacked a native nor killed an animal belonging to the villagers.

The natives of India are not only superstitious to the last degree, but given to the grossest exaggeration in all their statements, and their declarations in this case were taken with many grains of allowance. As a rule they are very anxious to get rid of their dangerous neighbors, but in this case they besought us not to harm the tiger. The soul of some good man, native or white, had taken possession of the beast, and for that reason he had spared the villagers and should be spared in turn. To kill him would be sacrilege, and in revenge a man eater would be sent to depopulate the village.

It was four days after the natives had come in before we got sight of the man tiger. Captain Jordan had begun his preliminary work, and one day when he was on the bank of the river, half a mile from camp, I took my gun to join him and get a shot at some wild swans which had passed down the stream. Thus far we had hunted only small game and had heard nothing further from the tiger. The sun shone brightly in a cloudless sky, and the weather was hot, and I knew enough of the tiger's habits to be sure that he would be lying up in some cool spot during the heat of the day. I heard the captain shouting to his assistants long before I got to him. They had crossed the river on a raft, and he was alone. Just before I reached him I struck into a path used by the wild animals as they came down from the hills to drink. Forty feet away I caught sight of the officer standing behind his surveying instrument, and at the same instant my eyes fell upon a tiger creeping along the path between us. For a few seconds I believed the creature to be a dog. Then as I fully realized what it was and that he was stalking the unsuspecting man I was so unnerved that I stood stock still and gazed at him. I had only a shotgun, loaded with swan shot, but the actions of the beast were so singular that I forgot I was armed at all. While I continued gazing at him he crept forward to the captain's feet and lay down and rolled over in play.

All of a sudden and without realizing what I was doing I uttered a shout. In turning the captain stumbled over the tiger and pitched forward, and, with a sort of yelp, the the beast sprang away into the bushes. Though the officer got a full view of the creature it was hard for him to believe that things had occurred as they had. As the tiger had not been disturbed by me it was a source of wonder why he had not attacked the officer. When the natives came to hear of it, they asserted with great earnestness that the soul of some friend of the captain had passed into the beast and that the tiger had heard of his presence and came to welcome him. This was absurd, of course, but nevertheless we had to admit that there was something very singular about the matter.

Three evenings later we sat at the door of the mess tent and smoked and talked after the evening meal. It was a bright moonlight evening, and we could see almost as well as at noonday. By and by Captain Jordan rose up and started down to his horse, 200 feet away, and we were following him with our eyes, when a tiger sprang out of a hollow where it had been crouching and seized him and rushed away to the thickets. The thing transpired so quickly that it was 15 seconds before one of us moved. As we sprang to our feet we asked each other if we had seen aright. The officer uttered no cry and the beast did not even snarl. The man was seized by the left hip, given a twist, and most of his body seemed to be on the tiger's back as the beast galloped away. Before one of us could seize a rifle the beast and his victim had disappeared into the brush, which came within 200 feet of our tents. We set up a great shouting and fired our guns, hoping to frighten the tiger, and as soon as lanterns could be lighted we pushed our way into the jungle, but the case was hopeless from the start. The tiger had crept across a clear piece of ground for a distance of 100 feet to reach the hollow. The moonlight was so strong that some of us ought to have seen him, but as a matter of fact his presence was not even suspected until the captain's horse scented him and began to cut up.

What happened to the captain we heard from his own lips next afternoon. The facts in the case were published in many Indian and English journals at the time, and strange as they were no one ventured to dispute them. Next morning we assembled 200 natives and beat up the country for miles around, hoping to at least find the half devoured body and give it burial. Not a trace of it could be found, nor was the tiger seen. When Captain Jordan was seized, the action was so sudden that it was half a minute before he realized the situation. The tiger's teeth did not grip the flesh at all, but only the clothing. The officer's arms were free, and had he had a pistol he could have made use of it. Clasping the tiger with his right arm, his left hung down, and as soon as the thicket was reached he grasped at the bushes to delay progress, In this way he checked the pace considerably until an open path leading up into the hills was reached. He heard our shouts and the report of firearms, but had no hope of escape. He was carried a distance of two miles and a half, and at the end of it the tiger scrambled up a very steep hill to a mass of rocks on the crest. These rocks were surrounded by a dense jungle, and in forcing a way through it the officer's face was badly cut by the bushes. He had planned to make a fight for his life when the tiger dropped him, but the beast acted so queerly that he changed his mind. There was no growling, no sign of anger. The tiger let go of him to back off and sit up on his haunches and whine and whimper and look at him in a queer way. Just at that spot the moonlight filtered down until the officer could see pretty plainly, and he was amazed to discover that the tiger had almost a human face. Not only that, but it was the face of a native servant who had been with him for years, but who was bitten by a cobra several years before and lost his life in saving that of his master.

So impressed was Captain Jordan with this wonderful resemblance that he called the name of his servant aloud. As he did so the tiger fawned upon him with every evidence of affection and carefully licked the blood off his face. When the officer sat up, the tiger rubbed its head against him and purred like a cat and seemed highly delighted to have its fur stroked. The queer conduct of the beast was a great puzzle to the officer, as you may well believe. Instead of being eaten alive he was being toyed with. It was a full hour before he dared hope that he was really to be spared. During the night he sat with his back to a rock, the tiger lying beside him, and every sound from camp came up to him in the stillness of the night. What daylight would bring he did not know. When it came, the tiger sat up and yawned and looked about. Then it licked his face and hands, rubbed his shoulder and finally slipped away into the jungle. In his report of the adventure Captain Jordan said the face of the tiger bore such a wonderful resemblance to that of his old servant that he thought himself dreaming. This resemblance was, of course, only in a general way. When the tiger left him, he did not know exactly what to do. He feared if he attempted to depart the beast would return and attack him, and he therefore remained quiet.

In about an hour the tiger reappeared, having evidently eaten and drunk, and he lay down beside the captain, and both slept until midafternoon. Then the tiger fondled the man again, looked him in the face for a long time, and finally whined and whimpered and went off. Ten minutes after he disappeared the captain rose up and started for camp, which he reached in less than an hour. His appearance struck us dumb for the moment. We scoffed at his story, but he took the whole party to the spot where he had been held captive. It was hard to swallow his statements, but I am satisfied he did not exaggerate in the slightest. Two days after his escape the tiger was found dead not far from the camp, and then all of us had a look at his face. Its resemblance to that of a native was indeed wonderful. Photographs were taken, and the papers printed woodcuts, and when the face was put in a group with four or five natives no one could detect it as that of a tiger. It was a queer thing, taken all around, but I have given you the details just as I got them, and you must figure things out for yourself.

How the Brahman Cleans His Teeth.

When the Brahman cleans his teeth, he must use a small twig cut from one of a number of certain trees, and before he cuts it he must make his act known to the gods of the woods.

He must not indulge in this cleanly habit every day. He must abstain on the 6th, the 8th, the 9th, the 14th, the 15th and the last day of the moon, on the days of new and full moon, on the Tuesday in every week, on the day of the constellation under which he was born, on the day of the week and on the day of the month which correspond with those of his birth, at an eclipse, at the conjunction of the planets, at the equinoxes and other unlucky epochs and also on the anniversary of the death of his father or mother.

Any one who cleans his teeth with his bit of stick on any of the above mentioned days will have hell as his portion.—"Hindoo Manners," by Abbe Dubois.

THE NEW WOMAN.

:o:

When the Lord slyly came
And a rib stole from Adam,
Giving Eden a dame
And the first man a madam,

All beauty had birth,
And most that was human
And gladdening to earth
Came with the new woman.

New joy filled the land;
Single blessedness doubled;
Then the Lord stayed His hand,
And our ribs left untroubled.

But now, with a moan,
Man is asking, impassioned,
From what funny bone
Is this New Woman fashioned?

With physics and law
Her eloquence streams so,
If not made from a jaw,
It really would seem so.

Does the New Woman, then,
In her singular rabies,
Find nothing in men—
Next to nothing in babies?
Alas and alack!
Oh Moses, and murther!
I'd see the Old back,
And the New Woman further.

See, sisters, I kneel.
Though I don't often meddle,
And I pray, ease the wheel;
O woman, back-pedal!

NO. 3630 EQUITY.

In the Circuit Court for Carroll County, in Equity.

Deborah A. Baile, Plaintiff, vs. Edward E. Roop and others, Defendants.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate in Carroll county, in the State of Maryland, of which a certain David Roop of A., late of said county, deceased, died seized and possessed, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the purpose of paying the debts of said intestate at the time of his death and remaining after his personal estate has been exhausted, in the payment of the same.

The bill states that said David Roop of A. was in his lifetime indebted unto the plaintiff, Deborah A. Baile, in the sum of four thousand dollars on his promissory note to her order, dated April 2nd, 1894, payable one year after the date thereof, with interest from date at five per centum, and that interest on said note has been paid to April 1st, 1895, and the sum of $414.17 paid on the principal, but that the residue of said principal and interest is still unpaid and due and owing.

That said David Roop of A. being so indebted unto said Deborah A. Baile and divers other persons, departed this life intestate on or about the 10th day of January, 1895, leaving surviving him a widow, Lucinda R. Roop, and the following children and only heirs at law, viz.: Edward E. Roop, who is intermarried with Hannah May Roop, and Annie Shoup, who is intermarried with Dr. Jesse Shoup.

That said David Roop of A. died seized and possessed of valuable real estate situated in Carroll county, aforesaid, and letters of administration on his personal estate were granted by the Orphans' Court of Carroll county to said Edward E. Roop.

That at the time of his death the said David Roop of A. and the said Edward E. Roop were partners trading under the firm, name and style of David Roop & Son and extensively engaged in the making of flour and in milling generally, and that said Edward E. Roop is the sole surviving partner of said co-partnership.

That said Lucinda R. Roop and Annie Roop (now Annie Shoup, wife of said Dr. Jesse Shoup) did by their deed dated July 2, 1895, and recorded among the Land Records of Carroll county, in Liber B. F. C., No. 81, folio 308, etc., grant and convey unto the said Edward E. Roop all their right, title, interest and estate in and to certain lots or parcels of land of which the said David Roop of A. died seized and possessed and that the lots or parcels of land so conveyed by said deed were, on the 4th day of September, 1895, conveyed by said Edward E. Roop by deed of mortgage to Charles W. Slagle for the purpose of securing the payment to said Charles W. Slagle of the joint and several promissory note of said Edward Roop and Lucinda R. Roop and Annie Roop, now Annie Shoup, for the sum of $12,000.00 dated July 1st, 1895, and payable three years after date, with interest, which said mortgage deed is recorded among the Real Estate Mortgage Records of Carroll county, in Liber B. F. C. No. 37, folio 262, etc.

That, since the death of said David Roop of A., a certain Frederick Richter obtained a judgment against one Mary Horn and Edward E. Roop for the sum of $1356.98, with interest from February 23, 1897, and costs of suit.

That the personal estate left by the said David Roop of A. is not sufficient to discharge and pay all the just debts due and owing by the said intestate at the time of his death and the costs of administration, and that the personal property in the hands of the said Edward E. Roop, as administrator aforesaid and as surviving partner aforesaid, ought to be applied to the payment of the claims of the plaintiff, Deborah A. Baile, and the other creditors of said intestate so far as the same will extend, and that any deficiency in such personal estate ought to be supplied by a sale of all or such part as may be necessary of the real estate of said intestate.

That said Edward E. Roop, as administrator and as surviving partner as aforesaid, has not accounted for the estate of said intestate in his hands in either of said capacities.

That the deed hereinbefore mentioned from said Lucinda R. Roop and Annie Roop to said Edward E. Roop; and the said mortgage deed hereinbefore mentioned from said Edward E. Roop to said Charles W. Slagle, were both made, executed and delivered when the parties to said instruments of writing and every of them well knew or could have known by using reasonable diligence that the personal estate of said intestate had not been settled and accounted for in the Orphans' Court of Carroll County, and that the personal estate of said intestate was not sufficient to pay and discharge the debts of said intestate, and that said instruments of writing are both null and void as to said plaintiff, and the other creditors of the said David Roop of A.

That the judgment recovered as aforesaid by said Frederick Richter against said Mary Horn and Edward E. Roop is not a lien on the real estate of said David Roop of A. so far as the same affects the rights of said plaintiff and the other creditors of said David Roop of A.

And said bill prays that said Edward E. Roop, in his respective capacities as administrator and surviving partner as aforesaid, be required to answer under oath the special interrogatories appended to said bill; that an account may be taken, under the direction of the Court, of the said debt due as aforesaid to said plaintiff and of all other debts which were due and owing by said David Roop of A. at the time of his death, and which still remain unpaid, and, also, of the estate in the hands of or received by said Edward E. Roop, in his respective capacities of administrator and surviving partner; that the personal estate may be applied in payment of the debt due plaintiff and all other creditors; that the real estate of the said David Roop of A., or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be sold for the payment of the aforesaid debts remaining unsatisfied after the application of the personal estate as aforesaid; that the said deed from Lucinda R. Roop and Annie Roop to Edward E. Roop, the mortgage from said Edward E. Roop to Charles W. Slagle; the judgment of said Frederick Richter against said Mary Horn and Edward E. Roop shall all be declared null and void so far as they affect the rights of plaintiff and the other creditors of intestate.

And prays for the writ of sub poena against all defendants residing in the State of Maryland, and also for an order of publication against Lucinda R. Roop and Annie Shoup and Dr. Jesse Shoup, her husband, who reside in the District of Columbia, and are non-residents of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 18th day of March, 1898, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Carroll county, Md., once in each of four successive weeks before the 18th day of April next, give notice to said non-resident defendants Lucinda R. Roop, Annie Shoup and Dr. Jesse Shoup, her husband of the object and substance of this bill of complaint, warning them and each of them, the said Lucinda R. Roop, Annie Shoup and Dr. Jesse Shoup, her husband, to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 16th day of May next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

AN OPEN LETTER.

WESTMINSTER, April 10th, 1890.

Mr. Jos. B. Boyle:

Dear sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but temporary relief. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try your Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost instant relief, but a permanent cure. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am,

Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.

Two Ways
of getting Glasses:

ONE,

to go to a first-class optician, have your eyes properly tested and get what you need;

THE OTHER,

to go to a merchant who keeps spectacles, make a "grab in the bag," as it were, get a pair that don't fit you (although it may seem so for the moment), run the risk of ruining your eye-sight entirely, and all for a very small difference in expense.

If you need the services of a good optician, we can serve you well and cheaply.

Wall Paper!
Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. If you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a oa a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of
WALL PAPER
