The Advocate denominates the annexation of Hawaii a theft. Tut, tut, neighbor; your friend Gorman voted for annexation. Is he a thief?

Congress adjourned till December, on Friday of last week, after a memorable session. With trifling opposition liberal appropriations were made to defray the expenses of the war with Spain, a total amount of $361,788,095 having been devoted to that purpose. The total appropriations fall little short of $900,000,000, the largest amount since the Civil War. Patriotism was stronger than party with representatives of all politicial organizations, and although friction was unavoidable in many instances, the session was remarkable for the unanimity which marked the action of the members.

The privilege of subscribing for any portion of the popular war loan closed at 3 o'clock on Thursday. The amount of bonds to be issued is $200,000,000, and applications were received for many times more than the whole. The people have sought, with avidity, to invest in these bonds and they will go directly into the hands of individuals instead of yielding a large margin of profit to a syndicate. Though bearing but three per cent. interest, the security of the government is regarded as so absolutely certain that it can borrow from our own people all the money required to carry on the war, at that rate.

Under the resolutions annexing the Republic of Hawaii to the U. S., a commission has been appointed by President McKinley to administer the public affairs of our new territory until such time as Congress shall provide a territorial government by law. Three of the five commissioners appointed are Americans and two Hawaiians, and they form together a thoroughly competent and intelligent board for the purpose indicated. In fact the members of this commission are probably as well versed in Hawaiian affairs as any five men in the whole world. They are: Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama; Senator Shelby M. Cullom, of Illinois; Representative Robert R. Hitt, of the Ninth Congressional District of Illinois; President Sanford B. Dole and Judge W. F. Frear, of Hawaii.

Neither internal nor external foes have been able to shake the foundation of the Republican government set up in Hawaii during the closing months of President Harrison's administration. With the moral and material support of the Cleveland administration to back them conspiracies against the young republic utterly failed of their purpose and the Hawaiian government, with Sanford B. Dole at its head, has stood firm and unshaken against internal and external foes. It is supreme folly to deny that government the right to make treaties with other powers. There has been been no other Hawaiian authority recognized by the world during all these years, and its consent to annexation with the United States makes that proceeding flawless except in the minds of those who suffer from an excess of partisan bigotry.

Charles T. Reifsnider, Esq., one of the most prominent and successful members of the Westminster bar, and Dr. J. J. Weaver, Jr. of Uniontown, are spoken of for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Second District of Maryland. When such congressional timber is available there should be no doubt about the nomination coming this way. The Democrats have several times nominated and elected Carroll county men, but during the long period of the county's connection with the Second District their opponents in her borders have never had one of their own men in the field. The county has been part of the Second district for nearly sixty years except during the decade following the census of 1860, when it belonged to the Sixth District. During the latter period Judge Smith was nominated, but he was the only anti-Democratic candidate ever given to the county. In all justice and fairness this wrong should be righted. The county can now furnish a candidate whose nomination is fit to be made and who will go into the canvass with energy and vigor and make a fight worthy the righteousness of the cause. Let us, by all means, have this just concession.

A Contrast.

The history of Spain exhibits an object lesson of untold value to other nations seized of colonial possessions, and forms a powerful contrast to that of Great Britain. Both these ancient nations have been aggressive in the acquisition of foreign territory and Spain's territorial possessions at one time probably exceeded those of any other country in the world. In North, Central and South America the West Indies, as in the Eastern Hemisphere, her banner floated over a vast dominion. She has been stripped of most of these possessions—not by wars with foreign powers but by the revolutionary action of their inhabitants, whom she treated with injustice and oppression until every sentiment of affection for the mother country was obliterated from their hearts and a fierce desire for independence filled them. The last vestige of this great empire is now slipping from her as the result of her unwise and injurious policy.

Great Britain, too, has been and is yet the possessor of vast colonies in almost every clime. She holds most of them still, because she early and wisely learned, by the lesson of experience, that her highest interests lay in binding them to her by stronger ties than those welded alone by force. They are hers by mutual interest. She learned from the revolt of her American colonies that never-ending conflicts would follow the policy of repression and oppression practised toward them, and the lesson was not lost. She is intrenched and invulnerable in every land over which her flag floats because she exercises justice and judgment in the administration of its affairs.

Ex-United States Senator Omar D. Conger, of Michigan, died at Ocean City, Md., on Monday, aged eighty-three years.

The Effect of Protection.

Whatever may be said of protection in theory, it remains a fact, undeniable, that in this country it has proved a great stimulus to trade and commerce as well as to manufactures. One of its chief claims to favor has been its beneficial effect upon manufactures and its influence in maintaining remunerative wages for labor. But its advantages are not confined to these interests, extensive and far reaching as they are. Its effect has been felt greatly in trade and commerce also.

Every period of protection has been marked by an upward tendency in the business of the country. Hard times, brought about by low tariff duties, have been invariably cured by a return to protection, and the high tide of trade has been reached under the protective system. Even the young men of to-day can recall the effect of the McKinley tariff, under which our exports reached a billion of dollars per annum and made a balance of trade of two hundred millions in our favor; and can remember, also, how the tide receded and trade languished when the people reversed the protective policy by electing Mr. Cleveland to the Presidency, the second time, with a Democratic Congress at his back.

The hard times which set in with the event last referred to continued until protection was inaugurated by the passage of the Dingley bill last year, when a new era of prosperity began and, for the fiscal year ended June 30th, swelled the volume of trade to extraordinary proportions. The exact figues have not been made out, but it is known that exports from this country during the period mentioned approximated twelve hundred millions of dollars. This is about two hundred millions of dollars more than the exports for the year ending June 30th, 1892, the largest previously known. Of course much of the increase was in agricultural products, but there was also a large increase in exports of manufactured articles, the total of which aggregated nearly three hundred millions of dollars.

Imports have not kept pace with this marvelous development of our export trade, and hence the balance of trade in our favor, for the last fiscal year, is simply enormous, the amount being in excess of five hundred millions of dollars. To give the entire credit of this wonderful exhibit to the new tariff would be unjust, but there can be no doubt that the tariff had a large share in bringing about a condition so highly favorable to American interests. Theories go for little in the face of these wonderful facts, which demonstrate the practical utility and value, to the American people, of the system which maintains the wages of labor and opens the markets of the world to the products of American skill.

The Grumbler Abroad.

One of the privileges of every American citizen is indulgence in free and unrestrained criticism of the acts of his government and of those who for the time being may be he called upon to administer it. This privilege extends, also, to hostile remarks upon the Army and Navy, the officers who direct their operations, and to their movements generally. The impropriety of such remarks is not doubtful, but the privilege of making them remains, and grumblers may indulge their proclivities in that direction without fear of molestation.

And the grumbler is now abroad in the land, criticising, doubting, suggesting evil and endeavoring to impress everybody with whom he comes in contact with his own warped and misleading conclusions. He may be either a cross-roads politician, a war correspondent, or the editor of a country newspaper. But whatever his calling, occupation or profession, he is just absolutely certain that everybody in authority, from the President down to the humblest subaltern in army or navy, has been blundering from the beginning of the trouble with Spain; is incompetent and unfit for the station he holds, and that his part in the conduct of the war has been a lamentable failure.

He takes no account of the herculean task imposed upon the nation of improvising an army, providing equipments and munitions of war, procuring ships for the transportation of troops, patroling a vast coast line and blockading numerous ports with a limited number of warships, while at the same time engaging and destroying almost the entire navy of its antagonist—all of which has been accomplished within less than ninety days since the existence of a state of war was first recognized.

Something has warped his judgment and embittered his mind against his country and the heroes who are gaining imperishable renown for themselves and undying glory for the nation. He looks at everything through the distorted medium of his own prejudices and so fails to discern that the history of the world has furnished no more brilliant achievements in war than have crowned both the American Army and Navy in the existing war with Spain.

He belittles every success of American soldiers and sailors and exaggerates every error of judgment, or mistake in action on their part, and sees only something to criticise and nothing to commend.

The picture of this grumbler is not a pleasant one, and we trust few of our readers have come in contact with him, either in person, or through the columns of a newspaper. If they have done so however, or shall have this experience hereafter, let them not be disturbed by his lugubrious vaporings, or his quotations from other misled individuals. The war is going forward to a successful termination; Cuba will be free and independent; Spain will lose Porto Rico and the Philippines and will indemnify the United States for the cost of the war; civilization will be extended and the world will be better for the conflict.

It has been decided by the proper authority that under the new internal revenue law a ten cent stamp must be placed on every marriage certificate. Marriage certificates are not specially named as requiring stamps, but come under the head of "all other certificates required by law." Under the Maryland law the minister is required to hand the parties married a duplicate certificate and also return the original to court. Thus two ten-cent stamps are required and ministers may properly assure themselves in advance that the cost of the stamps will not fall upon them.

The Country Should Honor Him.

It is eminently proper that his native State should exhibit just appreciation of the achievements of her hero son, Commodore Winfield Scott Schley, and hence the demonstrations already made in his honor at Frederick, his native place, and elsewhere in the State, have been just tributes to this distinguished officer of the American Navy. It has fallen to the lot of Commodore Schley to have imposed upon him, at various times, rare and important duties, which he performed with great ability and fidelity. His rescue of Gen. Greeley and his companions from starvation and death, in the inhospitable polar regions, was an achievement which conferred upon him and those associated with him well deserved and lasting honor. The skill and judgment displayed by him on that occasion saved the remnant of Greeley's exploring party at a most critical moment. Every member of the party would have perished if Schley had not done exactly the right thing in steaming to their rescue.

That achievement, however, pales in lustre beside his more recent one—the destruction of Cervera's fleet, the pride of the Spanish Navy. Schley found Cervera in the harbor of Santiago and then predicted that the Spaniard would never get home with his fleet. He made that prediction good by the destruction of every ship under Cervera's command. His achievement paralleled that of Dewey at Manila and gave imperishable renown to the American Navy.

It takes nothing from the credit due to Admiral Sampson to honor his subordinate, Schley, as the real hero of Santiago; and Maryland thus honors him. In addition to all that has been said and done in his praise Governor Lowndes announces that he will have a handsome sword presented to him by the State as a token of the regard of her people.

But the achievements of Commodore Schley were wrought as an American officer and not as a Marylander. The renown won by the ships under his command belongs to the American Navy and to the whole country, and while Maryland pays him peculiar honor, as a native of her soil, his fame, and that of his comrades in the great naval victory won at Santiago, belongs to the whole country. The country, therefore, should honor him, and should render him a more substantial reward than mere words of praise. His promotion to the ranks of admiral should be made without delay.

The Campaign Against Santiago Ended.

The City and Spanish Army Defending It Surrender.

12,000 to 15,000 SPANISH SOLDIERS CAPTURED.

Officers and Men to be Sent to Spain.

The Surrender Includes Four Cities and 5,000 Square Miles of Eastern Cuba.

A GREAT MILITARY ACHIEVEMENT.

DEWEY ALSO HEARD FROM.

Critics of the conduct of the war against Spain have had another setback. The army under Gen. Shafter has captured Santiago and the army defending it.

Gen. Toral, who succeeded Gen. Lenares in command of the Spanish forces after the latter was wounded, came to terms with Gen Shafter at 2 30 on Thursday afternoon. Little or no fighting had occurred since last week's report. The fleet threw some shells into the city and the investment of the place was being hourly strengthened, leaving the Spanish army only a desperate chance of defence. Finding that an assault was about to be made Gen. Toral, probably with the consent of the Spanish government, surrendered.

The surrender covered not only the city of Santiago but a large part of the eastern end of the island, including 5000 square miles of territory, four cities, many fortifications and their armament, munitions of war, &c.

Gen. Miles, the commander of all the American forces was present, but did not interfere with Gen. Shafter in conducting the negotiations for the surrender.

By the terms of the surrender the Spanish officers and men are to be sent to Spain; of course to serve no more in the war unless exchanged.

While fierce fighting and severe losses were incurred on both sides in the preliminary movement which resulted in the investment of Santiago by our troops, the fall of the city and the capture of the Spanish army was made at last without firing another shot, causing an immense saving of human life and justifying fully the brief delay at which so much impatience had been exhibited by grumbling critics.

While this notable victory was being achieved in Cuba news came from Admiral Dewey that the cruisers Raleigh and Concord had taken Isla Grande, in Subic Bay, with 1300 men, arms and ammunition. The insurgent chief, Aguinaldo, notified Admiral Dewey that he had taken all of Subic Bay except the island mentioned, which he was prevented from attacking by the German man-of-war Irene. Thereupon the Raleigh and Concord were sent to the scene and the Irene left. The island was surrendered without the firing of a shot.

Reports of future movements of the army promptly follow the surrender of Santiago, the chief of these being that an expedition will be sent at once to take Porto Rico, and that Watson will attack the Canary Islands with his fleet. Whether these reports be inaccurate or not, it is very certain that the victories thus far will now be promptly followed up and the war prosecuted with the utmost vigor, if Spain shall not sue for peace.
