Wild Pigeons.

It is within the memory of people yet young in years of the enormous flocks of wild pigeons that frequented this region of country; flying in such quantities as to darken the sun and their noise sounding like the distant rumbling of thunder. We often hear the remark: "How strange it is that the wild pigeon does not come back again," but how much stranger it is to learn that, in all probability, not a single living specimen exists to-day of that once handsome bird. The Smithsonian Institute recently addressed a letter of inquiry to Captain A. A. Clay, of Rasselas, to learn if that gentleman knew of even a remnant of a flock of wild pigeons and they were informed that he did not. Further inquiries have developed the fact that to all appearances the wild pigeon is as extinct as the Dodo.

Although numbering millions upon millions the flocks of this bird perhaps never exceeded more than three or four. Their habits, places of breeding and the manner in which they were systematically caught by the hundreds of thousands and shipped to cities for use as food is common information. The question is how have they been totally annihilated? The best information of their final extinction comes from the upper lakes of Michigan, where it seems the last congregation of these birds were known to exist; and while crossing one of the lakes a sudden and very violent storm came up, which completely overpowered them, dashing them against each other and into the water until not one remained alive. That which now seems to have been the final destruction of this once famous bird there is no question. It only remains to wonder whether it was by accident or whether impelled by instinct, it had sought its own destruction; realizing instinctively from the persistent and murderous onslaughts which man had made upon it, that nothing short of utter annihilation was its doom.—A. Trueman, in Brookville (Pa.) Republican.

About Roads.

Unless the roads are constantly watched and repaired, just as regularly and carefully as the great railway companies watch their roadbeds, they will deteriorate very rapidly. There is no use building expensive roads and leave them go to ruin from neglect.

In a recent address on this subject, E. H. Thayer stated that "a man with one horse and cart, working eight months in the year, can keep seventy miles of road in constant, effective repair at the outside expense of $350, which is five dollars per mile, while the cost of attempting to make passable the ordinary country road exceeds thirty-five dollars per mile."

A dirt cart is loaded with crushed rock or gravel. With a hoe, a shovel and a rammer, the repairer, as frequently as the task is assigned him will permit, starts out on the road. Every washout he repairs, every rut he fills up, loose stones he throws out, rough places he levels, obstructions in water courses he removes, and his tireless efforts day after day result in keeping the road in good repair and making happy every man and woman who drives over the highway.

"I attended the theatre last night," said the dry-goods clerk, "and the play was out of sight."

"What was the nature of it?" asked the little blonde stenographer.

"It was a melodrama," answered the yardstick manipulator, "and the last scene is quite realistic. Just as two burglars crawl in at the kitchen window the clock strikes 1, and—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you," said the athletic boarder, "but which one did the clock strike?"

"What caused you to become a tramp?"

"A love affair, lady."

"How sad. Tell me about it."

"Well, yer see, when I was young an' didn't know any better I fell in love with idleness an' have never bin able to conquer me consumin' passion."

He—Is it not hard on your throat when you learn to sing?

She—No. Hard on the neighbors.

Hogs in Pasture.

The opinion seems to exist among swine raisers, who are beginning to learn the advantages of raising bacon hogs on the range, that this method should apply only to hogs raised to moderate weight. This is a mistake, for the most expensive and least healthful combination is dry corn with water or slops fed in a dry lot, while the opposite result is obtained when one-half the quantity the corn is fed and the pigs have grass or clover pasture. The value of corn meal for fattening pigs is conceded, but, on the other hand, it is poor food for growing pigs, although of value when fed as directed or in the season when green pasture is not obtainable, if fed with wheat bran or clover hay. No matter how low the price of corn may be, the green food is cheaper, especially when fed in pasture, besides being a better corrective of the system than the dry foods. It is a matter of record that swine raised on corn almost wholly are subject to diseases of various kinds, while those pastured and fed a half ration of corn are strong and healthy, and are rarely attacked by cholera.

Figg—Did I ever tell you what my little boy said when he saw his aunt on a bicycle for the first time?

Briggs—No, you never did; and I can't tell you how much I appreciate your forbearance.

"I doan see no diffunce twix de man 'at wucks an' de man 'at loafs," said Deacon Johnson. "Dey hain't no diffunce, speshul," replied Deacon Jackson, "'ceptin' dat dey calls de lofin' feller 'kunnel.'"

LaGrippe,

Followed by Heart Disease, Cured by DR. MILES' HEART CURE.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I reduced the the doses, having gained fifteen pounds, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. If you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Two Ways

of getting Glasses:

ONE,

to go to a first-class optician, have your eyes properly tested and get what you need;

THE OTHER,

to go to a merchant who keeps spectacles, make a "grab in the bag," as it were, get a pair that don't fit you (although it may seem so for the moment), run the risk of ruining your eye-sight entirely, and all for a very small difference in expense.

If you need the services of a good optician, we can serve you well and cheaply.
