AN OPEN LETTER

To The Law Enforcement Authorities of Cecil County And State of Maryland

Within the past week or so some police authorities have been conscientious enuf to inquire as to what the public thinks about the Taylor case. Any official concern for the feeling of the public is welcome, be it motivated by contrition or attrition.

By the Taylor case we refer to the death and incineration of Robert Christie Tayor early on Tuesday, May 2, in his automobile on a country road below Rising Sun, and subsequent suicide of his brother's wife, Doris Taylor.

As a matter of fact, the public, speaking of those who live around Colora, as young Taylor used to, have thought about this case a great deal. At least most of us have reached the uncomfortable conclusion that Bob Taylor was murdered. For obvious reasons that conclusion is not comforting to us. We all use the public roads more or less, and this episode apparently took place on a public road. As members of a so-called organized society we have in large part voluntarily surrendered our natural rights of self-defense to the agencies created for the purpose. We look to them for protection, no doubt just as Bob Taylor did. While we have no way of knowing whether Taylor got more or less protection than he was entitled to, we do know that obviously he didn't get enough. The same could be said about Ted Cox, Hasel Burtou, an old man named Howard Johnson, Cef Dalton, a man named Burkins, and a man named Strickland, all more or less worthy citizens who met violent deaths within a radius of ten miles of Rising Sun during the past ten years or so. In most of the above cases the circumstances may have been a bit less than obvious, and some of them may have been suicides. But unquestionably some of them were murders. Yet no one was ever executed, nor is there, so far as we know, any one serving time for any of them at this still close date. These facts, on the face of them, seem to describe upper Cecil County as a fairly safe place to commit murder.

The public around Colora is thinking that in the case of Bob Taylor, a boy who wasn't so very well-known and who was not conspicuously addicted to travel, it ought to have been a fairly simple routine matter to check every place he had been for perhaps a week or two back and nearly everyone he was with, at least twenty-four hours prior to his death. So far as any of us knows this has not been done too well.

Almost all the people around here think Bob Taylor was murdered. And their reaction to the expressed desire of the State Police to call his death suicide may be described as somewhat less than kindly.

Exactly the same thing can be said about their reaction to the impression that is spreading that the authorities are postponing the inquest to allow the public to cool off sufficient so that a verdict of suicide might be returned without creating too much stir.

Up to the present time the efforts made by state and county officers to solve this case have been insufficient, ineffectual, and awkward in the extreme. Our States Attorney is supposed to be a trained lawyer, and the State Police trained officers. Yet it is difficult to imagine how any of us could have bungled the Taylor case more or accomplished any less in the way of solution. Our police are deadly when confronted with broken tail lights and illegal race track "books", both of which no doubt are grave menaces to social safety, but when our automobiles are stolen (four or five were stolen in and around Rising Sun last summer during one week.) and our citizens are murdered, the lions of the law are not around. Indeed, practically speaking, it would seem that they never arrive.

New Trial Magistrates System

Substitution of Fixed Salary For Fees Among Important Provision of Bill

Annapolis, May 29—Under the provisions of House Bill 720, signed the other day by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, June 1, will mark the inauguration of the Trial Magistrates' System' throughout the twenty-three counties of the State, and the abolition of the antiquated "fee system" of payment for magistrates, which system was bitterly attacked by Governor O'Conor during his campaign.

A total of seventy-five Trial Magistrates are provided, with Baltimore County having the largest number, fourteen, and Allegany Washington and Frederick counties are given five each; Cecil, Garrett, Harford and Worcester, four each; and from one to three for each of the remaining counties.

In prescribing the duties of the magistrates, the Bill stipulates that "any civil or criminal action or proceeding instituted before a justice of the peace, other than a trial magistrate, shall be promptly removed by said justice, by a transfer of the original papers, with a copy of the docket entries, to the nearest or only trail magistrates of the county for trial and determination or other action within his jurisdiction, etc." Trial magistrates "shall have possess power to suspend sentence in any case within their jurisdiction, provided that such suspension is made at the trial of the case and not after judgment has been pronounced."

Salaries Instead of Fees

Stipulated in the title of the bill, as part of its purpose, is "to make application to all the counties the policy heretofore applied by law in Baltimore City and to a partial extent in certain counties, of substituting salaries for the fees paid in civil and criminal cases as the method of compensating justices of the peace for the perforance of their duties in such cases, and to provide for the payment of such salaries by the County Commissioners". In Baltimore County, for instance, the salary specified in the Bill for the magistrate at Towson is $3,000 per year, with six others receiving $1,800 and the remaining seven, $1,200 per year. The highest salaries provided are for the two sitting magistrates at Cumberland, $3,600 per year each. Salaries of the remaining magistrates throughout the counties, many of whom will sit only part-time, range down to $300 per year.

Substitutes Provided

Justices of the peace other than trial magistrates will receive $20,00 per year for their respective counties, except, Talbot and Queen Anne's, where $50.00 per year is specified. However, they may retain all fees lawfully charged by them for taking acknowledgments or affidavits unrelated to their civil or criminal jurisdiction. In addition to the justices of the peace, one for each election district of each county; and the trial magistrates, the Bill provides that the Governor shall appoint one justice of the peace "at large" for each county, who shall be designated as "Substitute Trial Magistrate". They will receive a salary of $100.00 per year, except the substitute magistrate for Baltimore county, who shall receive $400.00 per year, in addition to the compensation, on a pro-rata basis, for every day he shall sit in place of another magistrate.

BRANDYWINE MANOR PASTOR DELIVERS MESSAGE

On Thursday afternoon, May 18, J. Paul Slaybaugh, Headmaster of the West Nottingham Academy presented to the faculty and students as the chapel speaker of the day, Mr. H. H. Kurtz, pastor of the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian Church, Glen Moore, Penna.

Mr. Kurtz delivered a thought stimulating and challenging message. He opened with a pessimistic picture of world affairs to-day, listing: the deep and real apprehension concern possible war; the fear of the loss of the contributions made through the years to civilization, or the fear that they are now lost as witnessed by records of automobile accidents, crime and corruptions.

In concluding Mr. Kurtz insired the hope for the future. He pointed out that this did not lie with Youth as has been suggested by the various movements, but with a refermation, salvation, and judgment through the living power of the Sovereign God.

College Park, Md.—Governor Herbert R. O'Conor will be the principal speaker at the Commencement Exercises of the University of Maryland here Saturday, June 3.

Governor Herbert R. O'Conor

More than 700 students are graduating from the Baltimore and College Park branches of the University. Tydings Is Alumni Speaker

High point of the week's program is Alumni Day, Friday, June 2, when the historic old Rossbourg Inn, newly restored, will be dedicated to the spirit and traditions of the Alumni Association.

The building is particularly fitted for this purpose, being the oldest on the campus. It was built in 1798, and served as one of the main stops on the old post road to Baltimore and points north. Speakers at the dedication exercises will be Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University, and Dr. W. W. Skinner, chairman of the Board of Regents of the University.

The alumni dinner Friday will highlight talks by State Senator Millard E. Tydings, past president of the Alumni Association; and Munro Leaf, graduate of the Class of '27, and author of "Ferdinand the Bull."

Final event of Commencement Week will be a picnic luncheon for graduates, parents, and friends on the University campus, Saturday afternoon, immediately after the Commencement Exercises.

NATIONAL MILK MONTH

A survey made recently shows that the dairy farmers of this state will be faced with not only the normal surplus of milk always prevalent at this season of the year, but with a much larger surplus than in any recent year.

In an effort to move this surplus milk and to further educate the consuming public to drink more milk—nature's most healthful food, the Read Drug and Chemical Company Chain Drug Stores, operating forty-five stores in Maryland, in cooperation with the Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers Association, have set aside the entire month of June to display and feature milk.

This will make the fourth year in which the Read drug stores have held such milk campaigns and with excellent results, as during the month of June, 1938, this group of stores sold 185,000 bottles of milk.

Statewide coverage together with large show window trims and attractive signs will be used to make this campaign even more successful than in previous years.

MERCHANTS OPPOSE PARKING METERS

Parking meters, Mayor Henry H. Mitchell announces, will not be installed in Elkton despite the fact the City Council approved the proposition last week. He says the contract has not and will not be signed.

The reason has not been made public, but it is understood that a broad opposition by the merchants as well as many towns people resulted in the reversal of the council's action.

Another reason assigned is that the Meter Company of Chicago, objected to having only the business section of the town placed in the meter zone.
