SATURDAY, AUGUST 27, 1898.

A strong sentiment in favor of annexation to the United States has sprung up among the people of the Island of Jamaica, and is rapidly growing. It is said that annexation is the only remedy against irretrievable financial ruin. Jamaica belongs to Great Britain, and, considering the friendly relations between the two governments, it is entirely out of the line of possibility that any overture from her people to transfer their allegiance to the United States can be considered, unless, indeed, the British government shall take the initiative in the proceeding.

The situation in relation to the pending peace proceedings between the United States and Spain has not changed materially since last week. It seems to be generally accepted that the retention of the Philippine Islands is not contemplated by the administration, and that the utmost demand of the United States will be for the Island of Luzon, which, of course, carries the City of Manila with it. The peace commission, on the part of the United States, is not yet complete, but may be announced before the close of the week. Insurgents in portions of Cuba and the Philippines are still giving the Spaniards trouble, but, at Manila, the insurgent forces are said to be submissive to the American army and look upon Dewey as a father.

THE RERUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

It was stated in the correspondence of the Baltimore Evening News of Monday last that the convention of the Republicans of this county, held in Odd Fellows' Hall, this city, that day, was not very well attended. If the News correspondent referred to the attendance of spectators the statement was perfectly correct. If, however, it was meant that the convention was not very well attended by delegates, it was plainly very erroneous. A full convention of the Republicans of this county comprises 65 members—5 from each district. Fifty-three delegates were present at Monday's convention, and a better representative body of Carroll county voters of any party has never assembled in this city. The convention was composed of the best class of citizens, and in numbers and personnel formed a body which called from the presiding officer an enthusiastic eulogy. The term "magnificent representative assemblage," which he applied to it, was not, in the sense described, at all an unfitting one. Dr. Weaver's speech, upon taking the chair was, throughout, well expressed and forcible, and that it met the approbation of the convention was evinced by the hearty and repeated applause which it elicited.

The work of the convention was performed in a harmonious, businesslike and creditable manner, and its acts were without a dissenting voice.

The speech with which the convention's proceedings was supplemented, by Charles T. Reifsnider, Esq., at the unanimous request of the delegates, was a fitting tribute to the Republican patry, the history of which he epitomized in the declaration that it three times saved the country. It was a straightforward, manly statement of Mr. Reifsnider's reasons for being a Republican, and he was frequently interrupted during its delivery by loud applause.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

WESTMINSTER, AUGUST 22, 1898.

Pursuant to call the Republican county convention for the purpose of electing delegates to the congressional nominating convention of the Second District of Maryland, to be held in Baltimore, September 1st, 1898, assembled at Odd Fellows' Hall, Westminster, at 10.30 A. The committee also recommended that fifteen delegates be elected to represent the county in the Congressional nominating convention—one from each district having one polling place and two from the districts divided into two voting precincts. On motion the recommendation was adopted and the following were elected said delegates, in accordance therewith:

Taneytown, Harry M. Clabaugh.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

A NOTABLE ADDRESS.

EDITOR AMERICAN SENTINEL:—The address of President Joseph C. Hendrix, delivered before the American Bankers' Association at its meeting at Denver, Col., yesterday, ought to be read by the citizens of this county with peculiar pride and interest, as Mr. Hendrix is connected with the county. His mother, who is still living, was born near Hampstead, Carroll county, Md., and is a sister of one of the prominent citizens of Hampstead, Mr. Jno. W. Murray. When in his boyhood he frequently visited his uncle at Hampstead and is well remembered by many of the people of that town. Mr. Hendrix has won for himself a high and commanding position in the world of finance, and there are few men in the country who command more attention on that subject than himself. This address deserves to take high rank, from whatever point it may be viewed, as the production of a scholar, economist or financier. The questions which underwent discusssion by him are of vast concern to the whole people, involving such as banking, currency and economic questions, all of which are pressing at this time for settlement. I hope, Mr Editor, you will lay this address before your readers, as I am sure many will be stimulated to read it as coming from one so near to our own people.

JAS. A. C. BOND.

August 24th, 1898.

[We would be glad to adopt Judge Bond's suggestion, but room could not be made in the SENTINEL for the entire address, which was an extended and exhaustive discussion of the subjects considered. We hope to be able to give its more salient features, at a future date.—Editor.]

Chambersburg and The Taylor Manufacturing Company.

Chambersburg correspondence of the Baltimore American, under date of the 21st inst., recites, in a brief way, the consequences resulting to that place from the failure of the Taylor Manufacturing Company:

Many property holders in this place have been thrown into consternation by the announcement made by the U. S. Marshal for the Eastern district of Pennsylvania, that he will sell their properties at public sale on Tuesday, September 20. The threatened sale grows out of the disastrous failure here ten years ago of the Taylor Manufacturing Company, in which the people of the coonty sank a million dollars. In 1888 the company had trouble with one of its agents at Macon, Ga., and lost a suit in the United States Court there. The case was appealed to the United States Supreme Court, the directors of the company giving a heavy bond for damages and costs. The company failed and dragged down with it all the directors, whose properties were all sold out at sheriff's sale. The case in the United States Supreme Court was not defended and the bond passed into the hands of speculators, who are now trying to enforce payment. All of the properiies levied upon are now held by innocent parties, who had no knowledge whatever of any cloud on their titles. An effort will likely be made to have the writs stayed and the executions set aside.

For the SENTINEL.

A Mistake.

MR. EDITOR:—We, the Warfieldsburg Baseball Club, see that your correspondence states that the game of ball played at the German Lutheran picnic, between the Marston nine and this club was forfeited to us. This, however, was not the case, as neither umpire declared the game forfeited. Mr. Warren, the principal umpire, called the game 7 to 3 in favor of the Warfieldsburg team. Mr. Lovell was assissant umpire. Furthermore, the statement that only three hits were made off of Mr. Nicodemus is a great mistake, as there were six hits (one of them a two bagger) and four runs made in one inning. Sixteen (not three) hits were made off of Nicomus.

WARFIELDSBURG B. B. C., PER D.

Westminster's Sailor Boy at Home on a Week's Furlough—What He Says About the War in Cuba.

Harry Poyer Huber on a furlough of seven days returned to his old home on Wednesday morning last. The young sailor looks well, notwithstanding the rough experiences undergone by him in the Spanish war, which continued nearly four months. He will return on Tuesday next. In the matter of the discussion concerning Sampson and Schley, about which so much, to his surprise too, he has found at home, he says that more or less jealousy, the common feeling among sailors, exists between the crews of the different ships and this was particularly true of the feeling between the Brooklyn and the flag ship. Harry says the Brooklyn wanted to claim everything. Before the Spanish fleet attempted its escape each ship had its orders, which orders came from Admiral Sampson. These orders were carried out. When Cervera started on his fatal race the New York was within signaling distance and the signal from the New York was immediately to "close in." Harry says that he was on deck at the time, and that both fleets could be plainly seen from the New York's deck. This order to "close in" from Admiral Sampson was immediately obeyed. His ship at the time was off Siboney, about three miles away. The admiral was about going ashore for an interview with General Shafter of the army. The New York has eight boilers, the fires under six of them being banked at this particular time. When the Spanish Admiral came out the New York could only make about four knots an hour, about 4½ miles. In about half an hour the New York was under forced draught, making about 16 knots, and on her way to the fight and after the Colon, accompanied by the Brooklyn and the Oregon.

The Colon was run ashore about the time that the flag-ship reached her. Prize crews from the New York, Brooklyn and Oregon were put aboard the Spaniard, but were afterwards removed when it was found that the captured ship could not be kept afloat.

The New York that night left the scene and returned to Santiago. The next day, Harry says, his ship returned to the fighting ground of the day before to ascertain the condition of the Theresa and the Oquendo that had been beached and were still burning. One of the Oquendo's torpedoes, supposed to have been struck by one of our shells, had exploded and had blown off a great portion of her bow. The Theresa was in better shape, she had only a few holes in her, but a rock upon which she had run had knocked a big hole in her bottom.

One of the most horrible sights was the numerous killed and drowned Spaniards to be seen everywhere in and around these two ships. Besides, as the New York was lying near the Theresa—the former ship's propeller revolving all the time, it brought to the surface a number of the Spanish seamen, who had gone down with their ships the day before. Among the crew that went aboard the Theresa to lighten her was Harry. For a whole day they were engaged in removing the heavy anchor chains for the purpose of lightening her bow under which was the big hole made by the rock. The Theresa will probably be saved. Harry observed that one of the gun shields had been pierced by a shell from one of our ships. The decks, which were made of wood, and the lighter material on them, had gone down into the bottom of the hold in an indistinguishable wreck.

In the bombardment of San Juan the New York lost one man killed and two wounded. A piece of the shell that did this Harry has brought home with him, as also a piece of the flag of the Spanish prize ship Pedro, a piece of wood from the Admiral's barge of the ill-fated Maine; from the same ship, a clip—containing five cartridges—a part of a clip of Mauser cartridges (Spanish) from the Reine Mercedes. One of the most interesting is a marine sword, bayonet taken from the Oquendo, parts of two flags from the Reine Mercedes.

Harry knew Clausen, one of the seven men who with Hobson sunk the Merrimac in the narrow strait in front of Santiago. He was one of the New York's crew. He was the Captain of Harry's gun. Harry says that it's not true that Clausen smuggled himself aboard the Merrimac as some reports have it. He heard Clausen himself say that he had Hobson's consent to go with him. Clausen was an intelligent man and about 30 years old.

Blockading duty had no charms for the impetuous sailor boys. It was too monotonous, and the boys grew heartily tired of it. No lights were allowed and the strictest watch was always enjoined. He has a poor opinion of the Spanish sailors, most of whom were rather a hard looking set. Their heads were shaved and there was a decided absence of neatness that is observable in the uniform of the American sailor. Many of the Spanish officers were extremely cruel to their men. When the poor fellows fell at their guns there they were left uncared for. He thinks Admiral Cervera is the best of the lot, but that our citizens are overdoing the thing in their treatment of this officer.

The reception in New York on Saturday was beyond the expectations of the boys generally. They had no idea that they were considered such heroes. In going up the North river the New York led the fleet. The demonstration was announced by a navy yard tug before the ships reached Tompkinsville. The ships left Tomkinsville about half-past nine in the following order—first the New York, next the Iowa, the Indiana, the Brooklyn, the Massachusetts, the Oregon and the Texas. Each side of the squadron was protected from pressure of sight seeing boats by police boats, some of which also cleared the way in advance. The river was covered with all kinds of craft, and all decorated with flags. When the fleet reached the front of General Grant's tomb at Riverside park each ship fired a salute of twenty-one guns and then returned to the starting point, at Tompkinsville. The big ocean steamers and all other vessels, the docks, the buildings and the grounds, especially at Riverside park, were covered with people. All the forts fired salutes as the fleet moved up. The cheering from the multitudes almost drowned the roar of the guns.

Harry left his ship at Tompkinsville 5 o'clock Tuesday evening and rerched Baltimore 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, and Westminster about half-past five. He is enjoying his rest, the first "square one" that he has had since the fight began. He is not as heavy as he was since he began to sweat off the extra flesh that he says will sooner or later make any man melt with the thermometer at one hundred and twenty below deck. Twice, for awhile, besides, he was down with fever which was not an uncommon disease on shipboard.

He wears the blue uniform of his class and has altered but little, if any, in his well-known quiet manner.

While at New York he was visited by his cousin, Winter W. Flohr, now residing in Brooklyn, and by Mr. G. Grosvenor Dawe, who was recently a guest of Harry's father, a gentleman connected with the N. Y. Press.

ROBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at Jos. B. Boyle's and A. H. Huber's Drug Stores, Westminster.

About one month ago my child, which is fifteen months old, had an attack of diarrhœa accompanied by vomiting. I gave it such remedies as are usually given in such cases, but as nothing gave relief, we sent for a physician and it was under his care for a week. At this time the child had been sick for about ten days and was having about twenty-five operations of the bowels every twelve hours, and we were convinced that unless it soon obtained relief it would not live. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended, and I decided to try it. I soon noticed a change for the better: by its continued use a complete cure was brought about and it is now perfectly healthy.—C. L. BOGGS, Stumptown, Gilmer Co., W. Va. For sale by Joseph D. IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of our dear father, JEREMIAH RINEHART, who departed this life one year ago to-day, AUGUST 25TH, 1898.

BY HIS DAUGHTERS.

IN MEMORIAM.

JOSEPH LINDSAY found rest August 10th, 1898, aged 44 years, 10 months and 23 days. So calm, so peacefully did the gentle spirit pass away that those who watched about him with anxious love and tender care could not realize that the end had come, that his life was over, that he had entered life eternal. God had decreed that the years of his sojourn on earth should be ended, but first he would try him in the crucible of bodily suffering. How well he stood the trial is known to all, especially to those who saw him during his long and painful illness, ever the same, never questioning why it was given him to endure so much, why his days and nights were full of agony that wrung the hearts and brought tears to the eyes of those who loved him. Whence did he derive strength to bear a cross so heavy? Thoughtful and sympathetic beyond his years, he was always deeply moved in reading or hearing of the sufferings that our Blessed Redeemer bore for man's transgressions. These thoughts led him to fix his heart on heavenly things and helped him to bear every pain, every sorrow. He has gone to his reward and those who mourn for him find comfort in the thought that he is at rest.

Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit rest thee now,
E'en while on earth thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow.

Dust to its narrow house beneath,
Soul to its place on high,
They who have seen thy look in death
Need fear no more to die.
