AN OPEN LETTER TO MOTHERS.

We are asserting in the courts our right to the exclusive use of the word "Castoria." and "Pitcher's Castoria," as our trade mark.

I, DR. SAMUEL PITCHER, of Hyannis, Massachusetts, was the originator of "CASTORIA," the same that has borne and does now bear the facsimile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on every wrapper. This is the original "CASTORIA" which has been used in the homes of the Mothers of America for over thirty years. LOOK CAREFULLY at the wrapper and see that it is the kind you have always bought and has the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the wrapper. No one has authority from me to use my name except The Centaur Company, of which Chas. H. Fletcher is President.

LIMITATION.

BY BERTHA KOPPLE.

How can we tell
That the eyes which give back to us smile for our smile
Often hide in their depths deepest anguish the while,
That the lips whence gay laughter so merrily flows
Would be white, did they dare let the world know their woes;
How can we tell?

How can we see
That the face which is turning so coldly aside
Bears the look of an infinite love it must hide,
That the passionless air which seems cold as the stars
May conceal a strong passion that beats 'gainst its bars;
How can we see?

How can we know
That the lives we deem selfish and worldly alone
Only hide breaking hearts that are making no moan,
That what in our blindness we judge as unmeet
The Lord of the Harvest will gather as wheat—
How can we know?

Select Story.

SHE SAVED THE DAY.

Jackson Smith had a hobby. He would stand at the foot of the table, carving knife in hand, while he enlarged upon the "soulless democratic times," emphasizing his sentences by brandishing the carver in air.

His next aversion to a democrat was an old maid. Indeed, the old maid was even more odious to him. The democrat he could forgive as being a fool, but the old maid was beyond pardon on any grounds. And yet, as in very mockery of his pet antipathy, his only child, Sarah, had developed into the hated object, right in his own household.

Sarah was tall and angular, like her father, but her face was pleasing, and her disposition mild and amiable. She had never revolted aginst anything in her life—not even against the injustice of spending her youth in making preserves, apple butter or piecing quilts, while other girls were making merry. Sometimes Sarah wondered where her youth had gone, but, while she was 32, she could not recall having been young.

One day Jackson Smith received a hurt, and when Dr. Brown was called in he told Jackson his days were numbered. Then it was that his hatred for old maids proved itself.

"I'll never leave this place to a woman that can't get a husband," he said fiercely.

"But, father, Sarah's never had no chance—We've always kept her down," remonstrated his weeping wife.

He waved his hand to silence her. "Woman, no old maid shall inherit my place. I've sent by the doctor for Lawyer Clark, and he'll come down to-morrow. There's money enough in the bank for you, but I'll fix it so that at your death it will go with the farm. Jackson Goggan, my namesake, shall get it all."

Tearfully Mrs. Smith imparted the facts to Sarah.

"Mother, would he turn you out of the old home just because he hates me?" and Sarah looked incredulous.

The elder woman nodded; then Sarah kissed the round, sunburnt face and said: "Mother, I never have revolted against father, but I'm going to save the place for you—I wouldn't mind so much, but you shall never leave your home. I'm going out now to think it over." And putting on her pink sunbonnet she went out the back door. When some distance from the house she sat down in the shade of a tree, and while her heart beat loudly over her father's contemplated injustice, she resolved to outwit him.

"There's Josh Mullin; he might—but I can't bear Josh; he chews tobacco, and his mouth always looks dirty. Henry Hodge is home, but he drinks so that there's no dependence to be put in him." She cast her eyes over the landscape, and on the next farm she saw the figure of a man in the field. Yes, there's John Howard, but—" and her face grew pink— "I hate somehow to ask it of him." Then the tear-stained face of her mother passed before her mental vision, and giving a jerk to her sunbonnet she started down the path across the meadow.

John Howard was hoeing corn. When he saw Sarah approaching he stopped and leaned on his hoe, a look of concern in his face.

"Is the old man worse, Sarah?" he asked.

"Yes; Dr. Brown says he can't live more'n two or three days, and —Oh, John, its awful, the way he is."

"Yes, but you have been a good, sacrificing daughter, Sarah, and you can't blame yourself for anything, you—"

"Oh, you don't understand, John; he's going to leave everything to—to Jackson Goggan, and mother'll have to leave the place," she half sobbed.

"You can't mean it, Sarah? Why —why that would be outrageous. What makes him talk of such a thing?"

"Because—because—I am an old maid; he hates all old maids," and her face grew pinker than her sunbonnet. John Howard shifted the hoe to the other arm and looked down.

"John I've come to ask you—Oh, John, don't think me brazen; it's for mother's sake. I can't stand to see her turned out, and for my fault, and if you will only help me and—and—come up to the house and pretend that we are to be married—just until after the will is made—it wouldn't be so very wrong, John—not so bad as letting mother be put out of her home—" She caught her breath in short gasps, but when John was silent her pink face suddenly paled. "I reckon its asking a heap too much of you, John, but don't hold it against me; I couldn't see any other way. Good-by, John," she was turning away.

"Don't go yet Sarah. I—I think your idea is good, but it might not work. Jackson Smith is sharp; he'd see right through it, but—if—if you would be willing we could drive over to Squire Hall's this afternoon and get married. I wouldn't trouble you any, Sarah—we could go on just the same, and I'll never want to marry any one else, and if you should you could get a divorce, you know."

"Oh, you're sure it makes no difference—you don't mind, John?" Her tone was eager.

"No, I don't mind; I'd help you any way I could Sarah. It's high noon now. I'll drive over for you in the buggy right after dinner."

"I'll be ready, and—I wouldn't have asked you, John, only—only—you understand how it is, don't you?" Her face was red again.

"I understand it, Sarah. Don't fear."

"Why, Sarah, where have you been? You look as rosy as a poppy," and Mrs. Smith wiped the tears from her eyes as she gazed at her daughter's face.

"I've been attending to business for us, mother. You will not leave the place. I'm going over to Squire Hall's this evening. John Howard is coming to take me in the buggy."

The sun was sinking low in the west when John Howard and Sarah returned from the squire's.

"Will you come in, John, and stay about some? I'd—I'd rather you'd tell him if you don't mind," Sarah said.

John hitched the horse and went in. He walked to the bedside of Jackson Smith and sat down.

"Uncle Jackson," he began, "I've come to tell you what I've done. You know that I've often warned you that some day you would lose the most valuable possession you had—"

"It's the brindle heifer," interrupted Jackson Smith, his eyes snapping angrily. "John Howard, you think because I am on my deathbed that you can do as you please, but I'll show you. It's just like a rascally democrat to shoot a neighbor's heifer just because she jumped into your wheat. I don't expect anything better of you—the whole party is made up of thieves and cutthroats—but I'll leave it in my will. Jackson Goggan shall law and law until—" He sank back exhausted from his outburst.

"If you get that angry over the brindle heifer, Uncle Jackson, I don't know what you will say when I tell you that I have not touched the heifer, but I have married Sarah."

"Married—Sarah!" and Jackson Smith's eyes dilated. "Married Sarah!" he said under his breath. John, give me your hand. I knew Sarah was a Smith. Why, there never was an old maid in the Smith family, but it did seem she meant to take after the Walkers—her mother was a Walker. Sarah—married! I I can go in peace, John, now that you have lifted the disgrace from the Smith family. You needn't mind what I said about the democrats—I reckon you don't know better. Call Sarah; I want to give her the brindle heifer."

When the lawyer came the next day he wrote a will bequeathing all, save a life interest to Mrs. Smith, to his beloved daughter Sarah, who had gladdened the last hours of his life.

A few days later, with all due ceremony, Jackson Smith was laid away by the side of other Smiths. John Howard went home with his wife and her mother. At the porch he halted awkwardly, seeing which Sarah turned.

"Will you come in, John?" she asked.

"I'm afraid it would only pester you if I did—I—reckon I ought to go home, but I hate to leave you—you women folks alone, and you'll be kind of lonesome now."

"You might stay. We would fix up father's room real comfortable if you would just as soon stay," said Sarah, beginning to realize the awkwardness of their position.

"I'd like to, Sarah. I could tend the crop just as well, but I'd feel as if I was living off of you women, and —and you might get to hate me if I hung around."

"You needn't be afraid of that John," said Sarah, tapping her foot nervously on the porch floor. "It would be the easiest way out of our—our—dilemma; but if you'd rather not stay we could explain to folks how it was that you just married me to save the farm."

"But Sarah, if we told that it would be a lie. I took advantage of your trouble to get you married to me and you didn't suspect me, but now I feel mean, and as if you will not respect me when I tell you the truth." Sarah gazed at him in wonder. What could he mean, she thought, but no sound came from her lips, and he continued; "I've been trying for ten years to ask you to marry me, but I never could do it, and when you came to me in your trouble I jumped at the chance, Sarah, because I wanted you—I've always loved you—but now I feel I can't stay unless—unless you take me for your husband in earnest." His eyes did not lift to her face.

"John!" Her eyes were open in wide amaze, and the face so lately tear-stained became radiant with unexpected joy. "You love me?" she questioned in glad unbelief. "Why, I have loved you all this time, too," she whispered.

GREAT GOD! GIVE US GOOD MEN!

God, give us men! A time like this demands
Great hearts, true faith and willing hands.
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess an opinion and a will;
Men who have honor, men who will not lie.
For while the rabble with thumb-word creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Wrangle in selfish strife—lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land and waiting justice sleeps.
