Rural Women's Short Course

behave at my first party? etc." Foreign relations were discussed by the talented speaker, T. L. Tsui, 1st Secretary of the Chinese Legation. He gave a fine word picture of old and new China, and assured the audience that China would win out in her struggle for her national security. Miss Patricia Jarratt of the Australian Legation described conditions in her country, opening the minds of her hearers to the extent and resources of that little known country "down under". Good-neighbor relations and understanding between this country and Australia were stressed.

Mr. James Hepbrun, director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission, gave vivid and enlightening accounts of new scientific methods of crime detecting. His statement that the results of intelligence tests showed higher averages among the criminals in penal institutions than among the draftees in the 1st World War, and higher even than among the guards and wardens of the institutions was startling to any smug satisfaction in mental superiority to the criminal.

Probably, the most outstanding speakers were Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the senator from Ohio, and Mrs. Cornelia Stratton Parker, world traveler, lecturer and essayist. Mrs. Taft is a rapid enthusiastic speaker with a fine clear voice, and a charming manner. She spoke on the theme of the Short Course, and stated that "our heritage of Americanism is a combination of liberty and loyalty between the people and th Government, something that is unique in the world today. It is selfish to think only of yourself, but it is not selfish to think first of your country, if it is a self governing country--you are one of its trustees". She emphasized the need of listening and reading with an open mind, stressing the very real difficulty in determining what is propaganda, as such, she told the women, "don't swallow propaganda, but by all means do not spread it."

Mrs. Parker set the note of her lecture at the very outset, when, in a delightfully witty and shrewd manner, she admitted she was glad the words were not reversed in the title of her talk—Woman in this Changing World", for she felt woman had been the same for the last 10,000 years, and would be the same for the next 10,000 years, and could not be changed in her essential nature as mother. She pointed out the necessity for the three kinds of health woman is obliged to develop in this year 1941 in a changing world—"the obligation to be healthy physically, mentally, emotionally and spiritually. No woman can be healthy unless she is doing something she cares about." Shocking to many exemplary housekeepers was her statement about marriage and homemaking being woman's greatest career when she added "but I do not believe that the Lord loves the perfect housekeeper." She thought the happy homemaker was the greater need.

Other events brought Rev. Harold Bosley, of Baltimore, who spoke at the opening Vesper Service on "Do We Value Freedom of Worship?", and the Rev. Fred B. Harris, of Washington, who brought out in his address to the certificate class at the final session, the great passion America has for building walls. He stressed the "need of building walls of character, the walls that are in the hearts of men."

One afternoon's program was given over to the semi-annual meeting of the Maryland State Council of Homemakers' Club. At this meeting, the vice-president of the State Council, Mrs. Atlee Armour, of Cecil County presided. Reports from the 5 District Directors, and the 8 State Project Chairmen were given to the Homemakers in 3 minute talks. The 23 County Council Presidents were introduced. Cecil County was graciously represented by her newly elected Council President, Mrs. Otis McCauley, of Perry Point. In the Short Course Club, Cecil County was again represented by Mrs. Chas. F. Miller, who was vice-president. At the election in these two state organizations of the Homemakers, Mrs. John B. Fassitt, of Rising Sun, was made Director for District No. 2, comprising Cecil, Harford, Baltimore, Howard, and Montgomery counties. She takes the place of Mrs. Earl Goseweiler of Aberdeen, whose 2-year term expired. Mrs. Atlee Armour, retiring vice-president of the State Council, was elected Financial Chairman of the Building fund for the State Short Course Club.

Four Cecil County women received certificates for their 4 years' attendance at the Short Course. They were Mrs. Everist from Liberty Grove Club; Mrs. Janney, Leslie Club; Mrs. Russell, Appleton Club; Mrs. Vinyard of the Warwick Club. One 8-year pin was awarded by Dr. Byrd to Cecil County--to Mrs. Blanche Kirk, of Conowingo Club.

A reception by Dr. Byrd, a concert by Washington musicians, a tea and reception at the newly restored Rossborough Inn with Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture as guest of honor, two colorful Pageants given by Washington, D. C., and Montgomery County people, plus a picnic in Rock Creek Park, and county stunt and initiation parties, all gave a social balance to the hours of class and lecture. The trip in a convoy of 21 buses to the new Mellon National Gallery of Art in Washington, was a fitting climax to a week of visions and high ideals. Two hours in which one could browse among the many small galleries, to enjoy this picture, or that sculptured stone at leisure, to gaze on cool fountains and flowering oleanders in the courts, or to look upward at the sheer beauty of polished pillar and dome in the great halls and rotunda —this was a mental and spiritual uplift to the souls of 800 Americans seeking to hold firm this heritage known as Americanism.

And if you don't believe all these things are true, get a copy of the September issue of "The Country Gentleman." Miss Maxine Davis, nationally known journalist and author, was at "Short Course", seeing for herself, talking with the women who make up the members of this great group, photographing groups, individuals, scenes, — for she is preparing a feature article for the magazine on this Maryland Rural Women's Short Course, the only thing of its kind and scope in the United States. And, if even then, you don't believe it can be a real experience of growth, get in touch with the Cecil County Home Demonstration Agent and plan to go down with Cecil County and see for yourselves next June.

By one who was there.

Old Age Insurance

Figures released today by the Social Security Board show that 2999 persons in the Baltimore area were receiving monthly payments of old-age and survivors insurance as of March 31, 1941. These benefits totaling $55,419 were paid to men, women ,and children living in the counties of Baltimore, Cecil, Harford, and Howard, and the City of Baltimore.

Of the 2999 persons in the Baltimore area receiving monthly payments of old-age survivors insurance, 1485 are insured workers who have reached the age of 65 and who have retired from regular employment in business or industry. Some 350 of thse annuitants have wives who are 65 years old or over, and they too are receiving monthly payments of old-age insurance.

William M. Donlin, acting manager of the local office of the Social Security Board, explained that a man who has worked in a factory or a store or in some other industrial or business concern since the old-age insurance system went into operation, and has qualified for beefits, may claim payment upon reaching age 65. When an insured worker reaches age 65 and begins receiving old-age insurance payments, additional benefits may go to his wife if she is 65 or when she reaches age 65. Each of his children also may receive monthly payments if they are under 16 (18 if still in school).

The monthly payment to the wife of an anuitant amounts to one-half of his monthly benefit. The monthly payment to each of his minor children is also one-half of his own monthly benefit. The amount of monthly insurance payments which any member of the worker's family may receive depends upon the amount of the worker's own monthly insurance benefit.

An insured worker's widow who has reached age 65, whether or not she has a child in her care, may also claim monthly benefits, provided her husband died since this provision went into effect (January 1, 1940). Her monthly payment amounts to three-fourths of her husband's primary benefit. Widows with minor children--survivors of insurance benefits. In the Baltimore service area there are 403 diwods now receiving monthly payments, with 746 children receiving monthly benefits. Most of these boys and girls are the children of widows who are also receiving monthly benefits provided by the Social Security Act for survivors of insured wage earners. Some of the young recipients are orphans who are receiving survivors insurance payments because their fathers or mothers who died in 1940-41 were fully insured under the Social Security Act. Some are the children, stepchildren ,or adopted children of retired workers who have claimed benefits for themselves and their dependents.

Regarding survivors insurance, Mr. Donlin said that when an insured worker dies, leaving a widow with minor children, monthly payments of survivors insurance are made to his widow and to his children who are under age 16 (18 if in school). The widow who has children under age 18 in her care receives three-fourths of the amount of her husband's primary insurance benefits and each of these minor children receives one-half of his primary insurance benefit.

SUGGESTIONS FOR MINIMIZING THE SPONTANEOUS HEATING HAZARD IN THE STORAGE OF HAY

1. Be sure hay is well cured. Over 20 per cent moisture content is apt to cause heating.

2. Place in mow evenly in layers. Do not let hay pile up in center of mow.

3. Watch for heating for at least eight weeks after hay is placed in storage.
