pression save that depressed look, half-lighted by curiosity, that is common to spectators at a country funeral.

Now the men in the back of the house were standing; women clutched those nearest to them, some sobbed aloud. Only one woman looked at once sullen and defiant. She wore pink, and was sitting in a side pew. The woman at the organ dropped her hands on the keys. Her large eyes seemed to grow larger and larger in her pale face turned toward the minister.

"Let us pray," said Robert Campbell, and the words rolled forth with a force of command that stilled the women and held the men, and they all listened as children to a master while he thanked God for the rest prepared for the weary.

* * * * *

After the burial he walked across a meadow that lay next the churchyard. At its other side he came to himself, and he saw that in his abstraction he had unconsciously walked in an opposite direction from the place he called home, and was nearing a farm-house to which he had been wont to go for love's blessings of encouragement and unfettered confidence. He stood at a stile, the entrance to an orchard. The apple trees before him had been fragrant and faintly pink with blooms a few weeks ago when he had sat under them.

Now the blossoms had all fallen. "It was the Garden of Eden," he said. Then he forgot his recent victory. He leaned against the stile, and, as he looked among the trees, he lived again the hours when he and his Mary had thought she loved him. How strong and womanly she seemed to him. In their love scenes she had petted him as if he were a child, and he had been foolish enough to think it right, because natural that he should seem a child while she was so strong.

After a while some one came out of the house, and walked across the orchard. It was she. She walked slowly; her color came and went, and she twisted her hands uneasily, as if embarrassed, when she neared him.

"Will you shake hands with me, Mary?" he said, gently. "Don't be nervous, dear. I will not talk about—about that any more."

"No, I am sure it is better not to speak of it. I want you to keep coming here, tho. I ran out hoping I might get a glimpse at you, and I was too happy to breathe when I saw you standing here—just as—just the same."

"No, Mary, I'm not just the same. With God's help, I am going to be different—so I've made up my mind not to accept the call. I'll go back to my mission work in the city, and I may not see you many times again."

"And will you forget all about you and me?"

No, dear, the thought of you and our talks here this spring—you cannot remember them as I do, Mary—will make me stronger."

"But you must not go away. The people are thoroughly awakened. Every one needs you in our wicked old neighborhood. The elders will stand by you, and you will do more good than any one else could. They have always honored you and now they fear you. You won't go, will you, Robert?"

"Yes, dear, for my own sake I must. I couldn't amount to anything if I were to see you and wish for you every day. I'm a very weak fellow, after all."

"But I was so proud of you this afternoon, and I've been thinking. I'm such a fool. I haven't any sense at all. I'm going to cry again. Oh, Robert, don't you love me a little still?"

Time Enough to Beller.

One day, Billy, that's my brother, he and Sammy Doppy was playin' by a mud-hole, and Billy said:

"Now, Sammy, les' play we was a barn-yard; you be the pig and lie down here and woller, and I'll be a bull and beller like everything."

And so they got down on their hands and knees and Sammy he got in the mud and wollered, while Billy bellowed like distant thunder. Bimeby Sammy he cum out muddy—you never see such a muddy little feller—and he said:

"Now, you be the pig, and let me beller." But Billy said:

"I ain't a very good pig 'fore dinner, and it'll be time 'nuff for you to beller when your mammie see yer close.

An Englishman traveling through the country of Kilkenny came to a ford and hired a boat to take him across. The water, being rather more agitated than was agreeable, he asked the boatman if any person was ever lost in the passage. "Never," replied Terence; "never. My brother was drowned here last week, but we found him again next day."

Father—You seem to have no idea whatever of the value of money.

Son—No idea whatever! Why, dad, I'll bet I can mention a thousand different ways of spending it that you never dreamt of."

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

I remember, you forget,
  Mem'ry fades with passing days—
When, as strangers, first we met,
  At the parting of the ways.
Fair and golden was the morn,
  All the earth so fresh and green,
Ah! how soon are sorrows born—
  Would that it had never been.

Thence our hearts together grew,
  One resolv'd to ever be;
Yes, my darling, I loved you,
  And I know that you lov'd me.
Why was bliss decreed to die?
  Why fell shadows hearts between?
Why did vows as visions fly?
  Would that they had never been.

I remember, you forget,
  When our hands last fell apart;
Naught of pity, no regret,
  Seem'd alas! to fill your heart.
Years are dead, yet still I feel
  Love that liv'd in other days,
And e'en now I often steal
  To the parting of the ways.

He Had to be Cautious.

"Madam," said Meandering Mike, with a low bow, "don't ask me."

"Don't ask you what?" asked the woman who was engaged sweeping off the back porch.

"To cut no grass nor beat no carpets. Just gimme a piece of pie or anything that happens to be handy, an' lemme go on me way."

"So you're afraid of work, are you?"

"Yes, lady, that's what I am. I'm honestly afraid of it. I'm tryin' to be good."

"Well, so far as I can judge you're not making a success at it."

"Your eyes deceive you, lady. I'm doin' fus' rate. But temptation besets me. It's all I kin do to keep from draggin that broom out o' your hands an' raisin' such a dust with it dat folks 'ud come from de house down de rode to ask 'bout de torrenado. You don't know de effort it takes to restrain meself."

"Well, I'll lay the broom down on the step and watch you grab it."

"I would'nt dast."

"There isn't anybody hypnotizing you is there?"

"No, lady. It's de danger of physical culture. You know what exercise'll do. It'll swell a man's biceps up till his arm looks like a roast of spring lamb."

"Well, what of it?"

"Lady, I've got sech a bad temper dat I have to look out for it constantly. I would not dare trust myself among me fellow creatures wid so much muscle."

Admitted it Himself.

A story is told of two prominent Chicago lawyers who several years ago were regarded as being among the brightest lawyers the State had produced for a long time. There was great rivalry between these men, and one day they were having a heated argument on the steps of the State House at Springfield.

"I'll agree to leave it to the first man we meet," said one of the wrangling lawyers, fiercely.

"All right, and that will settle it once for all—and, here is Charlie.—We'll leave it to him."

"Charlie," as the man spoken of approached within hearing distance, "we want you to decide who is the best lawyer in Illinois. We agree to abide by your decision."

"Well," replied Charlie, himself an old practioner, and well known in the capital city, "I plead guilty to being the best lawyer in the State myself."

"Why, Charlie, how can it be proved?" inquired the first of the two Chicagoans.

"You don't have to prove it," replied the Springfield man; "I admit it, don't I?"

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE IN 1900.

Novelty in Literary and Art Features. Printing in Color. The Best Illustrations, with Cole's Engravings and Castaigne's Drawings.

A New and Superbly Illustrated Life of Cromwell by the Right Hon. John Morley, M. P.

The conductors of The Century take especial pleasure in announcing this as the leading historical serial of the magazine in 1900. No man is more competent than John Morley, who was selected by Mr. Gladstone's family to write the biography of Gladstone, to treat Cromwell in the spirit of the end of the nineteenth century.

The illustrations will be remarkable. Besides original drawings, there will be valuable unpublished portraits lent by Her Majesty the Queen, and by the owners of the greatest Cromwell collections. Other features include:

Ernest Seton-Thompson's "Biography of a Grizzly," delightfully illustrated by the artist-author,—the longest and most important literary work of the author of "Wild Animals I Have Known."

Paris, Illustrated by Castaigne.—A series of papers for the Exposition year, by Richard Whiteing, author of "No. 5 John Street," splendidly illustrated with more than sixty pictures by the famous artist Castaigne, including views of the Paris Exposition.

London, Illustrated by Phil May.—A series of papers on the East End of London by Sir Walter Besant, with pictures by Phil May and Jos. Pennell.

Sailing Alone Around the World.—The record of a voyage of 46,000 miles undertaken single handed and alone in a 40-foot boat. A most delightful biography of the sea.

The Author of "Hugh Wynne," Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, will furnish a short serial of remarkable psychological interest, "The Autobiography of a Quack," and there will be short stories by all the leading writers.

A Chapter From Mark Twain's Abandoned Autobiography, Literary Reminiscences. Familiar accounts of Tennyson, Browning, Lowell, Emerson, Bryant, Whittier and Holmes.

Important Papers by Governor Theodore Roosevelt, President Eliot of Harvard University, Thos. Bailey Aldrich, Woodrow Wilson, John Burroughs, and others.

American Secret History.—A series of papers of commanding interest.

The Art Work of the Century.—It is everywhere conceded that The Century has led the world in art. Timothy Cole's unique and beautiful wood blocks will continue to be a feature, with the work of many other engravers who have made the American school famous. The fine half-tone plates—reengraved by wood engravers—for which the magazine is distinguished, will appear with new methods of printing and illustrating.

Wall Paper!
Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. If you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a oa a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of
WALL PAPER
