the futility of my well-meant scheme.

"Let me introduce my brother to you," mother began. "James, this is"——But before she could finish her sentence Uncle James jumped up and seized Miss Stubbs by both hands, crying: "Why, Annie! you don't mean to say that it is you, come back to me after all these years?" And there was a look on his face that the tenderest pork-chops and the safest investments had never been able to call forth.

Miss Stubbs was quite flushed, and trembling all over. "And it is really you, James? I never dreamed that I should see you again."

"This is Annie Lorimer that I used to tell you about, Jane," explained Uncle James, turning to mother, but still keeping Miss Stubb's hands in his, "but why on earth did you call her Miss Stubbs?"

Miss Stubbs answered for mother. "They only knew me as Miss Stubbs, James. When my father came into that estate which proved such a disappointment to him he had to give up the name of Lorimer and take that of Stubbs, and I suppose I never mentioned that my name had once been Lorimer."

As we all sat at tea together I meditated deeply an the romantic situation, and thought how sad it must be to be parted from a fine, handsome man, snch as Miss Stubbs had described to me, and from a golden-haired fairy such as uncle used to talk about to mother, and then to meet them five-and-twenty years afterward, transformed into a fat old batchelor and a faded old maid. But my cup of amazement was full when I heard Uncle James say:

"What have you been doing to keep yourself so young, Annie? You hardly look a day older than when I last saw you."

And Miss Stubbs replied: "You also are scarcely altered a bit, James. I should have known you anywhere."

This fairly knocked me over. It is absurd to say that Love is blind. Love not only sees beauties and virtues no one else sees, but what it has once seen it sees always. It is very funny and interesting!

The next day I said to Miss Stubbs: "Whatever made you say Uncle James was tall when you described him to me?"

"Because he is tall. Don't you think your uncle is a very fine man, my dear?"

"I don't know; he always seemed rather short to me, somehow," I stammered, awkwardly.

Miss Stubbs smiled. "To you, yes; but you are so exceptionally tall, you know."

Whereby I learned that height is, after all, only a question of proportion.

On the day that Uncle James asked me in his sharp masterful way. "What possessed you, Madge when you told me that Annie was old? Why, she is no more old than I am."

I felt confused. "She seemed rather old to me, somehow," I stammered.

My uncle smiled. "You, yes; but you are so absurdly young, you know."

Whereby I learned that age also is a question of proportion.

On the day that Uncle James and Aunt Annie were married, mother said to me; "I think that Providence helped my managing little girl with her plans this time."

"No, mother," I answered. "Providence took it out of my hands altogether and finished the business alone, and did it a million times better than I could have imagined."

Mother smiled.

"You see," I continued, "my scheme was to bring two rather uninteresting, middle-aged people together and insure a dull and comfortable old age for them; but Providence's plan was to reunite two true lovers, who had waited for each other for a quarter of a century, and make them young again and happy with the highest sort of happiness. The ways of Providence are better than our ways, after all; aren't they, mother?"

"As the heavens are higher than the earth," said mother, softly

"What does this mean, Bridget?" exclaimed the lady of the house, returning from shopping; "the telephone's been taken out!"

"Shure, mum, the girl over the way came over and said her missus would like to use it for a little whoile, an' Oi sint it over to her. But Oi had a terrible toime gitting it unscrewed from the wall, mum!"

"Say, Jones, if the girl you loved wouldn't have you, what would you do to forget her?"

"Eat some lobster Newburg, a Welsh rabbit and a mince pie at midnight."

"Huh, what good's that?"

"Oh, well, if you don't forget her for the next twenty-five hours, anyway, you are more of an ostrich than I am."

MONEY MUSK.

In shirt of check and tallowed hair,
The fiddler sits in the bulrush chair
Like Moses' basket stranded there,
On the brink of Father Nile.
He feels the fiddle's slender neck,
Picks out the notes with thrum and check,
And times the tune with nod and beck,
And thinks its a weary while.
All ready! Now he gives the call,
Cries, "Honor to the ladies!" All
The jolly tides of laughter fall
And ebb in a happy smile.

D-o-w-n comes the bow on every string,
"First couple join right hands and swing!"
As light as any bluebird's wing,
"Swing once more and a half times round.
Whirls Mary Martin all in blue—
Calico gowns and stockings new,
And tinted eyes that tell you true,
Dance all to the dancing sound.

She flits about big Moses Brown,
Who holds her hands to keep her down,
And thinks her hair a golden crown,
And his heart turns over once!
His cheek with Mary's breath is wet,
It gives a second somerset!
He means to win the maiden yet,
Alas, for the awkward dunce.

"Your stoga boot has crushed my toe!"
"I'd rather dance with one-legged Joe!"
"You clumsy fellow!" * * "Pass below!"
And the first pair dance apart.
Then, Forward six! advance, retreat,
Like midges gay in sunbeam street,
'Tis Money Musk by merry feet
And the Money Musk by heart.

"Three-quarters round your partners swing!"
"Across the set!" The rafters ring,
The girls and boys have taken wing
And have brought their roses out!
'Tis "Forward six!" with rustic grace,
Ah, rarer far than—"Swing to place!"
Than golden clouds of old point lace—
They bring the dance about.

Then clasping hands all—"Right and left!"
All swiftly weave the measure deft
Across the woof in loving weft
And the Money Musk is done!
Oh, dancers of the rustling husk,
Good night, sweethearts, 'tis growing dusk,
Good night for aye to Money Musk,
For the heavy march begun!

VALUABLE CIRCULARS.

The Horticultural Department of the Maryland Agricultural College has sent out two circulars which may be of considerable value to farmers, gardeners and fruit-growers. We therefore insert them in the SENTINEL for the purpose of giving them wider circulation in this county than they would otherwise obtain. They are as follows:

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR TREATING TREES INFESTED WITH SAN JOSE SCALE.

By Willis C. Johnson, State Etomologist.

(1) If the tree is badly infested, and too far gone to save by a system of treatment, grub it up by the roots, trim and pile wood and brush where it stood, do not burn wood or brush, at least, until after mid-summer. Nature has some natural enemies at work upon the scale and these little friends must not be burned. If brush is piled, the scales all die in a few days, the little friends escape and concentrate their attacks upon other trees where the scale exists, and where it has been over-looked. Scale cannot possibly live upon a twig or piece of wood cut before May 15. It spreads only when the young appear, which is between June 10th and the late fall. I have seen young crawling on trees, during open warm weather as late as Dec. 19; but such late individuals could not possibly survive the winter, as it would be practically impossible for them to cover themselves with the scale-like covering.

(2) If the tree is only moderately infested prune it as much as possible, saving every branch and twig, piling them in some place in or near the orchard.

(3) Then spray peach and plum with a 30 per cent mixture of kerosene and water and pear and apple with 25 per cent mixture. Spray thoroughly using a combination kerosene and water sprayer if possible.

(4) If you have an ordinary sprayer you can use whale oil soap in water at the rate of 2 pounds to a gallon, before the buds open. Use good grade of caustic potash whale-oil soap, and apply when warm.

(5) Crude petroleum can be used also, and should be applied before the buds open.

At all times keep a close watch on your orchard and if a tree looks suspicious send me a twig by mail without delay.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

By Charles O. Townsend, State Pathologist.

For one barrel of Bordeaux mixture.

(1) Place 6 pounds of Copper sulphate (Bluestone) crystals in a coarse bag and suspend in a tub or earthen vessel containing 25 gallons of water, until the crystals are dissolved.

(2) In a second tub place 6 pounds of good stone lime, slake and dilute to 25 gallons.

(3) Now pour the two solutions at the same time into a barrel or into the spray pump and stir vigorously to insure thorough mixing.

Note. The solution should be poured through a seive containing about 30 meshes to the inch, in order to remove any particles that might clog the nozzle.

To make stock solution of Bordeaux mixture.

(4) Place 50 pounds of Copper sulphate (Bluestone) crystals in a coarse bag and suspend in a barrel containing 50 gallons of water until all is dissolved.

(5) In a second barrel slack 50 pounds good stone lime and dilute to 50 gallons.

(6) To make a barrel of Bordeaux mixture from stock solution, stir (4) and (5) thoroughly, dip 6 gallons from each and place in separate barrels and add water enough to make 25 gallons in each and mix as directed in (3).

(7) The stock solution will keep almost indefinitely but the Bordeaux mixture should be used as soon as possible after it is prepared.

(8) Bordeaux mixture is a preventative and not a cure for fungus diseases it should therefore be applied early, adding 4 ounces of Paris green to each 40 or 50 gallons to kill insects.

(9) Bordeaux mixture will prevent apple rust and scab, fruit rots, blight of tomatoes, potatoes, rust of celery and in short all of the fungus diseases that begin on the surface of plants above ground. It should not be used on peach or plum, as it is liable to injure the foliage.

TRANSPLANTING TREES.

How late in spring the transplanting of cherries, peaches, plums and apples may be safely practiced is a question that does not admit of definite answer but Meehan gives in his magazine the following subject: It would be much safer to say that it should be done as early as possibly after the frost leaves the soil. The earlier it can be done the longer is the time allowed for the earth to become settled around the roots and the trees to recover the general shock of transplanting before they are called upon to actively engage in food storing and the support of their leaves.

Good care in handling and planting figures largely in the results. A good pounding of the earth around the roots corresponds with the settling which time may bring, and a little water given when trees are in leaf or pushing at time of transplanting is sustaining until the roots can better look around for their own supply of moisture.

But "good care" is often mistaken injury. The pounding of the soil is not done as it is being filled in, but after the hole is entirely filled, making a hard surface through which the needed air and water cannot readily penetrate. The surface never should be made hard—quite the contrary.

Then again, instead of a moderate application of water, the trees are sometimes soaked every day all summer long, regardless of need and condition of soil. In heavy soil it is best to refrain entirely from watering, as trees do not like to stand in water.

Cherries and plums object, as a rule, to being moved after commencing to leaf. Pears and apples are less particular.

The Fourteen Mistakes of Life.

An English paper gives a list of what it terms "the fourteen mistakes of life." While there are undoubtedly other mistakes than those mentioned, the list is a fairly comprehensive one. It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong and judge people accordingly; to measure the enjoyment of others by our own; to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; to look for experience and judgment in youth; to look for perfection in our own actions; to worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied; not to yield in immaterial matters; not to alleviate all that needs alleviation so far as lies in our power; not to consider everything impossible that we cannot perform; to believe only what our finite minds can grasp; to expect to be able to understand everything. And the last and greatest mistake of all is to live for time alone, with no thought for the future, when any moment may launch us into eternity.

WESTMINSTER WATER CO. NOTICE.

At a meeting of the Westminster Water Co., held Jan. 9th, 1900, the following orders were passed:

ORDERED, that hereafter all water rents shall be charged against and collected from the OWNERS of properties upon which water privileges are used—and not from tenants as heretofore. That a discount of four per cent. shall be allowed on the payment of said rents if made on or before May 1st, of each year. In case said payment is not made by June 1st, the water shall be turned off, and not restored unless cost of turning off as well as the rental is paid.

Wall Paper! Wall Paper!

I wish to call the attention of my friends and the public in general to the fact that I now am ready to show one of the ever exhibited in this county, bought direct from the factory, in full bundle lots, so you get it only from second hands, no two or three profits coming off it. Of course the consumer pays them all. Sam Jones says it takes a pointer pup nine days to get his eyes open. I have known some people to get their's open in fifteen minutes in a wall paper deal. They thought it was two pieces instead of one, and the border they did not understand, &c. That is always their plea. Remember I am the only paper hanger in the county that carries a stock and don't have the expense of running a store, therefore I have no opposition. If you think I can't save you money, come and see me and bring size of your room, or send size by mail and I will tell you what your job will cost, and send samples and convince you that Gladhill's is the place to save twenty-five cents on a dollar on all Wall Papers.

Finest and Cheapest Lines of WALL PAPER
