JANUARY.

January, bleak and drear,
First arrival of the year,
Named for Janus—Janus who,
Fable says, has faces two;
Pray, is that the reason why
Yours is such a fickle sky?
First you smile, and to us bring
Dreams of the returning spring;
Then, without a sign, you frown,
And the snowflakes hurry down,
Making all the landscape white,
Just as if it blanched with fright.
You obey no word of law;
Teasing all the brooks that run
With the hope of constant sun,
Chaining all their feet at last
Firm in icy fetters fast.
Month of all months most contrary,
Sweet and bitter January!

—Frank Demster Sherman

Not Like Other Men.

There was once a woman who understood her fellow-men very thoroughly, says a writer in Harper's Bazar. This endeared her to many of them, but as she was very particular in her tastes they seldom suited her. Finally, however, she found a man who perfectly suited all her requirements. She then brought to bear upon him all her information concerning his sex, which was great. One day the man's sister called upon her and said: "It is a good thing that you are so strong, for so is he, and he does not like delicate women."

At this the woman smiled. "I should be very foolish were I to act on this hint," said she. "My knowledge of men teaches me that such men invariably prefer women of opposite disposition from themselves. So when he next saw her she told him that she was terribly afraid of mice and could not walk far.

Again his sister called on her and said: "It is a good thing that you understand politics so well, for he is much interested in them, and says that all intelligent women should be, too."

The woman smiled wisely. "I should be more than foolish were I to allow myself to be deceived by this," she said. "When a woman admits that she can master politics then it is all up with her. A man's last claim to superiority is gone, and life would be unendurable to him without that." So when he next saw her she asked him if it were true that the Republicans were better than Democrats and why so many people were betting 16 to 1 on the election.

By and by he stopped calling and she learned to her horror, that he had engaged himself to a woman who had written a pamphlet on the silver question. She herself had given many ideas on this subject to the other woman. Thus she realized that man was peculiar.

This teaches us that things are sometimes what they seem.

Salt and Ashes for Hogs.

One item of feed for hogs which should never be neglected is a good supply of salt and ashes to which they can have access always. Wood ashes can always be had and the hogs should have all they will eat. When not convenient to give ashes, charcoal is a good substitute, and even soft coal will be eaten for want of something better, says an exchange. Hogs are never injured by eating all the ashes they want, but it is not safe to give large amounts of ashes to animals not accustomed to its use. The salt and ashes mixed should be kept in a low box under a shed where it will be protected from rain, and should consist of about two quarts of salt for each bushel of ashes. Many feeders perfer to add a few ounces of copperas to the mixture. Free access to such a mixturo will do much to preserve the health of hogs, and sows which have an abundance of such feed will rarely eat their young.
