About An Extra Session.

During the early days of this week the advocates of an extra session of the Maryland Legislature were in high feather over the apparent assurance that Governor Smith had yielded to their importunities and would issue his proclamation calling the legislators together. For a day or two, however, not much has been said on that side of the question, but the Governor is learning that the project is not favorably regarded by some influential Democrats, and men of eminence in the party are announcing their opposition to the restriction of the suffrage. The Reform League of Baltimore has taken up the matter and is denouncing the movement in a very emphatic manner. Every intelligent citizen knows that the paramount purpose of those who propose and urge the extra session is the promotion of purely partisan interests. The plea for a State census is a mere pretence. Nothing could be gained by subjecting the State to the great expense of such an undertaking, unless, indeed, a system of corrupt padding of the lists were resorted to, and means might be used on the other side to discover and expose such a proceeding.

Something of partisan interest might be gained by gerrymandering the congressional districts, but the SENTINEL has plainly shown that the Republicans cannot possibly secure a majority in the Senate at the next regular session of the Legislature, hence there can be no just apprehension that they contemplate a gerrymander in the interest of the Republican party.

The just apprehension, of honest Democrats as well as Republicans, is that the Legislature, if convened in extra session, will so alter the election law as to destroy the safeguards which now, to a great extent, prevent repeating and false counting of the ballots. No honest man can contemplate a return to the order of things which prevailed from 1875 and earlier, up to the accession to power of the Republicans in 1895, without feeling deep repugnance to any project favorable to such a condition.

Democratic partisans of the extreme type may find, if they succeed in their plans to such an end, that the independent voters, who defeated the party in 1895, will repeat the dose in 1901. The day is past in Maryland, we are glad to believe, when such a saturnalia of fraud as marked the history of the Democratic party under the old regime will be tolerated by the honest men of the organization. Gov. Smith may well pause and reflect before performing an act that will give the opportunity to legislate against honesty and integrity in elections, no matter upon what pretence he may be urged to yield to the views of those who believe that everything is fair in politics.

Two Important Questions.

Shall United States Senators be elected directly by the people, instead of by the present method? Shall the term of President of the United States be extended to six years and those elected to the office be made ineligible for re-election? These are questions which have attracted considerable attention and have caused more or less public discussion. It has been thought that an amendment to the Constitution might be proposed for the action of the States, at no distant day, providing for a change in the manner of electing senators and requiring their election by popular vote. There seems to be a growing sentiment among thoughtful citizens in favor of this plan. So many scandals have occurred in the choice of senators in some States; the improper use of money or of official patronage in influencing the votes of legislators has been so frequently charged, and other accusations of corrupt bargains and practices have been so many times made in connection with the choice of senators by the existing method, that lovers of purity and integrity in politics have been led to feel that almost any change would be an improvement. The SENTINEL has not the space to spare for an elaborate discussion of the question, but believes there is another side to it that is worthy of consideration.

In the first place, under the existing method of choosing senators there is a prospect that occasionally, when a senator shall have been chosen by the employment of corrupt practices, the fact may be discovered and the election nullified by Senatorial action. A few cases of that character have occurred. If elections were by the people there would be small chance for the correction of any wrong in that direction. It is possible for the House of Representatives to inquire into improper practices at an election in a Congressional district, but what chance would there be to investigate frauds at an election extending all over the great State of New York, or of Pensylvania, Ohio, Illinois and others? Such an investigation would be practically impossible.

It is urged as a reason for changing the method that there would be no prolonged vacancies in senatorial representation from any State, several cases of which have recently occurred. Such a reason seems to be without much force. If the Legislature of a State cannot agree upon a senator such State may properly go without representation in the Upper House of Congress until its legislators can be brought to terms in the premises.

The proposition to make the President of the United States ineligible for re-election is an admirable one and should be adopted with as little delay as possible. There are many considerations in favor of such a change, the chief one being the tendency, under the existing plan, of the employment of official patronage to influence a renomination. This alone is sufficient ground for making the President ineligible for a second term. There are other pertinent reasons for such a change, but they need not be recited here. Whether confining the occupant of the Presidential chair to a single term is a good and sufficient reason for extending his tenure office from four to six years is another question. There would seem to be no necessity for such extension, unless it is found in the general opinion that a Presidential campaign is apt to have a disturbing and detrimental effect upon the business interests of the country. To a certain extent this opinion may be correct, but there is also another side to this assumption. The campaign of 1896 furnished an apt illustration of that side of the case. The depression in trade and commerce which prevailed during Mr. Cleveland's second term was lightened by the prospect of McKinley's election after the conventions held in that year. It is true that the possibility of Bryan's election threatened still greater evils than attended Mr. Cleveland's administration; but the business interests had confidence that McKinley would be the choice of the people, and that prospect was sufficient to promote some revival in trade. There was very little business depression during the campaign of 1900, for the simple reason that intelligent business men generally anticipated McKinley's re-election. It may, therefore, be fairly concluded that the risk of exchanging a good administration for a bad one, is about offset by the advantage held out, on the other hand, of substituting a good administration for a bad one.

Looking at the matter in this light, it would appear that, while the President should be restricted to a single term of office, the extension of his tenure is not at all necessary.

A Woman's Crusade.

Mrs. Carrie Nation and other ladies visited several saloons in Whichita, Kansas, on Monday, and crushed the slot machines, show cases, plate glass windows and doors and other property, completely wrecking the establishments. The ladies were arrested but were discharged by the chief of police. As it is a violation of the Constitution of Kansas to sell liquor in that State, it would be reasonable to suppose that infractions of the organic law in that respect would be of a surreptitious character, but the reports of the doings of Mrs. Nation and her companions, apparently indicate that the saloon business is carried on in Wichita without any attempt at concealment. Mrs. Nation declares it to be her purpose to carry on the war against the saloons on the same lines. She lectured at Hutchison, Kansas, on Monday night to an audience that filled the largest church in the place. In the course of her remarks she said:

"You'll hear from me again before long, and it won't be from a lecture platform, either. God intends that I keep up what I have already begun in Wichita, and I'll do it. Wichita isn't the only town in Kansas that has rocks and brickbats."

This sentiment was applauded vigorously, and Mrs. Nation, who had said she was inspired by God, continued: "I will gladly give up my life if need be, while destroying these awful places."

Of course this crusade cannot be continued without eventually ending in the arrest and trial of Mrs. Nation and her associates for the malicious destruction of property, and if the courts shall hold that, notwithstanding the owners of this property were engaged in illicit and unlawful traffic, they are entitled to the protection of the laws of Kansas, it will be reasonable to conclude that prohibition in that State is a practical failure. The saloon keepers of Wichita are not alone in their almost open defiance of the prohibitory section of the Constitution. Other places, of much less magnitude, have numerous joints which are tacitly permitted to carry on their business without being molested by the authorities. It may be held, however, that, if the legally constituted power of the State, or of municipalities where the law is defied by the proprietors of joints, will not suppress such places by legal means, private citizens may resort to such methods as will accomplish that object. This would be an extreme view of the case, to be sure, but, apparently, it embodies the only means by which constitutional prohibition in Kansas can be saved from utter and dismal failure.

Maryland Scholarships.

The Johns Hopkins University offers to young men of Maryland needing pecuniary assistance twenty undergraduate scholarships, in addition to the fifteen Hopkins Scholarships, which will be awarded, as heretofore, to residents of Maryland. The offer is made for the academic year beginning in September, 1901.

These scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition and are tenable for one year. They do not carry exemption from laboratory fees.

The scholarships are for the benefit of all parts of the State, and accordingly not more than half the number will be awarded to residents of the city and county of Baltimore, and not more than one half to those who are now members of the University. The appointing board will consist of the President of the board of Trustees, the President of the University, and the Dean of the Collegiate Department. The usual entrance examinations must be passed by the candidates. Applications, accompanied by testimonials, may be sent prior to May 1, 1901, to the President of the University. Appointments will be made as soon as possible thereafter. Correspondence on the subject is invited, and may be addressed to the president of the University.

DEATH OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

Victoria, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and Empress of India, died at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, at 6.30 P. M., Tuesday. Her oldest son, Albert Edward, has acceded to the throne and issued his proclamation, practically to that effect, on Wednesday. He ascends the throne as Edward VII. The deceased Queen was in her eighty-second year and her reign was one of the longest in the history of the sovereigns of the world, having extended over nearly two-thirds of a century. She leaves about seventy decendants, among whom is the Emperor William of Germany, the son of her oldest daughter. The Queen's death was caused by paralysis, and it is said was hastened by her anxiety and sorrow over the war with the Boers.

Queen Victoria was of mixed English and German blood, her mother having been a German princess. Her husband, the Prince Consort, who died nearly forty years ago, was a German, hence the German blood predominates in the son, who succeeds her. She was generally held to have been a model of virtue and womanly purity and every inch a queen. From every quarter of the globe tributes of respect for her character and expressions of sorrow for her decease and sympathy for her bereaved family and for the English people have attested the high place held by her in the world's esteem.

Editor J. Guest King, of the Annapolis Examiner and formerly editor of the Maryland Gazette, has received an appointment in the Government Printing Office at Washington. Mr. King is secretary of the Republican Editorial Association of Maryland and formerly did the printing for the Court of Appeals.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF A TRACT OF LAND,

In Westminster District, Carroll County, Md.

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Carroll county, sitting as a Court of Equity, passed in cause No. 3842, on the equity docket of said court, wherein Grove O. Easton et al., are plaintiffs, and Charles Easton et als., are defendants, the undersigned, trustee therein appointed to sell the real estate in the proceedings mentioned, will sell at Public Sale, on the premises, on WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6TH, A. D. 1901, at 1 o'clock, P. M., sharp, all that tract of land, containing 2 ACRES, 2 ROODS AND 27 PERCHES, more or less, situate on the Washington and Nicodemus county roads, and about 5 miles from Westminster, improved by a two-story Dwelling House, 18x26 feet, with back building, 16x16 feet, with large Store Room attached, log barn, wagon shed, granary, smoke house and other usual outbuildings. Also a large orchard; never failing well of water at the door; convenient to church and school. This is an excellent stand for doing a good country business in general merchandise. Also, at the same time and place, I will sell all that tract or parcel of land, being the one-half (½) interest in and to 18 Acres, 3 roods and 37 perches, more or less. This land is in a good state of cultivation, all clear, well fenced, fronting on the Westminster county road, 5 miles from Westminster, 2½ of which is now piked. The other 1 interest will be sold at the same time by George L. Stocksdale, also as trustee, thereby selling the entire interest in said 18 Acres, 3 roods and 37 perches, and the same will be sold by the acre. This tract of land lies near the above offered parcel of land, and would make a nice lot for pasture, or farming purposes. For further information, call upon or address George L. Stocksdale, at Westminster, Md.

TERMS OF SALE.—One third in cash on the day of sale or on the ratification of sale by the Court, one-third in one year and the other one-third in two years from the day of sale, the credit payments to be secured by the notes of the purchaser or purchasers, with approved security, bearing interest from the day of sale.
